CAPITOL PLOTTER SHOOTS MORGAN

MAN WHO WOUNDED BANKER IS PROF. MUENTER?

IS FRANK HOLT THE NEW NAME OF MUENTER?

Disappearance of Harvard Teacher After Death of Wife Recalled.

An amazing story last night came to the attention of THE TRIBUNE, which, if true, identifies Frank Holt, the would-be assassin of J. P. Morgan, as Prof. Erich Muenter, formerly a student of the University of Chicago and a delver into medieval mysticism, who in 1906 disappeared from Harvard university, following the mysterious death of his wife.

Although a reward of $1,000 for the apprehension of Muenter was offered at the time, he successfully eluded pursuit, and, according to the story obtained by THE TRIBUNE, appears to have been successful in hiding his past, assuming a new name, acquiring a new family, and obtaining distinction as a scholar in other colleges and universities.

Here Is Story.

The story given to THE TRIBUNE last night seemed to bear the stamp of authority and impressed the reporter who heard it as the story of a man who knows what he is talking about and is sincere in his utterances. The man talked on condition that his name be not used. Here is the bald story as THE TRIBUNE'S informant told it:

"Frank Holt, who shot J. P. Morgan, is the Erich Muenter who took his degree of A. B. at the University of Chicago in 1899 and later fled from Cambridge, Mass., following the death of his wife and has remained a fugitive ever since. There is no doubt about Holt and Muenter being the same. I know it as positively as I know I am sitting here.

"He has kept hidden all these years through a remarkable rehabilitation of himself under the assumed name of Holt.

"Muenter was born in Germany, but since his rehabilitation has claimed to have been born in Texas of German parentage. For a time he taught German in the Harvard school in Chicago. He also taught German in Radcliffe college for women.

Lived on Fifty-seventh Street.

"While in Chicago he lived with his wife and two children at 415 East Fifty-seventh street (old numbering). The wife was a pleasant German-American woman, as I remember her. Muenter's mind ran on sex matters. With others, he formed a secret organization for the study of medieval mysticism.

"His wife was about to give birth to her third child when her death occurred. Muenter ran away from Cambridge with the two children and brought them to Chicago, where he turned them over to Mrs. Muenter's parents. Then, still undetected by the authorities, he went to Mexico.

"He worked for a while in Mexico City as a stenographer. He shaved himself and affected a soft hat instead of the derby he had been in the habit of wearing as Muenter. A reward of $1,000 was offered for his detection, but it never has been claimed. While a fugitive he issued a badly printed review of his case, couched in sarcastic terms, and mailed it to some of his acquaintances.

Passed Texas Examinations.

"Under the name of Holt he showed up at the Agricultural and Mechanical college at College Station, Tex., passed the examinations there, and finally was graduated. He married a classmate in the Texas school and has had three children by her.

"He has also taught German in Vanderbilt university at Nashville, Tenn., and has attended Cornell university, where he obtained his Ph. D. degree.

"He was elected head of the department of German of the Southern Methodist university of Dallas, Tex., and was to begin his work there next fall.

"I always considered him a 'bug,' but to talk with him you would not suspect his eccentricities."

WORLD-WIDE SEARCH FOR MAN

It was in April, 1906, that Muenter was suspected of killing his wife by poisoning her. A world-wide search for the missing man failed to locate him. At the time of the murder he was instructor in the

HOLT MAKES A STATEMENT; SAYS HIS MISSION WAS "TO STOP WAR."

GLEN COVE, L. I., July 3.—Frank Holt's "reasons" for his attack on J. P. Morgan and his description of the occurrence are given in the following statement by him:

"My motive in coming here was to try to force Mr. Morgan to use his influence with the manufacturers of munitions in the United States and with the millionaires who are financing the war loans to have an embargo put on shipments of war munitions so as to relieve the American people from complicity in the death of thousands of our European brothers.

"If Germany should be able to buy munitions here we would, of course, positively refuse to sell to her. The reason that the American people have not as yet stopped the shipments seems to be that we are getting rich out of this traffic; but do we not get enough prosperity out of noncontraband shipments and would it not be better for us to make what money we can without causing the slaughter of thousands of Europeans?

"About a month ago I conceived the idea to see J. P. Morgan and get him to use his influence in stopping the exportation of arms which make you and me responsible for the murder which is going on over there.

"I could not go from manufacturer to manufacturer myself, but I thought that Mr. Morgan's banking connections would make it more easy for him to accomplish this.

"I have not been influenced to do this by anybody else. I think President Wilson's notes were fine, but they did not seem to do anything to stop the war.

"I came down here from New York this morning to put my idea before Mr. Morgan, but I depended upon him to formulate the plan. Of course I did not mean to shoot Mr. Morgan, but I intended to stay there until something was done. I had a stick of dynamite in my pocket; I thought it might come in handy somehow. Some fool has said that I had nitroglycerin in my suit case, but that was only benzine to clean my clothes.

"I went up to the house and got by the butler and walked upstairs. I had my gun in my hand. In the hall on the second floor I met Mr. Morgan. A woman who I took to be his wife preceded him down the hall.

"She screamed and jumped away from where—I don't know exactly where. Mr. Morgan did not give me a chance to say anything. He jumped at me and grappled with me and I fired in the air, thinking to scare him. They tell me I hit him. I don't know, for somebody hit me on the head.

"I hope Mr. Morgan is not badly hurt. I admire Mr. Morgan's courage in grappling with me. If he would only use his courage in the right direction and for the right things he will get somewhere and do something worth while.

"I am very sorry that I had to cause the Morgan family this unpleasantness, but I believe that if Mr. Morgan will put his shoulder to the wheel he could accomplish what I have endeavored to.

"Of course, I did not want to injure Mr. Morgan, as I wanted him to do the work I could not do. I hope that he will do his share, anyhow. We must stop our participation in the killing of Europeans and God will take care of the rest.

"My home is in Dallas, Tex. I have a wife and children and am 40 years old. I was born in this country and so were my father and mother. My ancestors were French and German; it was all mixed up. I received a degree of doctor of philosophy from Cornell."

Holt Confesses He Placed Bomb in Washington

Statement Made to Officials Tells of Making Explosive.

Glen Cove, N. Y., July 3.—Frank Holt, the assailant of J. P. Morgan, the banker, is the man who set the bomb that exploded in the United States capitol at Washington last night.

In a statement made to Justice Luyster and Capt. Thomas Tunney, head of the bomb and anarchist squad of the New York City detective bureau, Holt confessed setting the bomb and described it in detail. As a missile of terror it was said to be unique in the annals of the New York police department.

"I made this bomb," Holt is quoted as having said in his confession, "with three sticks of dynamite, some match heads, and a bottle of sulphuric acid."

Heard His Bomb Explode.

"Pretty slick," commented Capt. Tunney. "I don't see how you did it."

"Well, you see," Holt answered, his eyes brightening, "I had experimented on it before. Not once, you know, but many times. I knew just what I was doing, and just how to do it.

"I really didn't take any chances, for all my observations had been checked up, and I knew when the bomb would go off almost to the minute. In fact, I waited in Washington till I heard it go off. Then I hurried away as fast as I could and caught the train for New York. I didn't have much time, so I had to hurry."

Tells of Making Bomb.

"How did you make the bomb?" he was asked.

"Well," he answered, "I took three sticks of dynamite and bound them together. Then I took my knife and hollowed out a place in one of the sticks. When I had cleaned it out deep enough I put some match heads into the hole—three or four—I don't know exactly how many.

"When the match heads were put in the hole I took a little bottle of sulphuric acid out of my pocket and put a regular cork in the neck. I turned the bottle upside down and fastened the cork in the hole in the dynamite, just above the match heads.

Had Bomb Timed Perfectly.

"You see I had timed the sulphuric acid in my tests before and I knew just how long it would take to eat through the cork and get to the match heads. When the acid reached the match heads it set them on fire and caused the explosion.

"There wasn't any guesswork about it. I knew how much time I had, so I hung around while the acid was eating its way through the cork. I pulled out my watch and said to myself that it ought to be going pretty soon. And, sure enough, it did go pretty soon. Then I hurried away."

Planted Bomb in Afternoon.

According to Holt's confession, he went to Washington from New York yesterday, arriving there about noon. He went to the capitol during the afternoon and set the bomb at 4 o'clock. He had timed the explosion at midnight. After setting the bomb he strolled about Washington for several hours.

In the evening he went to the Union station, a few blocks from the capitol, and waited several hours for the noise of the explosion, which he knew would soon occur.

"Why did you want to blow up the capitol?" Capt. Tunney asked him.

"Well," Holt replied, "I thought that was a good way to bring the attention of the American people to the terrible murders being committed in Europe. But what do you want to ask me that for? I explained the whole thing in my letter to the editor of the Washington Times. I understand my letter was printed today. Well, my reasons are all in that letter."

BANKER'S WIFE RESCUES HIM AT OWN PERIL

Attack on President Said to Have Been Planned by Holt.

BULLETIN.

Glen Cove, N. Y., July 3.—At 11 o'clock tonight it was definitely established that both bullets fired at Mr. Morgan had penetrated his hip and that neither had pierced the abdomen. The first shot struck the right hip and went through in a line almost horizontal, deflecting and slightly downward. The second shot struck nearer the groin and was deflected much more sharply downward. This shot came out of the upper leg.

New York, July 3.—[Special.]—Frank Holt, a crack brained teacher of languages, until recently with Cornell university, obsessed with the idea that God had appointed him to stop the shipment of war supplies to the allies, tried to murder J. P. Morgan this morning after attempting on Friday night to wreck the capitol at Washington with a dynamite bomb.

The New York and Washington police have information which leads them to believe that Holt planned next to go to Cornish, N. H., and attempt to take the life of President Wilson.

FORCES WAY INTO HOME.

Holt forced his way into Mr. Morgan's house on East island, three and a half miles from Glen Cove, L. I., at 9:20 o'clock this morning, drove the butler before him by the menace of a revolver, searched the house until he found Mr. and Mrs. Morgan on the second floor and then, as Mr. and Mrs. Morgan attempted to disarm him, fired two shots into Mr. Morgan's body.

The financier, who, as head of the banking house which is the purchasing agent of the British government, had become an object for Holt's attack, is dangerously but probably not fatally wounded.

This was the opinion, at least, of members of Mr. Morgan's family, of his partners, and of his friends who had heard the report of the surgeons who examined his injuries and who probed successfully for the bullet which entered the abdomen.

SAVED BY WIFE'S BRAVERY.

He owes his life very likely to the courage and quickness of Mrs. Morgan, who, the first to detect Holt lurking in the shadows of the upper hallway, flung herself at the man and so disturbed his aim that he had no opportunity to shoot straight.

Mr. Morgan himself overpowered Holt, and, with the assistance of servants, tied him and trussed him after the Morgan butler, Henry Physick, had thumped him soundly over the head with the first handy weapon available—a lump of coal.

Then Mr. Morgan, after calmly assuring his house guests, the British ambassador and Lady Spring-Rice, who had witnessed the desperate struggle on the second floor landing, that he was not badly hurt, and after telephoning to his mother and to William D. Porter, one of his partners, himself telephoned to Dr. William H. Zabriskie of Glen Cove, simply telling Dr. Zabriskie that he had been shot and asking him to come at once to the house.

STATEMENT MADE BY HOLT.

Holt, who had been roughly handled by the Morgan servants in the business of subduing him and tying him up, was taken first to the jail at Glen Cove, where he was questioned by Justice of the Peace William A. Luyster and by Assistant District Attorney Charles R. Weeks of Nassau county.

To them he made a statement saying his object in calling on Morgan was to induce him to put an end to the supplying of funds or munitions to Europe "so as to relieve the American people from complicity in the deaths of thousands of our European brothers."

He added that he was sorry to have caused "this unpleasantness" to the Morgan family and said he hoped Mr. Morgan would live to stop the traffic in arms.

HOLT IS ARRAIGNED.

While the surgeons in the great house on East Island were working over Mr. Morgan and automobiles carrying the financier's friends and relatives were spinning along the beautiful road from Glen Cove to the Morgan home Holt was being arraigned for assault with intent to kill in the Glen Cove courthouse.

Whether from the effect of the butler's mighty blow or from natural mental and physical weakness, he answered stupidly and had to be coached by Assistant District Attorney Weeks and the justice. He finally pleaded not guilty and was remanded to the jail at Mineola to await further examination at Glen Cove Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

HAD LAID WIDE PLOT.

It was after he was taken to Mineola that Capt. Thomas Tunney of the New York detective bureau, who hurried to Glencove after the Washington police had intimated that Holt probably was the man who tried to wreck the capitol on Friday night, obtained from Holt a confession that he set off the capitol bomb.

From what was gathered by Capt. Tunney, the deliberate purpose of Holt was to kill and terrorize in a campaign to stop or discourage the exportation of war munitions. Every act the man performed was done deliberately, shrewdly, cunningly. He is highly educated, of course, and all the resources of an unusually keen mind were brought to bear in a murderous and destructive purpose.

LIST OF INTENDED VICTIMS.

Not only, it appears, had he planned to blow up the capitol at Washington, to kill Mr. Morgan, and, presumably to assassinate President Wilson, but he had procured a list of members of Mr. Morgan's family. A scrap of paper was found in his pocket which bore these names and addresses:

Junius Spencer Morgan, Camp Uncas.
Jane Norton Drew.
Frances Tracy.
Henry Sturges.

Junius Spencer Morgan is the son of J. P. Morgan. Jane Norton Drew was the maiden name of Mrs. J. P. Morgan, Frances Tracy is a close relative. Henry Sturges is a nephew of J. P. Morgan. The only inference that could be drawn by Capt. Tunney and the Glen Cove police was that Holt had made a death list and had planned to kill these members of the Morgan family as well as Mr. Morgan himself.

MAN OF SINGULAR APPEARANCE

Holt is a man of singular appearance, so much so that possibly he would be singled out of any crowd. He gave his age as 40, but he looks, if anything, to be slightly younger. He is tall, about 5 feet 11 inches, and so thin as to seem almost emaciated. For all of his height, he weighs less than 150 pounds. He stoops somewhat and his long, thin head juts forward, making him seem to peer curiously as he walks or talks.

The long, thin head carries a high forehead, over which there is a heavy growth of dark hair, which is of fine quality and grows long. His eyes are dark and somber. The man looks as if he smiles seldom and has little sense of humor. His nose is extraordinarily long and thin and curves slightly above a large mouth whose lips are thin and hard set. The chin is small, receding, and of the type usually described as effeminate.

WAS BORN IN WISCONSIN.

By his own account and from what was learned in other ways Holt was born in Wisconsin and settled in Dallas, Tex., where, at 101 Marseilles street, he has a wife and two children. He attended Cornell university and took the degree of Ph. D. there in 1914. For the last year he has been an instructor of German in the department of languages.

He admits that since the war started he has taken a furious interest in the matter of sending arms and ammunition to the powers that are arrayed against Germany. He said this evening that before coming to New York he had written letters to an Ithaca newspaper protesting against "such unfairness to Germany."

He told Assistant District Attorney Weeks and the newspaper men that he came to New York from Ithaca about ten days ago and registered at the Mills hotel No. 3, at Seventh avenue and Thirty-sixth street.

LEARN OF CAPITOL PLOT.

He would have had the authorities believe today that he had never been out of New York since arriving at the Mills hotel, but it was ascertained that he had not been at the hotel on Friday or Friday night, and this discovery led to his confession that he had gone to Washington to explode the bomb which destroyed part of the senate wing.

Encouraged possibly by his ability to set off a bomb in the capitol and escape arrest or detection, he returned to New York early this morning and took the first available train to Glen Cove. This train arrived at Glen Cove at 8:53 a. m.

The instant Holt stepped on to the platform several of the professional chauffeurs who let their automobile hacks to visitors recognized him as the same man who had visited Glen Cove Thursday afternoon last, and who had been driven to the Morgan grounds on East island by Matthew Kramer, a chauffeur, who works for Myron F. Ford the driver who took Holt to the Morgan home this morning.

Surveyed Ground Closely.

On Thursday, Kramer said, Holt approached him and asked to be driven to the J. P. Morgan house. He remarked casually that he was a visitor interested in handsome country places, and wanted to see how fine Mr. Morgan's house was. Kramer took him as far as the entrance gate, where Holt stepped out, glanced toward the front of the house and over the grounds, and then asked to be carried back to the depot.

It is certain that he took the opportunity in this and other ways to familiarize himself in every way possible with the lay of the grounds, and with the identity of such of Mr. Morgan's servants as he might expect to meet. He knew Mr. Morgan's chauffeur, Hiram Campbell, by sight, and was on the lookout for Campbell this morning. Others of the servants he had inspected carefully.

Fred Ford, proprietor of the line of motor cars which serves Glen Cove visitors, was standing by the little car which bears a name like his own, when Holt slouched up to him this morning and asked to be driven to the Morgan home. Ford noticed that the man was well dressed, though not particularly neat.

"Might Meet Morgan Car."

Before the car started for East Island Holt asked Ford if he might sit in the driver's seat.

"I can see the country better if I sit with you," he remarked, "besides, I believe that Mr. Morgan is starting for New York City this morning, and I don't know whether he intends to use his yacht, the Corsair, or go by train. Probably he will go by train. Do you know Hiram Campbell, Mr. Morgan's chauffeur?"

Ford replied that he knew Campbell well.

"That's good," said Holt. "We may meet Mr. Morgan's automobile along the road. If we do, I want you to throw my suitcase into Mr. Morgan's car, and I will jump in myself. I'm an old friend of Mr. Morgan's, and he won't think anything of it. Old friends are allowed unusual privileges."

Chauffeur Is Suspicious.

That placed in Ford's mind the first faint suspicion that his passenger was a person who needed watching. The driver could not do anything precipitate. He had nothing to go on.

The car turned from the Glen Cove road past the William H. Harkness estate on West island, which used to be owned by Charles A. Dana, and turned on the long concrete bridge which spans the estuary from the sound, Dosoris pond, an extent of shallow water and swampy ground that cuts the Morgan estate on Peacock point, East island, from the mainland.

Within plain sight was the estate of George F. Baker, to the east of Mr. Morgan's; beyond the hills to the south was the Percy Chubb place, and the car had just spun through the beautiful extent of ground held by the Pratt family of Brooklyn.

Gets "Card" from Suitcase.

As the motor car began to cross the bridge, which was being repaired, and slowed down to make the narrow temporary roadway, Holt climbed back into the tonneau, saying to Ford:

"I expect I had better get a card out of my suitcase. The servants might require one."

He opened the brown suitcase which he had brought from New York and extracted several articles. Ford was so busy with the management of his car in the slender bridge roadway that he did not observe exactly what Holt took from the case. He rather thought later that Holt had used the moment to remove two revolvers and possibly the sticks of dynamite that subsequently were found on his person. At any rate, he found what he sought, regained his place on the driver's seat, and told Ford to continue on to a place near the front entrance of the house.

Draws Revolver on Butler.

The automobile was not stopped at the lodge of Supt. McGregor and there were no servants on the lawns. Ford shut off the power and glanced inquiringly at his fare. He noticed, he says, that Holt's eyes were shining like a cat's in the dark. Only the man's eyes, however, revealed the excitement in him. His muscles were under perfect control. He even smiled slightly as he stepped lightly from the car and walked the short distance to the main entrance of Mr. Morgan's house.

Ford watched him closely—still impressed by the notion that the man was queer—and saw him ring the bell. Then as Henry Physick, the Morgan butler, answered the ring and half opened the door the automobile driver saw something rise that made him release a shout of alarm and sent him scurrying from the car to the Morgan garage calling for help.

He saw that Holt had drawn a revolver from the side pocket of his coat and that he was pressing the muzzle of the revolver against the butler's stomach.

House Party at Breakfast.

That was all that Ford saw of the preliminaries of the attack. The rest is known from what Holt himself confessed to Justice Luyster and the assistant district attorney, what the butler, a valet, and a nurse saw, and from what Mrs. Morgan, whose part was the bravest and coolest, told friends of Mr. Morgan.

At the moment Holt's finger pressed the bell and the Morgan butler hastened to the door, Mr. and Mrs. Morgan were at breakfast with Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, the British ambassador, Lady Rice, and other house guests. The breakfast room is on the east side of the house and a considerable distance from the main entrance. Neither the Morgans nor the guests were at first disturbed by the appearance of Holt at the front door. Holt spoke in a low tone, but one that was deadly in its intensity and purpose.

Heir to House of Morgan and His Bride of Few Weeks.

MR. AND MRS. JUNIUS MORGAN.

The instant the butler swung open the door he said:

"I want to see Mr. Morgan."

"What is your business with Mr. Morgan?" asked Physick.

"Mr. Morgan's Old Friend."

"I am an old friend," said Holt, easily. "He will be glad to see me. I want to talk about a matter of tremendous interest to himself."

"But," said Physick, "you will have to tell me the nature of your business. Give me your card and I will take it to Mr. Morgan."

Holt handed the butler the card he had taken from the suitcase. It bore this inscription:

"Summer Society Directory."

In the lower left hand corner was printed:

"Represented by Thomas C. Lester."

Physick fingered the card doubtfully. Like Ford, he grew suspicious. There was something abnormal about Holt, something that put people on their guard. The butler attempted once more to parry:

"Won't you please state your business with Mr. Morgan before I take the card?"

Butler Thinks Quickly.

Holt delayed no longer over amenities. He snatched the revolver out of his coat pocket as Ford, waiting in the car, saw, jammed it against the butler's body, and rapidly forced the butler back into the hall.

"Where is Morgan?" Holt demanded, his eyes roving over the hall, his ear intent to catch the sound of voices.

Physick was frightened. He said so later. But he was plucky to the bone. He backed away from the gaunt man, whose eyes were gleaming, and said loudly—loudly, in the hope that Mr. Morgan would hear him:

"He is in the library—in the library."

It was a quick notion the butler conceived and one of real strategical worth. The library was as far as possible from the room in which the Morgans were breakfasting with the Spring-Rices and their other guests. If he could get this dangerous person into the library and slam the door (such was his plan) there would be time to alarm the house and trap the visitor.

Calls Out in Warning.

For a few seconds Holt was deceived. He gave a quick glance at Physick, whom he was still covering with a steady pistol, and then he moved quickly as a cat to the library door. As the bad luck of the moment had it, the door was wide open. Holt saw instantly that the butler had not told the truth. He began to sidle down the main hall toward the breakfast room.

Although he knew that he might be shot dead for his boldness, Physick suddenly shouted—screamed, rather:

"Mr. Morgan, upstairs! Mr. Morgan, upstairs!"

It was the last chance to trick the assassin.

It was the butler's hope that Mr. Morgan could get safely upstairs before the man with the revolver realized where his intended victim was, and that help could be summoned.

The butler's cry paralyzed the breakfast gathering for a second. Without having the slightest idea what was wrong, and supposing only that some person on an upper floor had come to harm, Mr. Morgan rose hastily, with an apology to his guests, and rapidly climbed the rear staircase. He reached the second floor and moved along the hallway, still seeking the cause of the trouble.

Mrs. Morgan Jumps Ahead.

Before he had started to walk along the hallway Mrs. Morgan, alarmed and apprehensive, joined him. As she neared her husband's side, Holt, who had climbed the front stairway a second or two after Mr. Morgan reached the upper floor, came into their view.

As Holt went noiselessly forward over the thick carpeting Mr. Morgan was turned away from his attacker. But Mrs. Morgan saw him instantly. She saw, too, that he carried a pistol in each hand. As he neared Mr. Morgan, and was perhaps less than six feet from him, Mrs. Morgan leaped forward and literally flung herself at him. She tried to clasp his arms to his side. It is perhaps a miracle that the man didn't shoot in that instant.

Mr. Morgan gave a shout and jumped at Holt. He is a big man, is J. P. Morgan, considerably more than six feet tall and very powerfully built. He drove Holt with all of the force of his great body and Holt went down like a shot.

Holt Fires Both Pistols.

Mr. Morgan, with a heave of his elbow, cast Mrs. Morgan out of harm's way, then swung himself along the floor toward Holt, who was rising to his feet. They struggled together to an upright position and at that moment Holt fired both pistols. His arms had been forced downward and the bullets traveled on a downward slant. One entered Mr. Morgan's abdomen in the region described by surgeons as the right quadrant of the abdomen, and ranged downward and backward until it came to rest at a point near the spine.

According to reports from the Morgan house tonight, Dr. A. N. Lyle, with Dr. J. W. Markoe, for years the Morgan family physician, probed successfully for the bullet this afternoon and removed it.

The second missile struck Mr. Morgan in the thigh, close to the abdomen, and, traveling downward, passed out at the back of the right leg. From this wound little danger was feared, unless from possible blood poisoning.

Guests Rush to Scene.

The double report and the outcries had alarmed Mr. Morgan's guests and they had hurried upstairs from the breakfast room. Ambassador Spring-Rice and Lady Spring-Rice were witnesses, it was said, of the overpowering of Holt.

Most of this Morgan attended to very effectually himself, although twice wounded. He threw his weight of 220 pounds or so on the struggling man and held him down. Mrs. Morgan snatched from Holt's hand one of the revolvers, and Rosalie McCabe, a nurse, seized the other. Mr. Morgan held the man while servants ran for ropes.

Physick, the butler, had done his part in subduing Holt. At the moment the man seemed about to wriggle from Mr. Morgan's grasp, Physick, who had snatched up a lump of coal from downstairs, hammered Holt over the head with it. The blow stunned Holt and rapidly raised on the right side of his head, above the temple, a lump the size of an apple. Holt also received several bruises and cuts on the head in the short and desperate struggle.

Morgan Sends Phone Calls.

Mr. Morgan rose from Holt and turned him over to the servants. They trussed him neatly and rolled him into a corner to await the coming of the police.

It was a minute or two before Mrs. Morgan and the guests were aware that Mr. Morgan had been shot. At first he gave no indication that he had been seriously wounded. He smilingly reassured Mrs. Morgan and their friends. Then he walked to a telephone and called up Dr William H. Zabriskie at Glen Cove. When the doctor answered Mr. Morgan said in an ordinary tone:

"Dr. Zabriskie, I have been shot. Will you come here at once, please?"

At the insistence of Mrs. Morgan and others he consented to lie down, but not until he had telephoned to one of his partners, William H. Porter, and had seen to it that a message went to his mother, Mrs. Pierpont Morgan, at Fort Montgomery. They were quieting, reassuring messages. They said merely that Mr. Morgan had been slightly wounded.

Probe for One Bullet.

Dr. Zabriskie got to East Island as rapidly as his car could make the journey from the village. He made a hasty examination of the wounds, dressed them and watched Mr. Morgan's pulse and general condition. He remained by the bedside until the arrival of Dr. Lyle, one of the most prominent surgeons of New York, and Dr. Markoe, who has been for many years the Morgan family physician.

These and other doctors and surgeons held a consultation and decided, according to such information as was obtainable from the Morgan home tonight, that it would be safe to probe for the bullet that had lodged near the back. After the operation Mr. Morgan's splendid vitality enabled him to bear up under the shock; he was resting easily and in the late afternoon he fell into a refreshing sleep.

One of the first of Mr. Morgan's associates to arrive from New York was Dwight W. Morrow, the youngest of Mr. Morgan's partners. Others who were in the house and had a part in meeting the situation were Willard D. Straight, William Pierson Hamilton, Mr. Morgan's brother-in-law, and George F. Baker Jr. Clarence H. Mackay drove to the Morgan home from Roslyn as soon as he heard the news and remained there for a short time. Mr. and Mrs. Herbert L. Satterlee arrived by motor car about 3 p. m.

All Excluded from Grounds.

Shortly after the shooting all visitors except members of the family, close friends, and physicians were excluded from the Morgan grounds. This was absolutely necessary because of the rush of the curious from Glen Cove and neighboring villages, and even from New York City. By noon there was a considerable crowd at the bridge entrance leading to East Island. Intruders were kept back by guards, who were pleasant spoken but inflexible.

The surgeons were issuing bulletins. The bulletin issued at 4 p. m. was distinctly reassuring to inquirers. It read:

"An examination of Mr. Morgan discloses that there are two bullet wounds in the region of his right hip. There are no unfavorable symptoms, and he is resting easily.

H. W LYLE.

"J. W. MARKOE."

Holt a Walking Arsenal.

Those interested in the rapid investigation of the crime turned again to Holt, his movements, and his belongings as soon as it was certain that Mr. Morgan bid fair to survive his injuries. They were impressed first of all by the fact that this man, in whose brain buzzed the delusion that Providence had directed him to stop the sale of munitions, went to Mr. Morgan's house a walking arsenal. He was dangerous under any conditions.

Not only did he carry two loaded revolvers and a supply of cartridges but he had with him three sticks of dynamite. Each stick was eight inches long and an inch and a half thick.

One of these was in Holt's pocket as he was flung to the floor by Mr. Morgan. Two other sticks were found on the lawn, where, presumably, he had dropped them in his haste to enter the house.

Chauffeur Brings Officers.

It is time for Myron Ford, the chauffeur, to reënter the story. He had done his best at the moment. When Holt forced his way into the Morgan house, pistol pressed against the butler, Ford, removing the sparking plug from his car so that Holt could not make a quick escape, ran to the garage and summoned help.

He called Hiram Campbell and others, who rushed into the house and up the stairs, but were only in time to complete the roping and strapping of Holt. Then Ford lit out for Glen Cove and the police. He found Theodore Campbell, a deputy sheriff, dozing at the courthouse, somnolent, as most Glen Covers are apt to be on a hot and heavy day. He stirred Theodore to activity with one sentence:

"J. P. Morgan has been shot by a crazy man! Climb in!"

Theodore Campbell climbed in and so did Frank McCahill, a deputy sheriff. They drove out to East Island. At the Morgan house McCahill formally placed Holt under arrest for attempted murder. The man wouldn't talk much then. He was still dazed from the terrific blow given by the butler.

Arraignment of Holt.

When McCahill reached the Glen Cove jail with his prisoner, Justice of the Peace William A. Luyster was summoned. Holt was led in by Deputy Sheriff Frank McCahill. With McCahill and Assistant District Attorney Weeks he stood in front of the justice's bench. For a moment he tried to stand upright. Presently, and before the justice began reading the formal complaint, he slumped sideways and would have fallen had not McCahill's strong arms caught and supported him. Justice Luyster read the complaint slowly and Holt listened dully at first, then with quickened interest.

Holt stirred, taking a step forward and raising a hand in protest.

"You'll have to take that part about the killing out of there," he said. "Take that out."

Did Not Intend Murder.

Justice Luyster, unheeding, continued to read on.

"You know I did not intend to kill Mr. Morgan," protested Holt again, "you know better than that. That part about the killing ought to be taken out of that paper."

"Holt," said Justice Luyster, "it is my duty to acquaint you with your rights. You can ask for immediate examination or you can waive examination and be held for the grand jury. Which do you say?"

"Do you plead guilty or not guilty?" asked the justice.

Still there was no response from the prisoner. Then Assistant District Attorney Weeks took a hand.

"I think," he said, "that from what this man has told me he desires to plead not guilty and to have his examination postponed for a short time."

Holt nodded dull agreement and Justice Luyster adjourned the hearing until 2 p. m. on July 7.

WIFE TRIES TO SHIELD MORGAN FROM ASSAILANT

She Leaps at Man, but Husband Brushes Her Aside; Then Shot Comes.

New York, July 3.—[Special.]—Here is the story of the shooting as told by Mrs. J. P. Morgan to a group of friends who called to offer sympathy:

"We were with Sir Cecil and Lady Spring-Rice and other guests at breakfast when the bell rang and the butler left to answer it. In a few moments we heard him cry, 'Mr. Morgan, Mr. Morgan, upstairs, quick!' Instantly Mr. Morgan jumped up and started upstairs, and I with him. It was his idea and mine that something was wrong upstairs.

"Just what, we did not know. It was not our idea that there was any danger in the hall that the butler was trying to get Mr. Morgan away from. Our idea, I think, was that there might be a fire up there.

"We got upstairs and went through room after room and everything was all right until we came out into the front hallway.

Mrs. Morgan Tackles Assailant.

"I was out first and I saw the fellow coming up the stairs, a pistol in either hand. Then I knew that he was a lunatic or worse, intent on murdering Jack, and I screamed and jumped at him. Mr. Morgan jumped at the same time and brushed me to one side just as the man shot. Mr. Morgan landed upon him and they went to the floor together.

"I think I got one of the revolvers. Mr. Morgan got the other and was trying to subdue him when the servants and others came in. The butler had something in his hand with which he hit the fellow and then he was not so troublesome to handle. For a little man he was very active and strong. Then the servants came and tied the fellow up with trunk straps and ropes.

Shows He's War Crank.

"I asked him why he wanted to kill Mr. Morgan. He said he did not want to kill Mr. Morgan, but that he did want him to stop sending ammunition to the allies and stop murdering able bodied men.

"The first that I knew that Mr. Morgan was hurt was when he called Dr. Zabriskie's number and said he had been hit.

"After the doctors came I asked the butler what had happened. He said the man had given him a card and that when he saw that it was no one that Mr. Morgan would want to see at the house anyway he told him to wait and he pushed the pistol against him and forced his way into the hall. The butler shrewdly tried to get him into the library and risked his own life to get a chance to warn Mr. Morgan.

Morgan Tries to Shield Wife.

"As he came up the stairs at us he said something. It sounded like 'Want to see you, Mr. Morgan.' Mr. Morgan made no answer to that, but jumped for him. As the fellow was on the floor trying to wrestle his way out he was talking, but I could not make out what he was saying. I guess I was too excited. Then the police came and took the fellow away.

"Mr. Morgan was very cool through the whole thing. His idea seemed to be to save me from harm."

NEWS OF ATTACK ON MORGAN DOES NOT UPSET STOCK LIST

New York, July 3.—[Special.]—With attendance on the floor of the exchange, in the commission houses, and in the street generally cut down to the minimum, everything pointed to a quiet day in the stock market.

The attempt upon the life of J. P. Morgan supplied an incentive to activity that was otherwise lacking. But even with this and the influence of a further fall in St. Paul stock the market was a narrow and restricted one.

From the time the news of the attack upon Mr. Morgan was received it was, of course, the dominant factor. Before this, however, the market had already been upset by renewed weakness in St Paul stock, which was communicated to other stocks in the same group, and had an unfavorable effect generally. This weakness, plus professional operations for the fall, plus scattered selling from small speculators for the advance inspired by a natural timidity to hold stocks over the holiday, caused small but general losses throughout the active list.

No Trace of Panic.

The Morgan incident accentuated the selling movement, especially from the professionals, and the declines were in most cases increased. But that was all. There was no trace of panic. Prices, on the contrary, held with remarkable steadiness, all things considered. A fair rally occurred before the close, although some trace of nervousness remained.

Undoubtedly the absence of excitement over the sensational news of the day resulted from the fact that the first reports that Mr. Morgan had been shot were accompanied with the information that the wounds were not of a serious nature. This took the sting out of the bad news.

Nevertheless, it must be admitted that the action of the market gave evidence of no little underlying strength.

Latest of Many Strains.

An overextended position on the long side could hardly have taken the news so calmly. The stock market has been subjected to more than one severe test during the last week, and has acquitted itself well. Whatever may happen next week, it is at least reassuring that the speculative position is probably in good shape.

The weakness in St. Paul was still without any specific explanation. It is significant, however, that the decline has been maintained and that stocks of similar character are showing a tendency to decline in sympathy. That disposes of the theory that the fall was the result of a single large selling order being suddenly thrown upon the market to the accompaniment of heavy short selling.

Only a short time ago he returned from London, where he was reported to have completed arrangements for establishing in the United States gigantic credits for the allies for great war contracts.

Mr. Morgan recently has been giving much of his personal attention to the enormous contracts held by his firm for the purchase of war supplies in this country for the allies. He has made several trips to Europe since the war began last summer. The exact process through which the allies' contracts have been handled has not been made public, but the Morgan firm apparently has been subletting the great contracts.

The deal as a whole is looked upon in many quarters as the greatest that any American banking firm ever undertook.

Besides heading the great New York firm, Morgan is the head of the London firm of Morgan, Grenfell & Co., the English banking corporation affiliated with Morgan interests here. Among other positions he holds are those of trustee of the New York Trade school and governor of the Peabody fund of London.

Morgan is 48 years old. He was born in New York in 1867, and was graduated from Harvard in 1889, entering the services of Morgan & Co. immediately upon graduation. He was married in 1890 to Miss Jane Norton Crew.

Morgan, like his father, the first J. Pierpont Morgan, moves as a silent figure among great international financiers. He has all his father's aversion to publicity, and has consistently avoided newspaper interviews.

The physical appearance, the dominating facial features, and heavy eyebrows of the late J. P. Morgan are repeated in the son. The younger Morgan has become noted, though to a lesser degree than his father, for the brusqueness of his speech.

Like his son, Junius Spencer Morgan, who was recently married to Miss Louise Converse of Boston, Mr. Morgan found his life partner among the Boston girls of his college acquaintances. Father and son married into families noted for their culture rather than their money.

Mr. Morgan shunned society as a young man until his position in London forced him more or less into social prominence. Club life never appealed to him, although he is a member of the Metropolitan, Union, University, Racquet and Tennis, Brook, Century, New York Yacht, and Harvard clubs. There are four children in the Morgan family—Junius Spencer, Jane Norton, Frances Tracy, and Henry Sturgis Morgan.

Before their residence in London the family lived unpretentiously in a rented cottage at New Rochelle and had no town house. Later they established the home at 231 Madison avenue and the country place near Glen Cove. They maintain in London a town house at 13 and 14 Prince's gate, which is devoted now to war relief work.

IS FRANK HOLT NAME OF MUENTER?

German department of Harvard university.

Mrs. Muenter's body was brought to Chicago for burial and taken directly to the residence of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Moritz Kremlis at 479 Fullerton avenue. At the husband's request the body was taken to Graceland and cremated, the ashes being buried at Rosehill.

Faith Cult Adherents.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Muenter were adherents of the faith cure cult and when her second child was born April 6, 1906, there were no physicians present. The birth was normal and she was apparently in a normal condition under the circumstances.

Eight days later she was in a critical state and a physician was summoned. April 16 Mrs. Muenter died, only her husband being at her bedside.

Suspicion was first aroused by the undertaker and he summoned the Cambridge medical examiner, who held an autopsy, but did not think at the time there was any reason for suspecting foul play. The stomach and internal organs were sent to Prof. Whitney of Harvard for analysis and Muenter was allowed to leave for Chicago with the body.

Traces of Arsenic.

Dr. Whitney of Harvard, in the meantime, completed his analysis, finding marked traces of arsenical poisoning. On this information a warrant was issued for Muenter charging him with murder and the Chicago police were notified to hold him. He had disappeared.

Mrs. Muenter taught school in Chicago after she was married to support the family while her husband prepared himself for higher work in the universities. They were married in 1902. He was graduated from the University of Chicago in 1899, later going to Harvard, where he was an instructor in three elementary German courses, did some private tutoring, and also was a candidate for a Ph. D. degree, preparing a thesis on "Insanity in German Romantic Literature."

Before his wife's death Muenter plainly was overworked. Afterward he wrote several letters which indicated his mind probably was unbalanced.

Muenter now would be 44 years old. At one time he was a German instructor in the University of Kansas at Lawrence, and for two years at the time of the murder he had been at Harvard. His sister, Bertha C. Muenter, was a teacher in the Hendricks school at the time.

Born in Germany.

Muenter was born in Germany, and came to this country twenty-five years ago. He was described at the time as follows:

"Age, 35 years; height, 5 feet 9 or 10 inches; weight, about 150 pounds; florid complexion, dark hair, long face, slanting forehead, full dark Vandyke beard and mustache, loose jointed walker."

Muenter went to Harvard in 1904, primarily to study for the degree of Ph. D. and for a course in German philology. He received an appointment as instructor in elementary German.

From the first Muenter proved to be an indefatigable worker. For a year his wife was in Chicago teaching school. The summer before the murder he remained at Cambridge, studying and tutoring, and evidently was anxious to earn all he could to support his family and augment his intermittent salary and the $900 he received as an instructor.

NEW YORK STAATS-ZEITUNG CONDEMNS MORGAN ATTACK.

Declares Plotter-Assassin Undoubtedly Is Insane—Holds Race Carries No Weight.

New York, July 3.—[Special.]—The Staats Zeitung will say tomorrow morning under the caption, "The Confusion of the Minds":

"The most ghastly thing about this terrible war is the confusion of the minds which it causes. The smell of blood spreads from the battlefields over the whole earth and mounts to the head. The poison squirted out by slander and libel trickles into the brains.

"It is the confusion of the minds that must be made responsible for the plotting of the plan against the life of John Pierpont Morgan and the attempted destruction of the capitol in Washington. It is insanity that carried out these plots. In the condemnation of these deeds the American nation will find itself united with the entire world.

"And in the judgment of the deed and its motives the question of race and descent of the culprit will have no weight whatever.

"For only criminal unscrupulousness could manufacture a 'conspiracy' out of the deeds of a manifestly insane man. To do so would constitute the greatest crime.

"In the consideration of the deed any business policy of the banking house of Morgan & Co. must be eliminated. The congratulations for the head of the firm for having a comparatively easy escape from such a great danger comes from the sincerity and sympathy of all.

"However, the blame for these acts of an insane man must be laid at the door of those who caused the confusion and the pollution of the minds."

MORGAN ORDERS BEDSIDE PHONE; GREETS MOTHER

Tragedy Upsets Parent Till Son Reassures Her That Injuries Are Slight.

Highland Falls, N. Y., July 3.—[Special.]—News of the shooting of J. Pierpont Morgan was conveyed to his mother, Mrs. J. P. Morgan Sr., at her country home here soon after noon today in a telegram from the wounded financier's family.

Miss Anne Morgan, her daughter, who came up from the city to spend the Fourth, was preparing to go motoring when a servant told her the contents of the telegram. It explained that Mr. Morgan had been shot, but that he was only slightly wounded.

The servants carried the news to Mrs. Morgan, whom it greatly upset. She insisted on hearing more about her son. Servants got his Glen Cove home on the telephone and were assured that his condition was not serious.

Mother Gets Hourly Reports.

Mrs. Morgan continued to insist that she hear frequently from her son's bedside, and every hour telephone bulletins were communicated to her.

To allay his mother's anxiety, Mr. Morgan had an extension telephone brought to his bedside and assured her that she need not worry.

Late in the afternoon Miss Morgan went motoring to escape the heat, but her mother remained at home. She was bearing up well under the strain this evening. Servants said she would remain with her daughter in the country over night. Miss Morgan, the expectation was, would go to Glen Cove tomorrow and see her brother.

Commotion Among Servants.

The telegram caused a commotion on the Morgan estate. Mrs. Morgan's maids quickly informed the other servants in the house and they in turn notified the gardeners and other outside hands. In a few minutes the news had reached the servants' families and the shooting was soon the chief topic of conversation.

Morgan, who has spent many summers here, on his parents' estate, is popular with the village folk, and messages of sympathy were frequently sent to the Morgan homestead.

PRESIDENT TELLS REGRET OVER ATTACK UPON MORGAN.

Wilson Also Expresses Sorrow at Effort Made to Blow Up Part of Capitol.

Cornish, N. H., July 3.—President Wilson heard with regret today of the shooting of J. P. Morgan on Long island and of the bomb explosion in the capitol building at Washington. He has known Mr. Morgan for some time and expressed pleasure tonight when told that attending physicians had said that the financier's wounds were not expected to prove serious.

The shooting of Mr. Morgan and the explosion in the capitol were the chief topics of discussion about Harlakenden house tonight. The president was informed early of the confession of the man who had shot Mr. Morgan that he had also placed the bomb in the capitol.

Late in the day Mr. Wilson took the most difficult automobile ride of his present trip to New England. Misdirected by a farmer, he rode across a mountain and over very bad roads for a distance of 100 miles. With him were Miss Helen Woodrow Bones, his cousin; Mrs. Norman Galt of Washington, and Dr. Cary T. Grayson. The president plans to spend Independence day very quietly.

Increase of President Wilson's bodyguard of secret service men was decided on tonight as an extra precaution. As an additional precaution it was also decided tonight that the president will not go to church tomorrow.

U. S. WILL KEEP STERNER GUARD AGAINST CRANKS

Capital Officials Take Steps to Prevent Any More Bomb Explosions.

Washington, D. C. July 3.—[Special.]—Officials of Washington tonight are endeavoring to prevent another such outrage as the attempt to blow up the senate wing of the capitol, which occurred just before midnight last night.

The number of guards around all of the government buildings has been greatly increased. The guardsmen have been ordered to keep awake and to keep moving and also to arrest all persons who appear to have no business about the buildings. Throughout the day vigorous searches were prosecuted in an effort to make certain that no more infernal machines are concealed anywhere in this city. Particular attention was given to the search at the White House, for, although President Wilson is out of the city, the officials deemed it wise to take absolutely no chances there.

Other Outrages Are Feared.

Police officials are inclined to fear a wave of crank hysteria throughout the country.

That further attacks may be made on prominent public men as well as financiers and business men is believed to be not improbable. The whole government secret service force will be thrown into the battle to prevent such occurrences.

No one in Washington seriously believes that either the attack on Morgan or the attempt to destroy the capitol was the result of any organized propaganda.

The generally accepted opinion of officials that the explosion was caused by a bomb placed in the senate wing by a crank received confirmation when news came from Glen Cove, L. I., that Frank Holt, the assailant of J. Pierpont Morgan, had admitted that it was he who placed the bomb in the capitol.

Confession of Holt Believed.

The confession of Holt is believed by the Washington police. The local police have not, however, given up their determination to ascertain all the facts in regard to this crime, and tonight they were busy with a large force trying to trace Holt's movements while he was in Washington.

The Washington police also believe now that Holt is the author of letters which were received by two Washington newspapers this morning and which were signed "R. Pearce." These letters indicate on their face that the writer was the man who made the attempt to blow up the senate wing of the capitol. The letters were postmarked at 10 o'clock last night, two hours before the explosion occurred, yet both contain references to that crime.

Text of One of Letters.

One of these letters reads:

"Unusual times and circumstances call for unusual means. In connection with the senate affair, would it not be well to stop and consider what we are doing?

"We stand for peace and good will to all men, and yet, while our European brethren are madly setting out to kill one another, we edge them on and furnish them more effective means of murder.

"We get rich by exportation of explosives, but ought we to enrich ourselves when it means the untold suffering and death of millions of our brethren and their widows and orphans?

"(By the way, don't put this on the Germans or on Bryan. I am an old fashioned American with a conscience, if it is not a sin to have a conscience.)

Condemns "Blood Money."

"We are within the international law when we make this blood money, but are we also within the moral law—the law of peace, or of love, or of Christ, or whatever else a Christian nation may call it? Are we within reason? Our children have to live after us.

"Europe helped and encouraged the Balkans in their bestial war and it reaped the whirlwind. Can't we learn wisdom?

"Is it right to supply an insane asylum with explosives or give them to children? We even prevent our own children to kill and maim themselves at the rate of 200 dead and 5,000 maimed on the glorious Fourth. How much more should we not hesitate to furnish strangers—and they mad? Will our explosives not become boomerangs? If we are willing to disregard our ideals for a dollar will they hesitate some day when they get the chance."

From the date of the letter—June 1st—the Washington police believe that Holt, or Pearce as he signed himself, had been planning for more than a month to blow up some government building and had prepared the letter before he had decided which one he would select. They believe the word "senate" was written in after the explosive had been laid in the reception room.

The remarkable celerity with which Holt carried out his nefarious plans was at first almost unbelievable to the Washington police, but upon investigation they are convinced that he could have planted his explosive in Washington, traveled 350 miles, and shot Mr. Morgan, all within nine or ten hours.

Planted Bomb in Evening.

The belief of the Washington detectives is that Holt planted his explosive in the senate reception room probably late Friday afternoon or early in the evening, with a time fuse or time clock attached. They believe that he waited around to see the result of the explosion, then hurried to the train, and started for Glen Cove on the second step in his plan.

The Union station is only a block or two from the capitol. The explosion occurred at 11:40 o'clock, and it would have been possible for Holt to have caught the train at 12:10 and another at 12:30 o'clock. The former would have landed him in New York at 6 o'clock in the morning, and the latter at 7 o'clock, apparently in time to have caught the first train for Glen Cove.

The fact that Holt was carrying dynamite with him on his trip to Long Island will make him liable to prosecution on that score in addition to prosecution on charges of attempted murder and the attempt to wreck a part of the capitol. No attempt, however, will be made by the federal government to interfere with his prosecution by New York state. The fact that the attempt on the capitol had antedated the attack on Mr. Morgan will have nothing to do with determining the matter of prosecution.

It was acknowledged that it would be impossible for the federal authorities to get Holt from New York state unless the prosecution there should fall down, in which event they would proceed against him.

FRIENDS THINK HOLT IS INSANE

Instructors at Cornell Are Amazed by the Attack Upon J. P. Morgan.

Ithaca, N. Y., July 3.—[Special.]—Utterly at a loss to account for any motive consistent with his character, habits, mode of life, and method of thought, members of the German department at Cornell university and those other professors who were acquainted with him, agree tonight that Frank Holt must have been mentally unbalanced to commit such a crime. Holt's act is so inconsistent with the man these professors knew and like that they cannot believe that he was in his normal mind when he shot Mr. Morgan, though no one can be found here who noticed anything peculiar or irrational about the man before he left for New York city.

Failed to Make Records.

The one important incident that has come to light which bears on the question of his sanity is that he left rather suddenly and that he failed to send into the registrar of the university and to the head of his department, Prof. A. B. Faust, the list of marks made by the students of one of his classes in the final examinations early in June.

As he was a methodical man, his failure to send in the marks—part of the ordinary duties of his position—is regarded here with considerable significance. Outside of this fact his colleagues and friends, Prof. Faust, Beesche, Pope, and Zinnicker, are unable to recall a single incident showing him to be laboring under a great strain or emotion or any other evidence of mental trouble.

Though, like almost all of the members of the German department, Holt sympathized with Germany in the European war, his discussion of the war was far more moderate, contained, and rational than that of some of the other members of the department, and pronounced pro-ally sympathizers in the faculty said that they regarded him as the most reasonable man of all of the teachers of German.

Thought Deeply on War.

Dallas, Tex., July 3.—Frank Holt of Dallas, who now is believed by his wife and her family here to be the man held in Glen Cove, Long island, for shooting J. P. Morgan, was described here tonight by his father-in-law, O. F. Sensabaugh, as a man who had "thought deeply on the European war" and who was "opposed to all war and all strife."

"He never advocated violence, however," said Mr. Sensabaugh. "Frank was born in Wisconsin. I can't remember the name of the town. He was of German descent and was closely associated with the German element at Cornell, and naturally his sympathies were with Germany, but above all he desired peace."

Mr. Sensabaugh, who is presiding elder of the Dallas district of the Methodist Episcopal church, South, with headquarters here, declared that "temporary insanity must have caused the deed."

"Frank has overworked himself fearfully this summer, preparing for his duties this fall," he said.

Engaged for New School.

Mr. Holt was to become head of the romance department of French at the Southern Methodist university here, which opens its doors for the first time this fall.

Told that New York police said Holt has confessed to setting the bomb which wrecked a room in the national capitol last night, Mr. Sensabaugh exclaimed:

"O, that can't be true, but I thank you for telling me. I begged him not to go to New York this summer," he added. "He has just overworked himself."

Mrs. Holt late today received the telegram from Glen Cove which press dispatches said Holt had sent her.

None of Holt's family in Dallas would receive newspaper men except Mr. Sensabaugh. Mrs. Holt and her two children, one 2 years old and the other only 8 months, spent the afternoon secluded in Mr. Sensabaugh's home, where they have been residing pending the arrival here of Holt.

Silent on His Daughter.

"I can't discuss my daughter," was Mr. Sensabaugh's reply to newspaper men this afternoon, when asked if Mrs. Holt had been told of the affair. Tonight, however, he said she had been told, but that she would see no one. "I will talk for her," he said.

Mr. Sensabaugh still expressed the hope that it might not be his son-in-law who shot Morgan.

"Frank has not answered any of my telegrams," he said, adding that the telegram to Mrs. Holt "might be the work of some one else."

Widely Known in Southwest.

Holt is widely known in educational circles in the southwest. He graduated from Polytechnic college, Fort Worth, Texas, and has taught in Texas and Oklahoma, besides other southern states. In 1906 and 1907 he conducted private classes in German in Guthrie, Okla., where he was regarded as wealthy.

He was a member of the faculty of the University of Oklahoma in 1909 and 1910, going from there to Vanderbilt university, Nashville, Tenn. He was to return to the southwest in the fall to become a member of the faculty of one of the two universities to be conducted in the south by the Southern Methodist church.

NEW YORK MEN OF AFFAIRS DEPLORE ATTACK ON MORGAN

Well Known Leaders in Business Call Shooting Crime of Madman Praise for Financier.

New York, July 3.—[Special.]—Commenting on the shooting of J. P. Morgan, Mayor Mitchel said:

"I don't know many of the details of the shooting, but I imagine Mr. Morgan's assailant was out of his mind. It must have been the act of a crazy man. I deeply regret this deplorable occurrence. I have a high opinion of Mr. Morgan as a man and as a citizen, but he is so well known that any comment from me seems entirely unnecessary. I sincerely trust that his wound is not serious, and that he will recover speedily."

Mayor Mitchel said he sent a message of sympathy to the Morgan family.

Meyer London, the Socialist representative, said he was extremely sorry to hear Mr. Morgan had been shot.

"I hope it will prove to be merely the act of a madman," he continued. "It appears to have been the act of a crazy man who wanted to vent his anger on some individual. There are times when whole nations become angry, but that is no reason why it should become so contageous as to travel over the seas. Such an act shakes the foundations of our institutions. If a particular institution is objectionable it is up to the people to change it in a peaceful and orderly way."

Frank A. Vanderlip, president of the National City bank, said tonight over the phone from his home at Scarborough: "The attack upon Mr. Morgan is a great shock to me. I am glad to be informed up to the present time that his condition has not become serious. It is a most deplorable occurrence. I hope sincerely, as does the whole country, that Mr. Morgan will soon recover."

"This is a most regrettable incident at the present time, as it will be considered by some unthinking persons part of a German plot, while in reality it is only the product of a diseased mind," Stuart H. Gibbony said.

"It was a most deplorable event. Mr. Morgan is a fine man," Frederic R. Coudert said last night at his home at Oyster Bay.

Otto H. Kahn at his home in Morristown, N. J., said: "I am horribly shocked to learn of the attack on Mr. Morgan, but am greatly relieved to know that his condition is not serious."

CHICAGOANS SEE NO STOCK SLUMP

Charles G. Dawes Thinks Nation's Finances Unaffected by Crank's Shot.

Chicago financial leaders, while shocked at the attempt on Mr. Morgan's life, expressed the opinion that the tragedy would have no depressing effect on the financial situation in Chicago or the country.

Charles Gates Dawes, president of the Central Trust company, expressed his sympathy for Mr. Morgan and said he sincerely hoped the assassin's bullet would not prove fatal.

"It was a terrible thing," said Mr. Dawes. "I hope that the later reports will be less alarming than those we now have. As to the business situation, I hardly think that the tragedy will have much effect.

"The financial situation of the country is sound and well founded. It would take more than such a deplorable event to shake this financial foundation. I don't think, in fact, that it will have any serious effect on business anywhere. I should be very glad to learn that Mr. Morgan's wounds are not serious and that his speedy recovery is looked for."

James L. Houghteling of Peabody, Houghteling & Co., La Salle street bankers and bond men, whose firm has had close connection with the London financial situation since the outbreak of the war, said he didn't see how the attack on Mr. Morgan could seriously influence the financial situation in this country.

"It is deplorable, of course," said Mr. Houghteling. "I don't think Mr. Morgan personally supervised the firm's dealings with the London financiers. I doubt whether he was in close touch with that department of the firm.

"The financial situation in this country is on too sound a foundation to be affected much by the sad affair. I can't see how the attack on Mr. Morgan will cause much of a disturbance financially."

RAILROADS SHOW INCREASED EARNINGS OVER LAST YEAR.

Revenues of One Hundred and Twenty-seven Lines Show Gain, Expenses Are Less.

Washington, D. C., July 3.—[Special.]—Preliminary reports of railroad ernings for the month of May indicate that net revenues for all districts in the country are greater this year than for the corresponding month of last year. One hundred and twenty-seven roads scattered throughout the country report average gross revenues per mile for May this year of $1,121, as gainst $1,127 last year.

Expenses per mile this year were only $777 per mile for the month, against $843 per mile last year, making the net revenues $344 this year and $284 last.

In the eastern district the railroads increased both their gross and net revenues, while in the southern and western districts they increased their net revenues, ut showed a decrease in gross revenues.

While no figures were made public, the estate is estimated in value at approximately $25,000,000.

MORGAN OFFICES ALLAY DISQUIET

BLOW FOR EMPLOYES.

New York, July 3.—[Special.]—News of Mr. Morgan's injury was received at the office of J. P. Morgan & Co., Broad and Wall streets, soon after it happened, but it was not until 10:40 o'clock that the tickers carried the news.

The news agencies had the report almost an hour before this time, but were unable to verify it, and refused to carry it until it was positive for fear of the effect on the market. Shortly before 10:40 the following bulletin was given out at the Morgan offices:

"J. P. Morgan was shot by an unknown man, presumably a crank, at his home in Glen Cove at 9 o'clock this morning. The physicians advise that the wound was not serious."

A few minutes later this was made public:

"Two shots were fired at Mr. Morgan, both of which took effect. Details regarding the wounds have not yet been received at the office."

Doctors Issue a Statement.

It was not until 3:40 o'clock that an official statement from the physicians was given out. This was received over the telephone from Mr. Morgan's home at 3:30 and was as follows:

"An examination of Mr. Morgan discloses that there are two bullet wounds in the region of the right hip. There are no unfavorable symptoms and he is resting easily." This was signed by Drs. H. M. Lyle and J. W. Markoe.

Mr. Morgan's injuries were such that he was able to talk over the telephone with William H. Porter, a member of the firm, half an hour after the shooting. He gave Mr. Porter a brief account of what had happened and reassured him as to the extent of the injury.

At the time Mr. Porter and Dwight Morrow were the only members of the firm who had come downtown to business. Mr. Morrow, after a short conference with Mr. Porter, went to Glen Cove by automobile.

Little Effect on Market.

From Glen Cove Mr. Morrow and Willard D. Straight, another member of the firm, communicated all news to the New York office, where it was given to the newspapers. A representative of the firm remained on duty until late in the night to make public any additional details received from Mr. Morgan's office.

Before noon the news tickers and the evening papers were carrying brief outlines of what had happened, but the effect on the market was the slightest. A few financiers dropped into the Morgan offices to get additional details of the shooting, but they were only told that there was no need of worrying about Mr. Morgan's condition.

Because the day was Saturday and the first day of a three day holiday, most of the big men in the financial world had not gone to business.

Clerks Sad Until Reassured.

The clerks in the Morgan office, who got wind of what had happened early in the morning, were a sad group until definite assurance had been received that the wounds were not of such nature that there was any reason to doubt Mr. Morgan's recovery.

Mr. Morgan is known as "the chief" to all the members of his staff, and there is no one in the office so popular with all the men. Many of them have known him for years, since when, as "Jack" Morgan, he entered his father's office to learn the banking business.

His assumption of the reins of the business and his ascension to the pinnacle of the banking business has not changed his treatment of the men around him. His dominant personality, his great physical and mental vigor, his frankness, and his friendly and courteous manner impress themselves on all who have come in contact with him.

H. P. Davison, an important member of the firm, is in Europe, and Thomas W. Lamont, another member, is on a western trip.

Planned Pacific Coast Trip.

Mr. Morgan has been going to his office right along lately, except for two days two weeks ago, when he went to Boston to attend the wedding of his oldest son, Junius Spencer Morgan, now on his honeymoon. He planned to leave for the Pacific coast next Thursday and take in the Panama-Pacific exposition, getting back to New York about the end of August.

Mr. Morgan's three other children, Jane Norton, Francis Tracy, and Henry Sturgis, are at East island with their parents. East island is a wooded tract almost surrounded by water. Mr. Morgan's home is at the far end of the tiny peninsula, and is in an isolated location.

The Corsair, the big Morgan yacht, which Mr. Morgan inherited from his father, had been lent for the day to members of the Navy league for a sail.

PARTNER RUSHES TO EAST.

Klamath Falls, Ore., July 3.—Thomas W. Lamont of the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co. telephoned today from Pelican lodge, the country place of the late E. H. Harriman, for a special train to take him to Weed, Cal., in time to catch a fast train for San Francisco and the east.

IRON WORKERS' STRIKE ENDED BY A "LOCK-IN"

Doors Bolted on Union Men and Bosses Until They Get Together.

The strike of iron workers is settled.

This is the first break in Chicago's building construction labor war. It was regarded as portending an early settlement of the strike of carpenters and other trades and a resumption of activity in the building industry.

Carpenters for Peace.

The carpenters, at a meeting of the district council at night, also made an important peace move. A proposition from local union No. 1 to send a committee to the neutral body of the allied material interests to discuss terms of settlement was adopted unanimously.

The proposal came to the council in the form of a communication from the local union. It was read and acted upon immediately. President John A. Metz was empowered to appoint the committee.

A conference with the material men will be sought probably tomorrow or Tuesday. Any form of agreement reached must go back to the membership for adoption or rejection by referendum vote.

Metz to Pick Committee.

President Metz said he will appoint the arbitration committee to confer with the material interests.

The members of his committee are President Metz, William Brims, O. E. Woodbury, John Pritchard, and Thomas Flynn, the latter newly elected.

"The situation looks very hopeful," President Metz said. "All the men seem to be in a receptive mood and I look for good results from the conference."

The council voted to resume payment of $5 a week stock benefits and 10 cents an hour assessments on the 11,000 men at work. The benefits and assessments were suspended last week.

Metz Again President.

The annual election of officers of the council resulted in the reëlection of President Metz and Secretary-Treasurer Daniel Galvin by acclamation. There was no opposition to them.

William Brims was elected vice president by a vote of 48, to 37 for A. D. McKinley and 18 for A. W. Kelso. William Osterhaus was reëlected warden. Three business agents, a financial committee, and an arbitration board also were elected.

President Metz has served thirteen years as president of the council, and Secretary Galvin eight years.

The settlement of the structural iron workers' strike was brought about through the unceasing efforts of Charles W. Gindele, president of the Building Construction Employers' association; Simon O'Donnell, president of the Chicago Building Trades council, and Joseph L. McClory, international president of the iron workers, who came from Indianapolis to aid in restoring peace.

Conference Results in Peace.

Settlement was reached late in the afternoon after an all day conference in the rooms of the Building Construction Employers' association in the Chamber of Commerce building. The members of the union committee and the employers, members of the Iron league, were locked in a room, and President Gindele and President O'Donnell refused to permit the men to leave, even for lunch.

The agreement was signed by the employers and the following members of the union committee: R. L. Janecke, John R. McMullen, John Bruckman, George Fitzgerald, and John Heick.

The committees had full power to act, but the terms of settlment will be referred to the membership for ratification at a special meeting this afternoon at Iron Workers' hall, 808 West Van Buren street. There is no doubt about the ratification, the union officials said, the meeting being called largely for the purpose of notifying the men to return to work.

Get Substantial Wage Raise.

About 1,000 men are affected by the settlement. The men gain a substantial wage increase for the last two years of a three year agreement. For the first year they will receive the old scale of pay, 65 cents an hour. For the second year the scale will be 69 cents, and for the third 70 cents an hour.

The settlement is on the basis of the uniform agreement, with arbitration provisions, as championed by President O'Donnell and President Gindele of the employers. Adoption of this form of agreement is regarded as a victory for the employers and for the principle of arbitration, and the elimination of strikes in the building industry.

The agreement goes into effect immediately, and the men will return to work next Tuesday. Some of them will be hampered by the tieup of deliveries by the material men, but there are many jobs where work can be resumed by the iron workers at once. These jobs include municipal work on bridges, cribs, and similar construction.

Plan to Enjoin Material Men.

Attorneys John D. Farrell and Hope Thompson announced during the day that they are preparing a bill to be filed in the Circuit court next Tuesday for an injunction to restrain the allied material interests from enforcing their shutdown of deliveries of building construction material. The bill, they said, will be filed in behalf of K. G. Torkelson and Olaf Lyng, members of the carpenters' union.

The bill, the lawyers said, will charge that the shutdown is an unlawful combination and conspiracy in restraint of trade and is an attempt to stop building construction and throw thousands of men out of work.

PROMINENT MAN IS CHARGED WITH DOUBLE MURDER

Well Known Fruit Grower of Florida Arrested for Revolting Crime.

St. Petersburg, Fla., July 3.—[Special.]—John J. Mendenhall, 45, one of the most prominent business men and fruit growers on the west coast of Florida, is under arrest and in jail at Clearwater, charged with murder in the first degree in connection with the killing of Mrs. Charles W. Eliot, wife of a prominent Tampa business man, and her daughter, Susan, for whom Mendenhall had more than an ordinary attachment.

Guy Stemple, driver of the car in which the tragedy was enacted, after he fled, and Clarence T. Hammock, a brother-in-law of the accused man, are under arrest also and held in $1,000 bail as material witnesses.

Automobile Set on Fire.

Following the murder of the two women the automobile in which they were riding was set on fire and both bodies were incinerated. The bodies were recovered with great difficulty from the wrecked car. Neither one was recognizable. It was impossible to determine whether either one of the women had been shot at first, but it is presumed they were. The mother was killed by blows on the head delivered by a beer bottle, according to the condition of the skull when examined by a coroner's inquest, which directed the arrest of the alleged murderer and the two others.

Mendenhall, when seen at the jail this afternoon, declared that he was innocent of the charges. He declared further that he did not know the victims, that he had never been with them, and that he knew absolutely nothing of the crime.

Driver Gives Details.

Stemple declared that Mendenhall engaged him at 8 o'clock last night in Tampa to drive him and the two victims from Tampa to Clearwater. Mendenhall and the young woman entered the car together and were driven to the Eliot home, where Mrs. Eliot became a member of the party. Stemple declared he had driven to a point within eight miles of Clearwater when he heard a crash and, looking back, saw Mendenhall covering both women with a huge revolver. The elder woman, however, had been struck on the head with a beer bottle.

Stemple says one shot was fired as he left the automobile. Four others soon followed. Stemple continued on his way to Clearwater and upon reaching another road he hailed an automobile in which the Rev. J. H. Tickenor was a passenger, and after relating the circumstances was driven to Clearwater, where he gave Sheriff Whitehurst the information. The bodies were recovered and Mendenhall was arrested at an early hour today. Further than protesting his innocence Mendenhall refuses to talk.

RUSSIA CLAIMS BALTIC VICTORY IN SEA BATTLE

Report Says German Cruiser Was Badly Damaged and Forced Ashore.

PETROGRAD, July 3.—"A German cruiser was badly damaged and forced ashore on the island of Gothland in Thursday night's naval engagement in the Baltic," said an official statement issued here today. "Our losses were insignificant."

"Our cruisers encountered two enemy light cruisers and some torpedo boats in a heavy fog off the east coast of Gothland. They engaged the enemy in battle at 9 o'clock. A German cruiser was badly damaged and forced to lower its flag and run ashore. The other enemy ships then fled."

"At 10 o'clock our warships, pursuing the enemy, encountered the German armored cruiser Roon," added the official statement. "A German light cruiser and torpedo boat then came up and the engagement was renewed.

"After a running battle for half an hour the enemy retired southward. We continued the pursuit until 11:30. German submarines attacked our warships after the battle, but were unsuccessful."

Berlin Admits Loss.

BERLIN, via London, July 3.—A statement issued by the German admiralty tonight relative to the engagement in the Baltic sea confirms the report that the German mine layer Albatross was forced to run aground on the coast of the island of Gothland and states that twenty of its crew were killed in the fight and twenty-seven were wounded.

The Albatross ran aground in a sinking condition after two hours of heavy fighting with four Russian cruisers.

The text of the statement follows:

"The admiralty reports that a portion of light Baltic naval forces, returning from outpost duty, steaming in extended order, met at about 6 o'clock on the morning of July 2 in somewhat hazy weather Russian armored cruisers patrolling between Gothland and Windau (Russia). Isolated fighting developed, our weak forces attempting to draw the Russian vessels within range of the other German ships.

Charges Made Against Russians.

"In the course of the fighting the vessel Albatross was unable to regain touch with its own forces. After two hours of heavy fighting against four armored cruisers which continued firing within Swedish territorial waters, the Albatross, owing to several hits, was compelled to run aground in a sinking condition near Oestgarns, in Gothland. Twenty men were killed and twenty-seven were wounded. The wounded were well tended by the Swedish officials and population."

REPORTS SON OF W. T. STEAD WAS KILLED IN ROUMANIA.

Relative of Famous Writer Said to Have Been Assassinated While in Near East.

Alfred Stead, son of William T. Stead, the editor who lost his life when the Lusitania was destroyed, has been assassinated in Roumania, according to a report circulated in London.

This was the information received in Chicago yesterday from Mrs. Stead in London by her brother, Frank R. Hussey of 4700 Beacon street.

Mr. Stead, who became a war correspondent at the outbreak of hostilities, recently left London for Roumania to look after some oil interests; and it is thought that, as a British subject, he might have carried a commission from his government. Efforts are being made through the British consulate to obtain some trace of the missing man.

'WE WANT PEACE,' SAY SOCIALISTS

English Labor Leader Desires Success for German Plan for World Peace.

BY ED. L. KEEN.

[UNITED PRESS STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

[Copyright: 1915: By United Press.]

LONDON, July 3.—"I welcome wholeheartedly the German socialist manifesto calling upon the workers of other belligerent countries to use their endeavors for peace," declared Ramsey MacDonald, noted English labor leader, in an interview with the United Press today.

"It is only the beginning and must be regarded as such. I regret that it deals so much with the past because we are not in a temper to discuss that just yet. At the same time I think it is the duty of the working classes of other belligerent countries to respond to this manifesto and state on what conditions they are prepared to support a peace propaganda."

"Military operations are not ends in themselves, but at best only the means to an end. Indeed, I hold that after the time comes when we can get what we want by negotiation every life sacrificed is criminal waste.

"Conversely, it is no use talking about stopping the war before we can reach our goal. The problem, therefore is how the people of the various countries can get into touch with each other—how they can make their desires, their hopes, their fears understood by each other, and how from that knowledge and understanding they can come to settlements which will secure them against domestic militarism and foreign attack.

"It is as a first and essential step in that understanding that I welcome the manifesto of the German Social Democrats, and believe the working classes of other belligerent countries should express their views in response."

LONDON, July 3.—The Austro-German armies continue their impetuous drive against the Russian forces along a front measuring approximately 150 miles in southern Russian Poland and in Galicia. The Teutonic troops, according to the German statement, have gained possession of the lowlands of Labunka, in the Russian province of Lublin, despite stubborn resistance, and also have advanced in pursuit of the fleeing Russians in the Zlota Lipa section of Galicia.

Petrograd admits the retirement of the Russians across the Gnila Lipa and explains the retrograde movement farther to the north was caused by strong flanking operations of the Austro-Germans against the Russian positions in the Tanew region, making them untenable.

Military writers in Berlin estimate that in the eight weeks from May 2 until June 27 the Germans captured 1,630 Russian officers and 520,000 men.

German Official Statement.

BERLIN, July 3.—The official statement given out today by the general army headquarters follows:

"North of the Dniester river our troops are advancing under continuous fighting in pursuit of the enemy and penetrating by way of the line of Mariampol, Narajoa, and Miasto towards the Zlota Lipa section. They reached the Bug at several places between Kamionka and Strzumilowa and below Krylow, and are quickly advancing in a northerly direction between the Bug and the Vistula.

"The lowlands of Labunka now are in our possession after our opponents had offered stubborn resistance at certain places. German troops also obtained a firm foothold on the northern bank of the river in the Wysnica section, between Krasnik and the mouth of the Labunka."

Russian View of Situation.

PETROGRAD, July 3.—The present alignment of the tremendous forces engaged in Galicia and southern Russia is roughly divisible into two seventy-five mile fronts, one running north from Halics and the Gnila Lipa river, and the other traveling east from the junction of the San and Vistula rivers. Together the fronts form an obtuse angle at Sokal, on the River Bug, and on the Galician side of the Russian border.

Although the Germans recently gained new positions to the north of Halicz, where they fortified the left bank of the Gnila Lipa, a preponderance of the forces and the chief energy of the Austro-Germans were employed at the north end to advance into the provinces of Lublin and Kholm, along a front extending from the Vistula to the Bug river. In this region, especially in the eastern half between the River Wieprz and the Bug the Germans are making steady if not spectacular progress.

Russians Make Orderly Retreat.

The encounters in this section have not been characterized by pitched battles, but they consist chiefly of rear guard actions followed by Russian counter attacks and orderly retirement.

Russian commentators describe the retreat from Tanew as so "artistic and secret" that there were scarcely any rear guard battles. This retreat was caused, military experts say, by the progress of the Austro-Germans toward Lublin and Kholm and the presernce of considerable forces along the Vistula. Being flanked on both sides, the Russian Tanew position became untenable.

The Galician campaign is regarded by Russian officers to have come to an end. The new alignment of forces is intended as a defense of Russian territory against invasion.

MINE SINKS A DUTCH SHIP.

Ten of Crew of the Katwyk Lose Lives in North Sea Accident, Report.

LONDON, July 3.—Ten of the crew of the Dutch sailing ship Katwyk lost their lives when the vessel struck a mine and sank in the North sea, according to an Amsterdam dispatch today.

GERMANS ADMIT FRENCH RETOOK MOUNTAIN TOWN

Hilgenfurst, in Vosges Mountains, Captured by Allies After Hard Battle.

BERLIN, July 3.—The loss of the German position on Hilgenfurst, in the Vosges mountains, was announced today in an official statement from the German war office. There has been hard fighting there for some days.

"The fortifications which we captured the day before yesterday on Hilgenfurst," the statement says, "were lost again to the enemy yesterday.

"At Les Eparges a French attack prepared for by the enemy with incendiary grenades and bombs containing evil smelling gases failed."

Army of Prince Repulsed.

PARIS, July 3.—The French war department today gave out the following official statement regarding the military operations:

"The fighting continued all last night in the Argonne with the same stubbornness. We maintained our positions and we inflicted heavy losses on the enemy. This is the district in which the crown prince is in command.

Arras Under Heavy Fire.

"Along the remainder of the front there has been an active cannonade, guns of all calibers taking part. Shells thrown into Arras started some fires, but the flames were placed under control.

"French aviators successfully bombarded from the air the railroad stations at Challerange, Zarren, and Langemarck, as well as certain German batteries at Vimy and at Beaurains."

"An Advance in the Price of the V-Type Cadillac Eight Will Unquestionably Be Necessary"

This is the official announcement. The advance must come soon. Even the Cadillac organization—with all its thirteen years' experience in quantity production—cannot continue to produce so fine a car at present prices.

With the most improved automatic machinery modern science can devise, with an efficiency in personnel which is the envy of the entire industry, still it is impossible any longer to sell a car of Cadillac quality at $1975.

Even though the Cadillac Company builds every year more cars than the combined output of all other makers of high grade cars—even though present orders from dealers are sufficient to tax the capacity of the Cadillac factory for a year to come and selling expense is practically eliminated—with all these advantages, still the price of the Cadillac must go up or quality be sacrificed.

Cadillac Quality Sets the Price

But the Cadillac Company will not reduce quality. The Cadillac car has always represented certain ideals of what a fine car ought to be—certain standards for material, workmanship and finish. To trifle with these ideals, these standards, would be to sacrifice integrity, to place expediency before honesty.

So with the entire industry slashing prices—with maker after maker trying to see how cheap a car he can build—with nearly all trying to make the public believe that lower prices do not affect quality—the Cadillac dares to raise the price rather than sacrifice even one cent on quality.

The Cadillac Organization is going to stand by its ideals and face the issue. The world knows these ideals to be high and worthy—knows these standards to be sound and practical. These ideals, these standards, have built up the Cadillac business till it tops the industry—and they will carry it still further as long as real men want real cars at honest prices.

Cadillac Prices Are Honest

Price has never had a voice in fixing the quality of the Cadillac. The Cadillac policy has always been to build the best possible automobile and let the price take care of itself. That is why today nobody knows how long a Cadillac will last—the first ones haven't worn out yet—they are only 13 years old.

Year after year Cadillac ideals have led the industry. Year after year Cadillac quality has improved—refinements have been added. But for several years the price has remained the same. Increased business and improved manufacturing methods have made this possible.

The Cadillac "Eight" of today would cost probably twice as much if made by the methods of six years ago. Yes, and today's Cadillac, if the price were based on the actual worth of the car compared with other cars—today's Cadillac would be the highest priced car on the market.

But Cadillac prices are honest—always have been—always will be. They are based on what it costs to produce, in quantities, the finest car in the world—not on what the public can be persuaded to pay for it.

Perhaps that is why the Cadillac Company today enjoys public confidence to a point which permits maintaining quality regardless of price. Perhaps that public confidence in the honesty of Cadillac prices is the reason other cars are coming down in price. There is much to think about in this connection.

A Cadillac Is Always an Investment

The Cadillac Company has never reduced the price or reduced the quality of the Cadillac car. No Cadillac owner has ever been obliged to suffer an exasperating and humiliating depreciation in the value of his car. The integrity of the Cadillac price is recognized the world over, and the man who owns a Cadillac has the most secure automobile investment that is known.

Today the Eight Cylinder Cadillac stands as the most advanced type of motor car. Its V-type engine is just one year in the lead in point of development over all other American V-type engines. It is the only American V-type engine which has proved itself—and how wonderfully it has proved itself! Over 12,000 owners of Eight Cylinder Cadillacs have so enthused their friends by their praise of this car that 12,000 more of these cars have already been ordered by Cadillac dealers.

Almost any day now we will be advised that the price of the Eight Cylinder Cadillac has been advanced. It is a new sensation the Cadillac Company offers you—that of having a car which increases in value shortly after you buy it. He is a wise man who places his order for an EightCylinder Cadillac before the advance takes place. Today the Cadillac touring car is $1975 F. O. B. Detroit. Tomorrow—

NINE SHIPS SUNK, DAY WAR RECORD FOR SUBMARINES

Russians Sink Three Turkish Craft, and Germans Six Vessels in the North Sea.

LONDON, July 3.—A Russian submarine has sunk two Turkish steamers and a sailing vessel in the Black sea, forced three armored cruisers to run ashore near the mouth of the Bosphorus, and shelled several other Turkish vessels.

German submarines have sunk six more steamers of the allies in the waters around the British isles.

This is the submarine record that has come to light today.

New Victims of Germans.

Larchmore, British steamer of 4,355 tons. Sunk today. Fate of crew undetermined.

Renfrew, British steamer of 2,248 tons. Sunk today. Fate of crew undetermined.

How Ships Met Fate.

The Craigard was sunk off the Scilly islands. It sailed from Galveston June 3 and Newport News June 11 for Havre, and the first suggestion that it had met with some mishap was when an empty lifeboat and another boat marked "Craigard, Leith," were towed into Penzance. The Craigard carried a cargo of cotton.

The Gadsby sailed from Sydney June 18 for a European port.

The Renfrew formerly was the Meridian.

The Richmond when torpedoed was bound from Queenstown for Boulogne and laden with railway ties. It was sunk off the Scilly islands. Members of the crew when landed declared the submarine which sunk the Richmond was rushing to attack another steamer when they drew out of sight in their boats.

BRITISH MUNITION SCANDAL TO BE GIVEN PUBLIC AIRING.

Liberal Member of Parliament Will Not Rest Until Guilty Officials Are Exposed.

LONDON, July 3.—Sir Henry Dalziel, Liberal member of parliament and newspaper proprietor, whose arraignment of the ordnance department in the house of commons last Thursday startled the British nation, today announced his determination to continue on the warpath until, in his own words, the "men directly guilty for the failures of the last year are cleared out, bag and baggage."

Sir Henry early next week will ask Premier Asquith to give the house of commons facilities for full discussion" on the lack of guns and ammunition."

"I am determined," he said, "that the awful facts shall be dragged to the light of day. This scandal is due to two main facts—censorship and public indifference—and largely because the real state of affairs is not disclosed. The tragedy is further from being losed than the general public has yet conceived."

Sir Henry Dalziel asserts that a conflict of authority already has arisen between the ordnance department and the ministry of munitions, and he declares that the only solution is to give David Lloyd-George supreme authority for munition supplies.

EXPLOSION BY AMBULANCE: FRENCH GENERAL WOUNDED.

PARIS, July 3.—Gen. H. J. E. Gouraud, commander of the French expeditionary force at the Dardanelles, has been wounded and is returning to France. This announcement is made in the French official statement issued tonight, which adds that the general, who received his injuries by the explosion of a shell which fell near an ambulance, is not dangerously wounded.

CONSTANTINOPLE, July 3.—The repulse of British assaults on the Gallipoli peninsula is reported in an official statement issued today a. the Turkish war office. The communication follows:

"Renewed attacks by the British during the last three days near Avi Burnu and Seddul Bahr were beaten off with heavy enemy losses. The British were driven back into their old positions."

NEIGHBORS CHASE A JANITOR

Arrest Man After He Strikes Woman Storekeeper in Quarrel Over Rubbish.

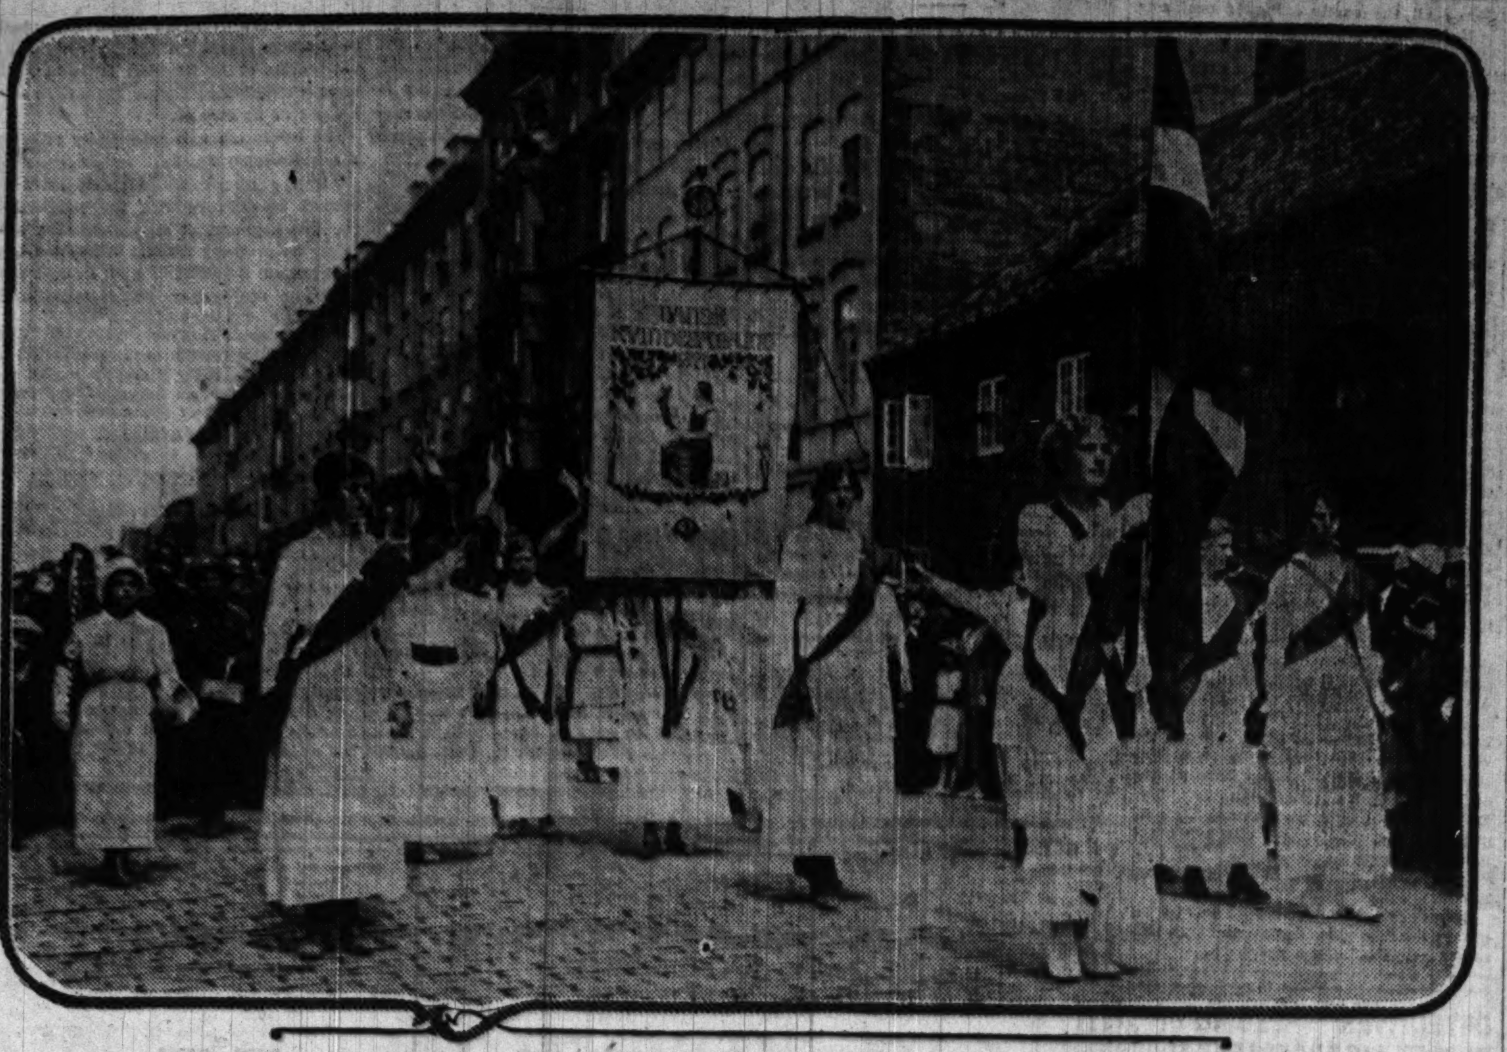
Hugh Vicklund, janitor of a building at 188 Cornell avenue, was arrested yesterday, charged with having struck Mrs. Myrtle Froelich, proprietor of a delicatessen store at 1508 East Fifty-fifth street. He admitted the charge, saying he and the woman had quarreled over the disposal of rubbish from her store. He said that she struck at him and then he hit her with a broom. Witnesses then chased Vicklund to the fourth floor of the building where he is employed and arrested him.

ARRESTS FAMOUS "TOURIST"

Lieut. Larkin Says Man Taken at Dock Is Known in London and Paris.

George Bailey, alias "Dice Box" McGuire, who according to Lieut. James V. Larkin, is a pickpocket and confidence man well known in New York, San Francisco, London, and Paris, was arrested by Lieut. Larkin on the Graham & Morton docks yesterday. Larkin was preparing to take the boat for Holland, Mich., when he saw Bailey moving about among the persons on the dock. Bailey was last arrested in Chicago three years ago, according to police records.

Women of Denmark March in Copenhagen to Celebrate Their Achievement of Suffrage Equal with Men.



The women of Denmark have been granted constitutional suffrage—equal in all respects to that of men. News of this unopposed achievement was not given great prominence in America because overshadowed by the more spectacular events transpiring in Europe. The picture represents the head of a great woman's parade in Copenhagen on June 5. The young woman leading is supposed to typify "Denmark, the Nation."

BERLIN HOLDS UP U. S. NOTE REPLY

Change in Plans Follows Announcement It Was Ready and Favorable.

BY CARL W. ACKERMAN.

[UNITED PRESS STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

BERLIN, via The Hague, July 3.—An important development in the German note situation resulted in the announcement this afternoon that the delivery of the document to the American embassy would be indefinitely delayed.

Ambassador Gerard, while refusing to give the slightest intimation of the nature of the new development, told me tonight that he did not expect the note to be delivered now in less than another week. He stated that the full details of the change in the situation have been cabled to Washington.

Foreign Office Silent.

At the foreign office the only information available was that new developments have arisen demanding the utmost care and consideration and that these developments have been of such a nature as to make impossible the delivery of the note on Monday as originally planned.

Official notice also was given all correspondents and local newspaper men that discussion of the note's probable contents and speculation as to the nature or reason for its delay would be prohibited.

Notice also was given that telephone censors would stop any discussion of the note over telephone lines by either journalists or citizens. The announcement was coupled with the statement that the prohibition also would govern discussion or speculation on any political or military topic.

Gerard Holds a Conference.

Ambassador Gerard called at the foreign office at 5 o'clock this afternoon and was closeted with officials there for more than half an hour. At the end of his conference he declined to state either the nature of his conversation or state with whom he had been conferring.

He asserted that any information regarding new developments must come from Washington.

Shortly before these new developments arose today it was announced that the chancellor had left for the kaiser's headquarters with the completed text of the note, expecting to obtain his approval, so the reply could be delivered to Mr. Gerard on Monday.

At that time it was said the note would promise immunity for neutrals on the high seas, even though they were on belligerent ships, provided the ships did not carry ammunition.

PACKERS REFUSE FRENCH ORDER FOR 80,000 CATTLE.

Cannot Be Supplied by Chicago Firms Without Raising Price of Beef for Country.

One of the largest orders for cattle ever offered to Chicago packers and live stock men is going without a taker. The French government is in the market for 80,000 cattle. All the large Chicago packers and live stock commission men at the Union Stock Yards have turned down the offer. The reason generally given is that the cattle cannot be bought without raising the price of beef for consumption in the United States to prohibitive figures.

NEVER DRUNK ON SATURDAY.

Goldstein, Whose Wife Gets Divorce, Kept Sober One Day a Week for Years.

The tale of the Scotchman who, his face half scraped, ceased shaving punctually at Saturday midnight isn't as good as the story told by Mrs. Mollie Goldstein of 3530 Douglas boulevard, whom Judge McDonald yesterday divorced from Morris Goldstein.

"He was drunk," she testified, "drunk for seven or eight years straight. He was always drunk six days out of the seven."

"What about the seventh?" asked Judge McDonald.

"The seventh is Saturday, the Jewish Sabbath," Mrs. Goldstein explained. "No business may be transacted on the Sabbath, so Morris didn't buy liquor."

GREAT LAKES CANALS SHOW JUNE TONNAGE DECREASED.

Lake Commerce Report Gives Falling Off in Shipping Through Ste. Marie Waterways.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., July 3.—[Special.]—The statistical report of lake commerce passing through the canals at Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., and Canada, for the month of June, 1915, issued today, shows little change from the report of May, which gave a decrease in tonnage from last year. For the month of June, 1915, there were locked through the canals 2,581 steamers, carrying an aggregate total of 8,360,832 tons. In June, 1914, 2,805 vessels passed through, with a tonnage of 8,588,081. The decrease for this year is 187,249 tons and 224 vessel passages.

Wheat and grain show a decrease of 10,437,835 bushels, there being 18,106,009 transported in June, 1914, and 7,668,174 during the last month. Passenger traffic also is in the decrease column, 2,986 less passengers making the trip through the locks.

Copper again shows an increase of 6,036 tons being carried eastward this year. For the month of June 1914, 4,654,055 tons were locked through the Canadian canal, as against 3,934,026 through the American canals. Since the operation of the third lock only a small percentage now goes to the Canadian side, the amounts for June, 1915, showing 7,909,390 through the American canals and 370,442 tons through the Canadian lock.

ITALIANS PUSH BACK AUSTRIANS

Strategic Point of Tolmino Captured by Large Force of Invading Army.

ROME, July 3.—Tolmino, a strategic point on the Isonzo, which has been the objective of a large force of Italians striving to obtain possession of the forts of St. Maria and St. Lucia, has fallen into the hands of the invaders of Austria, according to an official announcement made here today.

This success represents an important move in the Italian advance against Goritz, the key to the entire position east of the Isonzo for the defense of Triest. With Gradisca, south of Goritz, and Plava and Tolmino with its auxiliary forts to the north, strongly held by the Italians, it is felt here that the resistance of the Austrians at the major fortress will be of short duration.

King Victor Emmanuel has been present at the fighting in this district for several days, according to the Giornale d'Italia, which adds that the presence of the king inspired the soldiers to unheard of heroism. They rushed the Austrian trenches without apparent thought of danger and overwhelmed the enemy in their mad rush.

Italians Batter Malborget.

"Our bombardment was carried on with great violence yesterday," said tonight's report from Gen. Cadorna. "Our air scouts report that great damage was done.

"The enemy violently counter attacked our positions on the heights of Carbisco. We repulsed the assaults and took 200 prisoners."

German Troops for Italy.

PARIS, June 3.—German troops have been dispatched from Alsace to the Italian frontier. This is the first definite movement of Germans reported against the Italians. General statements have previously been made that a large German force was in readiness to go against the Italians.

Germans Tells of Italian Defeat.

BERLIN, by Wireless to Sayville, N. Y., July 3.—The following official report from the Austro-Hungarian army headquarters, dated July 3, was given out here tonight:

"Yesterday the Italians suffered a new defeat on the littoral front. After unsuccessful charges near Sagrado and Polazzo, the Italians attacked with at least two infantry divisions the Doberdo plateau, Polazzo, and Monte Corsich. They were everywhere repulsed with heavy losses. The enemy's attacks against the Gorzia bridge head, southwest of Monte Sabotino, likewise were repulsed."

No Change on Italian Front.

ROME, July 3.—The following official communication was issued by the Italian war office tonight:

"Along the entire front the situation remains unchanged. The artillery action, of an intense nature, continued against the works at Malborgeth and Predil, causing serious damage and heavy explosions.

"The enemy attempted yesterday afternoon a violent counter attack against our positions on the Carnian plateau, but were repulsed, leaving in our hands about 200 prisoners."

Former Police Official's Attorney Says Murderer Will Name Six New York Politicians.

New York, July 3.—Charles Becker is going to "squeal," whether it saves him from the electric chair or not. That was the word that came from his attorneys tonight.

Definite announcement was made by Gov. Whitman at Albany this afternoon that he would not further interfere in Becker's case.

Becker's eleventh hour confession, it was reported here tonight, will name six men high in New York politics.

BERTSCHE GOING TO JOLIET PRISON SOON IN STYLE

Will Invite Deputy Sheriff to Accompany Him in the Best Auto in Chicago.

A FEW DAYS LATE.

Springfield, Ill., July 3.—[Special.]—A mandate issued by the Supreme court last Monday ordering the removal of "Barney" Bertsche to the penitentiary has been sent to Frank J. Walsh, clerk of the Criminal court in Chicago. By the terms of the mandate Bertsche should have been taken to the prison last Tuesday.

One well known townsman, Mr. Barney Bertsche, will automobile to Joliet next Tuesday, where he will remain indefinitely.

This reads like a society note from a country newspaper, but it is not. Bertsche's trip to Joliet is not for pleasure. He is going there because a mandatory writ has been issued, instructing the sheriff of Cook county to deliver Bertsche at the Joliet penitentiary. Nearly two years ago he was convicted of operating a confidence game. The term of imprisonment for this offense is from one to ten years.

After his conviction Bertsche was induced by State's Attorney Hoyne to expose the "clairvoyant trust" that operated in Chicago under the alleged protection of the police. Following Bertsche's sensational exposure Capt. John J. Halpin of the detective bureau and several other members of the police department were indicted.

By legal technicalities and through the influence of State's Attorney Hoyne, Bertsche has been able thus far to "beat the pen." The state's attorney wished to keep him in Chicago as a witness in the cases of policemen who will soon be tried. Bertsche has told his friends that he didn't care if the trials were delayed until the European war was ended.

The writ to deliver Bertsche at the penitentiary arrived here Friday, according to Barney's admission to a friend. He would have been taken to Joliet yesterday only he desired to be a free man over the Fourth.

"Yes, I've got to go and do my bit," Bertsche is reported to have said. "But I'm going to stir in style. Nothing but an automobile for me, and we'll take the longest road to get there.

"I want to be out for the Fourth, and as Monday is the legal holiday I don't want to bother the folks down there at the big stone building.

"If my plans go through, and I guess they will, I'm going to drive over to the sheriff's office Tuesday morning and invite one of his deputies to go with me on the trip."

CAUGHT BY EMPLOYER.

Can a man getting a salary of $20 a week live honestly and pay alimony of $10 every week to his first wife, from whom he is divorced, and support his second wife and himself on the rest?

Paul Freedman of 2003 Evergreen avenue, a drug clerk, says it cannot be done. He is now occupying a cell at the detective bureau charged with embezzling $715 from him employer, Mark P. Abrams, owner of a drug store at 679 North Clark street.

Begins to Suspect Man.

Abrams about a month ago began to suspect Freedman, who had been in his employ for more than eleven months, and hired the Green detective agency to watch him. Freedman was called to the offices of the detective agency yesterday on the pretext that he was wanted on some drug business, and was charged with having taken small amounts of money at various times.

According to Green, he confessed, and signed a statement that he had been forced to seal money at different times in order to make both ends meet and live, and said that the amount taken totaled $715.

Detective Sergeants McGurk and Rive took Freedman to the detective bureau where a complaint charging him with embezzlement was signed by Abrams.

Admits Taking Money.

In his cell Freedman admitted he had taken money from his employer, but said the amount was lower than $715.

"I could not help it," said Freedman. "I was forced to take money at different times in order to keep my domestic troubles straight.

"My first wife divorced me two years ago when we failed to get along together and secured the custody of our 6 year old daughter and I was ordered by the court to pay $10 every week as alimony.

"I borrowed some money from my friends and opened a drug store, but could not make it go, and I lost all. I then went to Mr. Abrams, for whom I had worked once before, and was given back my old position as drug clerk. Last March I married for the second time. I tried to make both ends meet on the $20 a week, but I fell behind and ran into debt. I was forced to take various amounts at different times in order to keep up paying the alimony and still live. I never gambled in my life."

THREE KILLED; NINE HURT.

List of Casualties Runs High in Wreck of St. Paul Train Near Ranier, Wash.

'TIM' KING, ONE TIME BEST OF GAMBLERS, DIES

Came Here a Hackman and Soon Amassed Fortune in Policy Hall.

"Tim" King, old time gambling hous keeper and later a "policy magnate," died yesterday at the residence of Thomas G. Newbold, 3124 Michigan avenue, wher he lived in retirement. He was found dead, seated in a rocking chair in his bedroom. It is believed he died of hear failure.

King was 61 years old. He came to Chicago about forty years ago from Niagara Falls, N. Y. He was a cabman there, and followed the same occupation in Chicago for a few years. At that time Mike McDonald was the "Gambling king" of Chicago. He also came here from Niagar Falls, and a bond of friendship sprang up between him and "Tim" King.

Gives Up Horse and Cab.

At McDonald's suggestion, King abandoned the horse and cab and went t work at the "Store," as McDonald' gambling house was called. King mad a big "killing" at faro one night at rival gambling house and he opened place of his own. When Mayor Roch put the gamblers out of business in 188 '89 King opened a policy shop in a basement on South Clark street. He soo had a score of shops in all parts of th city. As policy is almost a "sure thing game, his profits were large.

"Tim" bought a diamond stud abou the size of a small steak, which his friend referred to as "the headlight." He spe money lavishly and his wine suppers be came famous with a coterie of friends.

Was Indicted Once.

In 1907 King was indicted through th efforts of the Citizens' association. Aft more than two years of persistent effo by the association to bring him to trial h pleaded guilty and was fined $200. H was at the head of the Topeka and Kan sas Policy company in 1904 when he wa fined $1,000 under the lottery law. Aft his last conviction in 1910 he was forc to suspend operations. PLANS FOR NEW GRANT PARK TO BE ON EXHIBIT

Models of Colonnades and Terraces Will Be Shown Tomorrow in Blackwell Hall.

An exhibit of plans for the improvement of Grant park will be placed in Blackwell hall of the Art institute tomorrow by the south park commissioners. The exhibit will include a model of the colonnades and terraced fountains which are to be erected at the Randolph street end of the park between Michigan avenue and the Illinois Central tracks.

Except for the erection of this decoration, the work now in progress between Randolph street and Jackson boulevard is expected to be finished within three months. The colonnades were designed by Edward H. Bennett, architectural adviser to the Chicago plan commission and architect of the south park commissioners. The model is the work of Albert Fournier.

Plant Plenty of Trees.

Tentative plans for the park improvement between Jackson boulevard and Twelfth street call for a similar decoration. It has not been decided when work on the south end of the park will commence, however. The plans call for pylons, sixty feet in height, to mark the entrances to outer Grant park, east of the Illinois Central tracks. There will be a line of trees from Randolph street to Twelfth street, with a gravel walk thirty feet wide beside it.

J. F. Foster, superintendent for the south park commissioners, said last night he believed when the work is completed Grant park will be a beauty spot unsurpassed by any of the formal gardens in the United States and equaled only by the public gardens of Italy.

Work Is Progressing.

He said that work on the Field museum outh of Twelfth street is progressing apidly, but that it probably will be two ears before the building is completed. he foundations for the museum are almost ready.

Plans for the park between the Illinois entral and the lake are only tentative, ccording to Mr. Foster. Some of those hich will be on view in the Art institute rovide for concrete stadiums, an athletic eld, and sunken gardens. It is proposed o improve the inner harbor and to erect ement steps for four blocks along the ke front, from which to watch aquatic ports.

LAWMAKERS TO GET $3,500; GOV. DUNNE O. K.'S BILL.

Declares Higher Salaries Are Justified and Will Make Better Legislators.

Springfield, Ill., July 3.—[Special.]—ov. Dunne today signed the legislative alary increase bill which increases to 3,500 for the two year term the salaries f senators and representatives as against e present $2,000 salary. The governor ssued a formal statement carrying his easons for approving the bill. The statement follows:

"I have approved house bill number 6 and I believe I am actuated solely so doing by the public interest and at the law will redound to the public nefit. At the present time the salary the members of the legislature is $2,000 r the term for which they were elected, $1,000 per year.

"I am reliably informed that since the actment of the direct primary it costs embers of the legislature from $500 to ,500 and sometimes more in all consted candidacies. His living expenses Springfield and his railroad fare to pringfield and return must cost each ember on the average about $30 a week. n attendance of twenty-four weeks, ch as occurred during the sessions of 13 and 1915, at $30 a week would amount $720.

"Adding this $720 to the $730 average penses of election would make each ember of the legislature expend legitiately in the neighborhood of $1,500, aving to the legislator as his compention for the two year term a bare $500 r $250 a year."

I may expect you to keep the 7 in Uncle Sam's notes until Billy Suny's moral and melodious voice reaches ur inward conscience.

REVIEW OF WAR FOR THE WEEK.

Following is a general survey of the operations of the European armies during last week in the various war zones:

On the Eastern Front.

A critical situation developed in the eastern theater of war during the week. Avoiding further direct attack in force against the string of Russian fortresses along the northern Polish frontier, the Teuton allies followed up their great drive through Galicia with a swing to the north between the Vistula and Bug rivers.

Russia's defensive strategy has been based on its rivers, which offer the only natural barriers in the great Polish plains. On the north they have fortified the Narew, Bobr, and Nieman rivers. On the west the Vistula is marked by fortresses, but on the south there are no streams except those running north and south. Only the Wieprz, an affluent of the Vistula at Ivangorod, takes an east and west course for thirty miles east of the fortress.

The week closed with the Austro-Germans making a dash to get into the gap between the bend of the Wieprz and the Bug river in an effort to break through and get to the rear of Warsaw from the south. Field Marshal von Mackensen was reported to have sent a flying column of cavalry, artillery and infantry in motor transports in a dash on the railway center of Chelm, east of Lubin and directly south of the fortress of Brest Litowsk.

This wedge into the Russian front, if successful, will flank the Slav positions along the Vistula from Warsaw to Ivangorod and cut off at the same time the armies to the south along the upper Bug and Dniester rivers in Galicia. This new drive will force also a shifting of the alignment of the Russians to the south and southeast of Warsaw to meet this flanking attack from the south.

In the larger strategy of the eastern campaign the situation that was developing to the south and east of Warsaw at the close of the week resembled the Russian salient at Przemysl of a few weeks ago, when the Germans came within an ace of closing up the neck of the bend in the Slav line and bottling up the defenders of the Galician fortress. In the case of Przemysl the Russians managed to hold the two flanking forces until the defenders got out. It was only a comparatively small front that had to be straightened out. In the present great maneuver it will mean the defense of the larger salient in the Russian line, with Warsaw and Novo Georgiewsk at its apex. If the neck of this bottle fails to hold it will force a realignment of the eastern battle lines, which means the loss of Warsaw and the greater part of Poland.

While the Russians continued their steady retreat during the week in southern Poland and northeastern Galicia, further to the southeast along the Gnila Lipa and Dniester rivers they put up a more stubborn resistance.

On the Western Front.

Anxiety marked the attitude of the allies in the west during last week. German strategy kept them guessing as to the next move of the kaiser after his great success in Galicia. There were various reports about the shifting of troops from the eastern to the western front, the most significant coming from Switzerland, where all railway traffic across the frontier was suspended owing to the use of trains by the German government north of the boundary.

This report, in connection with the heavy renewed pressure in the region of Verdun, was taken to indicate that the Germans had decided to make another supreme effort to break through the great eastern chain of French fortresses.

It was Verdun and its encircling forts that forced the Germans to make their wide swing through Belgium on their march on Paris. This stronghold also played a most important part in the successive defeats of the German armies following the battle of Meaux and Von Kluck's retreat after he had almost reached the French capital.

The new offensive resulted in a substantial gain by the army of the German crown prince in the Argonne forest to the west of Verdun, at Four de Paris. An advance along a three mile front netted 2,000 prisoners and a number of machine guns and other spoils. The French claimed they had successfully held all their positions.

Coincident with this attack on the left of the French line around Verdun heavy pressure was brought to bear on the right of the fortress, east of the Meuse river, from St. Mihiel to Fresnes.

The sector north of Arras to Ypres developed some fierce fighting during the week. The intensity of this constant conflict can be judged from the official losses of the British, which were announced in London to be over 100,000 during April, May, and June. The small front in Flanders and northern France is credited with two-thirds of the casualties and the Dardanelles with the remainder. The week closed with the Germans subjecting this sector from Arras to north of Ypres to a continuous bombardment followed by massed infantry attacks, with no decisive results.

In the Vosges the Germans brought up reinforcements and attempted to regain the lost ground in the region of Metzeral.

Along the Dardanelles.

Reports from Gallipoli peninsula during the week indicated that the Franco-British forces are making slow but steady progress towards the narrows. They are doing this, however, at heavy cost. The British losses were announced by Premier Asquith to have been over 37,000 in killed, wounded, and missing up to May 31. This does not include the losses during the fighting last week, which was reported to have been the most sanguinary of the campaign. Important gains were claimed by the allies in their advance on Krithia, a strategic point blocking their progress to the narrows. The warships played an important part in the engagement by preparing the way for the infantry charges, which were delivered by some of England's most famous regiments, among them being the Royal Scots, the Royal Fusiliers, and the Lancashire Fusiliers.

Saghir Dere, another important position east of Krithia, was also taken by the allies.

There was an unconfirmed report near the close of the week that the allies had taken Krithia. Such a success would go far toward solving the problem of forcing the Dardanelles, as it would open the way to the road that leads to Kalid Bahr, Maidos, and the other Turkish strongholds barring the channel to the allied fleets.

On the Austro-Italian Frontier.

Italy's campaign has had for its main objective so far the protection of its own frontier against invasion. In following out this plan, Victor Emmanuel's forces have occupied all the offensive positions of the Austrians in the mountain passes for a distance of nearly 300 miles.

This strategy was forced upon the Italians as a result of their past defeats by Austria. When Vienna fixed the boundaries all the easily defended positions in the mountains were retained and Italy was given the southern slopes.

Weather conditions interfered with military operations on the Italian front during the week, giving the Austrians needed time to strengthen their defenses and bring up reinforcements. Indications are that Austria will content itself for the present in waging a defensive fight along its southern frontier while the Teutonic allies are pressing home their present advantage against the Russians in Galicia and Poland.

The Warfare at Sea.

The week closed with a naval engagement between the Germans and Russians in the Baltic sea east of the island of Gothland. In the first clash the Russians, according to Petrograd reports, successfully attacked two light German cruisers and a flotilla of torpedo boats putting one of the larger ships out of action. In a second encounter, Petrograd states, the Russian squadron attacked an armored German cruiser and several smaller vessels, forcing them to retire. After the fight German submarines failed in an attack on the Russian squadron.

The sinking of the Leyland liner Armenian and the loss of a number of American lives was the chief development in Germany's submarine warfare against England and her allies. For a time this incident was regarded as a serious development in the relations between the United States and Germany growing out of the sinking of the Lusitania. The character of the Armenian and its employment by the British admiralty removed it from all bearing on the submarine issue between Washington and Berlin.

Greater toll than ever before was levied by the German subsea boats in north European waters during the week.

DETECTIVES "SPEEDING UP"; REPORT 442 ARRESTS IN JUNE

Capt. O'Brien Announces That Last Month's Record Is Best Made in Two Years.

"We've been speeding up the bureau," was the way Capt. P. D. O'Brien of the detective bureau accounted for the fact his detectives had made more arrests in the month of June than had been made in any previous month of the last two years.

Capt. O'Brien gave honorable mention to Detective Sergts. Frank Aiken and George Parker, who stand highest in efficiency rank for the month. The thirteen detectives who stand lowest will be recommended for transfer according to Capt. O'Brien, in line with the policy of weeding out the least efficient.

According to the report, $31,589 worth of stolen property was recovered by bureau detectives during June. Four hundred and forty-two arrests were made, twenty-two more than in any month for two years. Of those arrested 127 were fined, 26 were sent to the house of correction, 49 held to the Criminal court, 5 went to the county jail, and 7 to the penitentiary.

Fifty-six of the arrests were made at the request of police of other cities.

TWO YEAR OLD PLEADER GETS HIS PAPA OUT OF JAIL.

Tells Judge Kersten His "Mamma and Granny and Me" Need Breadwinner, So Court Lets Him Go.

The world's youngest special pleader appeared before Judge Kersten in the Circuit court yesterday in behalf of Charles Thomas, who had spent the first three weeks of a six months' sentence for burglary in the county jail.

Two women assistants, Thomas' wife and her mother, went into court with the special pleader, who for better effect was perched on Mrs. Thomas' shoulder, his eyes on a level with those of the judge.

"'Lo, judge," was his informal greeting. "Please let my papa out. He'll be good, and mamma and granny and me needs him."

"I don't know which way to turn," supplemented Mrs. Thomas. "It's just as the baby says. We need Charley as our breadwinner."

Judge Kersten had Thomas brought before him.

"You have a remarkable little boy here," he said. "I've never seen a 2 year old as bright. He's accomplished something the best lawyer in the city could not have done. He's won your freedom. I'm going to place you on probation. Try to be worthy of your son."

MAN HELD FOR FORGERY.

Joseph Casper was arrested yesterday on a charge of operating a confidence game after attempting to pass an alleged forged money order on W. J. Kotzenberg, a druggist of 1001 East Forty-third street, in payment for an $8 camera.

Detective Sergeants Dennis Breen and John F. Purcell, who arrested him, allege the order was stolen from the drug store of Samuel Fox, 4200 Irving Park boulevard, last Thursday.

ALD. BUCK'S CHARGE AGAINST MAYOR TO BE INVESTIGATED.

Assertion Thompson Is Buying Votes in Council with Patronage May Be Subject of Inquiry.

The city law department has been asked to draft a resolution calling for an investigation of Ald. Robert M. Buck's utterances regarding Mayor Thompson and his use of patronage.

The resolution will specifically refer to the following remarks:

"If the mayor can throttle or buy enough councilmen with his patronage the investigation of school finances will never be properly made. We found out just which Republican and Democratic aldermen the mayor had bought with patronage or hopes of patronage."

It is expected that some administration alderman will introduce the resolution at the council meeting Tuesday night. It will provide for an investigating committee composed of five or seven aldermen. Mayor Thompson said on Friday he "wouldn't be surprised" if some council member proposed such an inquiry.

"I'm ready for any investigation," Ald. Buck said. "Some highly interesting facts may be developed."

JUSTICE OF PEACE FREED.

Noah J. Hennings, justice of the peace in Norwood Park, was discharged on a bribery indictment by Judge Theodore Brentano yesterday. The indictment was the remaining one of six, charging conspiracy and bribery in connection with the alleged conducting of a "blind pig," all of which were dismissed.

Chandler Was Months Ahead of the "New Models"

THIS is "announcement" time, it seems. You are being told about "new models" and lower prices. Well the new models and the lower prices had to come, for the Chandler pointed the way months ago—not with a cheapened car but with a car that had made good for thousands of owners, at a price that made the industry gasp.

CHANDLER $1295
The Pioneer Light-Weight Six

The Chandler announced its New Season's car in January, at a price of only $1295. That price was hundreds of dollars under the price of any other car of really similar character.

And now, in spite of price reductions and new models rushed out in the hopes of meeting the Chandler competition, the Chandler is still underpriced.

Such a car at such a price literally stampeded the trade toward the Chandler. And it continues alone in its leadership of the high-grade light six field.

Men who are motor-wise, men who know automobiles, know this is true. If there is anyone who does not know it is true, we ask the opportunity to show him and prove it.

All over the country the Chandler demand has been tremendous. The factory has reached a production of ten thousand cars for this year but even that great number will leave hundreds disappointed. Like other Chandler dealers everywhere, we have been "snowed under" with orders. In April and May we could not fill our orders by half. This month we are catching up pretty well with the demand. Our allotments for July and August are liberal and we expect to give prompt deliveries on orders received early.

CAVALRY 'TAKES' FORT SHERIDAN, WITH 1 WOUNDED

Col. Foreman's Brave Guardsmen of the First Now Occupy Famous Military Post.

BY FLOYD P. GIBBONS.

Fort Sheridan, Ill., July 3.—[Special.]—Under new government canvas and the observation of regular army experts the First cavalry Illinois national guard went into camp on the military reservation here yesterday. Civilians from office desks and factory benches garbed in the equality of regulation khaki put forth their best efforts on foot and in the saddle. The one goal of every one of the 800 men in the command is to win admiration in the eyes of their professional brothers.

On the high, broad, drill ground overlooking the lake the militiamen pitched their first issue of regulation pyramidal tents in company streets parallel to the lake shore. At the end of each street the horses were picketed. Col. Milton J Foreman, commanding the regiment, and the officers of his staff occupy tents at the north end of the field. Between them and the company streets are the cook tents.

Flags Along the Line of March.

The regiment reached the fort about 2 o'clock in the afternoon after an easy march of twelve miles from Evanston. The trip was made through the six or seven suburbs along the lake shore, where flags were unfurled and lawns were speckled with groups of spectators in honor of the passing cavalcade.

Shortly after the leather thud of the sunset gun, Regimental Adjutant Capt. Frank R. Schwengel issued the first official orders from the camp headquarters.

Maneuvers for This Week.

It was the program for the maneuvers which the militiamen will engage in for the next week. It follows:

Headquarters First Cavalry, Illinois National Guard, Chicago, Ill., July 2, 1915.—The following program, having been approved by the commander central department U. S. A., will until further orders be in all respects followed and complied with by all troops during this tour of instruction:

SUNDAY, JULY 4—Morning: Squad and platoon drill, mounted, close order. Afternoon: Retreat parade, church.

MONDAY, JULY 5—Morning: Squad and platoon drill, mounted, close and extended order. Afternoon: Troop instruction, close and extended order for Second and Third squadron. First squadron, dismounted pistol practice, retreat parade.

TUESDAY, JULY 6—Morning: Troop instruction, close and extended order. Afternoon: Receiving the governor of Illinois, field sports, review and parade.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 7—Morning: Problems in patrolling for all troops. Afternoon: Squadron drill, close and extended order for First and Second squadrons. Third squadron, dismounted pistol practice. Retreat parade.

THURSDAY, JULY 8—Morning: All day screening problem. "A regiment of cavalry operating in front of a division."

FRIDAY, JULY 9—Morning: Attack and defense of a position sham battle. Afternoon: Squadron drill, close and extended order for First and Third squadrons. Second squadron, dismounted pistol practice. Retreat parade.

By order of Col. Foreman.

FRANK R. SCHWENGEL, Captain, Adjutant.

Chaplain Stone Preaches Today.

Today the Rev. John Timothy Stone, chaplain of the regiment, will deliver his first camp sermon to the guards. Yesterday he took up the usual duties of the chaplain by becoming regimental postmaster and distributing the mail. The chaplain, who succeeded Dean Walter T. Sumner, found opportunity to offer much solace to soft rookies whose blisters are making the rides of the last two days memorable ones. The chaplain, who admits no recent acquaintance with the saddle before Friday, said that he had excellent reasons to appreciate their feelings.

One on Injured List.

The occupation of Fort Sheridan this afternoon was accomplished with only one wounded. Corp. Eskil Linberg of troop C was the only member of the "attacking force" who rode into the fort in the auto ambulance of the medical corps. An army mule had "ambushed" him during the night in the camp at Evanston.

Camp Edward F. Dunne was broken at 9 in the morning. After the tents, cooks' stoves, and other camp paraphernalia had been loaded on the twenty-six mule drawn army wagons, Col. Milton J. Foreman ordered the 800, with drawn sabers, to go over the entire camp site removing paper, sticks, and bit of rubbish. Later, as a part of their instruction in police duties, the men went over the field with rakes and pitchforks, and when they left one could not have told 800 men and horses had spent the night there.

Taste of Real Soldier Life.

The site was low and moisture seeped into the tents, making it a little uncomfortable for the men on their first night of "roughing it." Then, too, their mounts, many taken the day before from the shafts of moving vans, milk wagons, and other urban vehicles, were restless during the night owing to their unfamiliarity with the experience of being staked out on the picket lines. Several of the troops were called out in a body to stop stampedes, and it was during one of these midnight maneuvers that Corporal Linberg ran afoul of the stern of an army mule in the darkness. The mule greeted him with his left hind hoof on the point of the jaw. The auto ambulance was summoned and he was taken to the field hospital, where he was revived. As the column moved north through Wilmette he was the only occupant of the Red Cross ambulance at the rear.

LAW SLOW WHEN GIRL'S WRONGS GET ON DOCKET

Legal Aid Society Discourged Over Its Efforts in Behalf of Immigrant Client.

Workers for the Legal Aid society are distressed over the hindrances they claim to have encountered in prosecuting Katie Sauer, a midwife, and Harry Bitakus, a restaurateur, who were indicted June 29, 1914, upon the complaint of Antonia Koffman, a Polish immigrant.

They assert that the case was at first so often postponed, through one technicality and another, and then a new trial granted to both of the defendants after they at last had been found guilty on April 27, that they have about become discouraged.

"The Legad Aid society, which, with the aid of the Immigrants' Protective league, undertook this prosecution, has lost count of the continuances," asserted Miss Mabel Dolby of the Legal Aid society yesterday, "and I am afraid that the two defendants have a long lease of freedom despite our efforts.

Tells Story of Mistreatment.

"Antonia Koffman, the Polish girl, came to our society more than a year ago. She wished us to collect her wages from Harry Bitakus, a restaurateur at 531 South Clark street, and told us a long story of abuse. According to her charges Bitakus assaulted her shortly after her employment, then later they lived together for more than a year in furnished rooms over the restaurant. In July, 1913, Antonia says, she was taken to Katie Sauer, a midwife at 1508 Sedgwick street. Although Bitakus took a circuitous route first on the surface cars and afterward on the elevated, she remembered the place, she said, by the little stuffed dog in the window. The investigators for the Legal Aid society found the place by the dog, and Antonia afterward identified the midwife."

Aid Society Gives Help.

Finally, following the discovery of Bitakus' friendship for another girl, Antonia Koffman, according to the Legal Aid society, took her case to the latter organization and began efforts to prosecute the restaurateur.

These efforts, according to Miss Dolby, have met with many and almost continuous delays. Warrants were sworn out for Bitakus and the midwife Jan. 19, 1914. On April 1 Bitakus was held to the grand jury. Bitakus and the woman were indicted Aug. 24, the cases continued many times, with the Legal Aid society fighting to keep them on the docket, and finally tried on April 27, both the defendants being found guilty.

They appealed for a new trial. The hearing of these motions was delayed several times, but finally, on June 5, Bitakus was granted a new trial, and on June 10 Katie Sauer also was promised a new hearing.

Miss Dolby says that Bitakus has made many efforts to settle the case out of court.

Dies in a Hospital.

Mrs. Bertha Ziemba, 1759 West Twenty-second street, died in the county hospital yesterday from the effects of an alleged illegal operation. The operation was performed five weeks ago. She was removed to the hospital Wednesday and detectives obtained a statement from her in which she accused Mrs. Kunegunda Marchewazuk, a midwife, 1735 West Eighteenth street. Detectives arrested Mrs. Marchewazuk, but she denied the charges when arraigned in court Thursday.

The interest in tree culture and preservation which has been stimulated in the regions on the north shore and elsewhere in the vicinity of Chicago by the activities of the Garden club, makes Prof. Toumey's visit and address of especial import.

UTAH FIRST U. S. DREADNAUGHT WITH TURBINES

A rotogravure picture of the United States battleship Utah forms a special part of "The Sunday Tribune" today. This is the fourth of a series of striking pictures of American battleships that will be a regular part of "The Sunday Tribune."

The battleship Utah is one of the most efficient of our first line fleet, having made a fine record since its completion in August, 1911. It is the first of the American dreadnaughts to be equipped with turbine engines, its four screws having driven it at the rate of 21.04 knots per hour during its trials.

The Utah and its sister ship, the Florida, have a normal displacement of 21,825 tons, and carry a complement of 940 officers and men. They differ very little from the Delaware and North Dakota, except in beam, being three feet wider and displacing 1,825 tons more.

The batteries of these four ships are practically the same. The Utah carries ten 12.45 inch rifles and sixteen 5.51 inch rapid firers. It also has four six pounders, three one pounders, two machine and two three inch landing guns. It is also equipped with two submerged torpedo tubes. The main battery of twelve inch guns is placed in five turrets, two ahead and three astern.

The armor of the Utah consists of an eleven inch belt eight feet and one-half wide amidships, and a ten inch upper belt eight feet wide. The ends are protected by three inch armor, as is also the deck.

The turrets carry twelve inch armor and the turret bases eight inch. The amidship batteries and the casements are protected by six and one-half inch armor.

The Utah was laid down in March, 1909 at the Brooklyn navy yard, launched in December of the same year, and completed in August, 1911.

The four Parsons turbine engines are designed to develop 28,000 horse power. The fuel capacity of the Utah at a maximum is 2,520 tons of coal, which will produce a normal steaming radius of 6,720 miles at an average speed of ten knots.

BOYS IN COURT: "MORE FOOL ARRESTS," JUDGE'S VIEW.

Youths "Going Fishing" and One Who "Insulted a Policeman" Discharged by Dolan.

"Some more of those fool arrests," was the comment of Judge Dolan in the Boys' court yesterday when he discharged two boys arrested while on their way fishing and a third boy who had "insulted a policeman" who stopped and questioned him because he was carrying a bundle.

Anton Krowski, 19 years old, 2531 West Forty-sixth street, and Edward Horn, 20 years old, 4343 South Talman avenue, were going fishing at Lake Calumet when a policeman arrested them. Horn told Judge Dolan that the policeman "beat him up."

Ralph Kernes, 2422 Lexington street, was charged with "insulting a policeman." He was returning home from a Turkish bath, he explained, and was carrying a bundle of dirty clothes which aroused the policeman's suspicions. He was discharged.

HARRISONS MISS RICE BY CHANGE IN WEDDING HOUR

Brother of Former Mayor Fools Friends When He Marries Miss Sandberg.

William Preston Harrison, the bachelor brother of the five time mayor of Chicago, and Miss Ada Sandberg were married yesterday at the Auditorium hotel.

The bride and groom stole a march on many of their friends who had planned to shower them with rice, old shoes, and other auguries of happy future days. The wedding was set officially for 11:30 o'clock. But the clergyman and the members of the two families happened to be all ready at 10:30. The knot was quickly tied and the happy pair were out and on their way to the depot before the mischief bent friends arrived.

End of Pretty Romance.

The marriage was the culmination of a pretty romance that began several years ago when Mr. Harrison, who prided himself on being proof against young Mr. Cupid, went out to Wicker Park hall one night to hear some good music. It was the festival of the Norwegian Musical society. There he first met Miss Sandberg.

The Harrison family—the Chicago family—were all there. The former mayor led the procession, and he was beaming with happiness.

The bride was given away by her brother, Martin P. Sandberg. Miss Martha Sandberg, a sister, was the bridesmaid and the only attendant.

Former Mayor Presents Bracelet.

Mr. and Mrs. Harrison will spend their honeymoon in the west on a six months' tour of the beauty spots through and beyond the mountains. They will reside at the Auditorium hotel on their return.

Among the wedding gifts was a diamond bracelet which was the gift of former Mayor and Mrs. Harrison, who had come from their summer place at Huron Mountain club for the ceremony.

PRIMROSE PATH COSTS HIM WIFE

Following testimony concerning an episode in a Milwaukee resort, Judge Bowles of the Circuit court granted a divorce decree to Mrs. Camille E. Moon yesterday. By the terms of the decree John L. Moon, president of the American Appraisal company of Milwaukee and New York City, must pay Mrs. Moon $10,000 cash alimony and $125 a month for life.

"We sat around and drank for an hour or two," he said. "I wanted Mr. Moon to go home, but he wouldn't. I dozed for about half an hour. When I woke up I missed Moon. I went through the house looking for him. Finally I came to a room in which I found him with a woman."

Judge Bowles also granted a divorce to Mrs Georgia D. Pratt, with alimony of $150 a month. Mrs. Pratt testified her husband, a traveling man, spent much time in a room in Michigan avenue near Twenty-second street.

Walter Davidson Willett, president of the A. T. Willett company, teaming contractors at 75 East South Water street, was sued for divorce yesterday by Mrs Rose Frances Willett, who charges extreme and repeated cruelty. According to the bill, Mr. Willett is worth $100,000 and has an income of $1,000 a month.

On charges that her husband preferred another woman, Mrs. Mary Ryder Newton obtained a divorce before Judge John P. McGoorty yesterday. The defendant, Louis C. Newton Jr., is associated with his father in the Newton Paper Box company, 527 Jefferson street. Mrs. Newton is living at 6160 Winthrop avenue. Newton did not contest the suit, but was represented by counsel.

The decree was granted on the testimony of Mrs. Newton and two physicians. The name of the co-respondent did not appear in the evidence, nor was it mentioned in the bill, which was filed June 9.

DANCE ON GREEN AT ONWENTSIA

They're all trotting out at Onwentsia these cool, sunny afternoons. While the white helmeted polo players are putting their ponies through their paces for the coming tournament, the members of the "gallery" spend their time in fox trotting on a platform built on the lawn near the clubhouse. Daylight dancing on the green was inaugurated last Thursday and has proved such a success that almost as many summery frocks and white flannels may be found near the orchestra as in the chairs bordering the polo field.

It is something of an event when John D. Towne mounts his pony. Mr. Towne had two ribs broken in a fall during one of the matches a year ago. When he recovered he gave the pony he now uses a tryout. A lively pair of heels greeted him. The animal became so fractious when he tried to mount that, owing to his recent injury, he gave up the attempt for a while.

Blanket Over His Head.

Any one on the field can mount the pony except Towne. To none save his rider does he display his spirit. But once mounted there is no trouble at all, so Towne's groom has devised a novel plan of getting the player into the saddle. A large blanket shawl is thrown over the pony's head and twisted under his neck.

As long as the animal does not see the rider there is no resistance. The instant Towne is in the saddle, however, the blinder is removed and Mr. Pony cocks up a pair of ears and snorts, as much as to say: "You slipped one over on me, old top; but as long as you're up there you can stay until the next time."

On the other hand, John Borden's pony is the acme of friendliness. Before mounting Mr. Borden extends his hand and says, "Hello." A hoof is raised and placed in the waiting hand, and with a shake of the mane the animal nods a greeting.

Three Teams in Action.

Three teams were in action during the afternoon. All the members of the Jitneys were present, including Towne, Metcalf, Bryant, and Rader. John Borden had his three players, Coonley, Reynolds, and Judah, in action, while Lawrence Armour, Brewster, James Thorne, and Dudley Rutter also played.

The riders are becoming more accurate with their mallets, but have not yet gained top form. A change has been made in the handicapping on Borden's team. Reynolds has been made a one goal man, as he never played in a tournament, and, as a result, the Indians will now get only a two goal handicap from the Chicago Polo club in the first game of the tourney next Wednesday.

Club matches for special trophies will be played tomorrow and various combinations will be tried out. There will be no game on Tuesday in order to give the turf, which is in fine condition, a rest for the opening day.

The Kansas City ponies will be shipped here tomorrow morning and will be given a chance to limber up before the first game in which the Missourians play on Thursday.

ROBBED IN HOST'S HOUSE.

W. G. Earl Held Up by Men Who Follow Him, but Makes Escape.

Two men followed W. G. Earl of 1142 East Fifty-fifth street, a lineman employed by the Chicago Telephone company, into the home of Cornelius O'Brien, 1802 Wabash avenue, last night and seized him as he was about to enter the front room. They drew revolvers and, pointing them at him, demanded his money. Earl shouted for help and Mrs. O'Brien ran into the room. When she saw the robbers she screamed and they fled. Earl pursued them, but they eluded him after a short chase.

$200 Greater in Value

These two facts about the 1916 Hupmobile make this the most important announcement this company has ever made

Yet we have gone to greater lengths than ever before to maintain the Hupmobile reputation for quality. The new Hupmobile has twenty per cent more power, giving a quicker pickup, an even stronger pull on hills and in sand, and slower running on high speed. Note these mechanical features: Tungsten steel valves, disc clutch with 17 hardened steel plates, bronze-shell motor bearings, spiral bevel gears in rear axle, nickel steel axle shafts, vanadium steel mainleaf in springs, tubular propeller shaft. Compare these features with any car on the market.

The 1916 Hupmobile maintains the reputation of earlier Hupmobiles for economy. It will probably reduce the Hupmobile repair cost record of less than 1/4 cent per mile. Though twenty per cent more powerful, it is a fit companion for our earlier models in gasoline mileage, tire service, and oil consumption.

We have been told countless times that the 1915 Hupmobile is the easiest riding car ever built. The 1916 Hupmobile is more comfortable. The upholstery is deeper. Genuine high grade hair and improved cushion construction give the comfort of an old shoe. Springs are even more flexible and easy riding. Tires are large in proportion to weight. The 119-inch wheelbase cradles you over bumps and smooths rough roads.

The upholstery is genuine high grade leather. The open bodies are lined, with no highly polished surface exposed to scratches or mars. Floor-boards and clear running-boards are best linoleum. The tonneau is richly carpeted.

The 1916 Hupmobile has the famous Bijur system for electric starting and lighting. This equipment is used on some of the highest priced cars. Latest improved battery ignition—surest and simplest built—is used. In our own shops we build the genuine Golde one-man top and Collins quick-acting curtains. Five demountable rims, complete electric lighting equipment, latest and best speedometer, an exclusive design rain vision and ventilating windshield, Hupmobile patented tail light, genuine crown fenders, non-skid tires on the rear wheels, are regular equipment on the 1916 cars.

You get these many improvements at $1085 for the five-passenger touring car or roadster. Compared with our previous cars the 1916 model is not only a bigger value but it is offered to you at a reduction of $115.

These two results have been accomplished—first, by a fifty per cent increase in production for 1916, which means better materials at lower cost and greatly reduced overhead cost per car; second, by an increase of factory facilities and improvement of factory methods—new machinery and new processes enable the company to build better at lower factory cost; third, we are confident that no car on the market is sold on a narrower margin of profit than the 1916 Hupmobile.

5-Passenger Touring Car $1085

In considering this car, please remember that the Hupp Motor Car Company is one of the few manfacturers in the United States that have never built a poor car or had an off year. Wherever you go you will hear the Hupmobile spoken of as a car of most unusual value at its price. That is why "we believe the Hupmobile to be the best car of its class in the world." That creed of ours is fact to Hupmobile owners.

The reputation of quality in our cars is the biggest asset of our business. And we guard it most jealously.

So when we tell you the 1916 Hupmobiles are the best cars this company has ever built, and when its best cars are offered at a reduction in price, you may well take our word for it that you will make no mistake in selecting a Hupmobile.

But we don't ask you to accept our word alone.

Please let us show you in an actual merit test that the 1916 Hupmobile is just what we say—truly "the best car of its class in the world."

DUNNE MAY NOT BE A CANDIDATE FOR GOVERNOR

In That Event the Race Would Be Between Pindell and Congressman Williams.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Springfield, Ill., July 3.—[Special.]—Gov. Dunne has made no move towards an avowed candidacy for renomination by the Democrats next year. He may start again, and again he may be through with active politics. Upon his ultimate decision depends much of the pre-primary developments of the Illinois 1916 campaign, which is now in full blast.

At the same time administration Democrats, many of whom could be hostile on the slightest provocation, are getting around to the proposition that Gov. Dunne's renomination is not only logical but life-saving.

This is based largely upon the presumption that President Wilson will be renominated without opposition by the Democrats and that 1916 is no time for the Illinois Democracy to take a chance on a factional scrap, the result of which would be that Wilson could carry Illinois while the Democratic state ticket would lose out.

Pindell's Hat in the Ring.

If Gov. Dunne does not stand for another term—and it is doubtful if he will express himself before state fair time—the trend of state administration sentiment will be diverted gradually toward Harry M. Pindell of Peoria. It is now realized in Springfield that the Pindell candidacy is a sure shot proposition. It is well managed from the inside, and flies all the signals of the real thing.

Congressman at Large William E. Williams of Pike county is figured as the downstate candidate against either Gov. Dunne or Mr. Pindell. Congressman Williams, the politicians believe, will have the full and complete backing of the Democrats downstate, who are lined up politically with Roger C. Sullivan, National Committeeman Charles Boeschenstein, and State Chairman Arthur W. Charles.

State Campaign in Full Swing.

The state campaign opened with a bang Thursday morning as soon as the legislature had adjourned. Even before the formal sine die adjournment two formal candidacies were launched.

Howard Jayne of Monmouth announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for secretary of state. His campaign organization went on the job immediately and he is figured as a potential factor in the make-up of the state ticket.

State Representative Edward C. Perkins of Lincoln announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for state auditor, coupled with the claim that he has the nomination already assured.

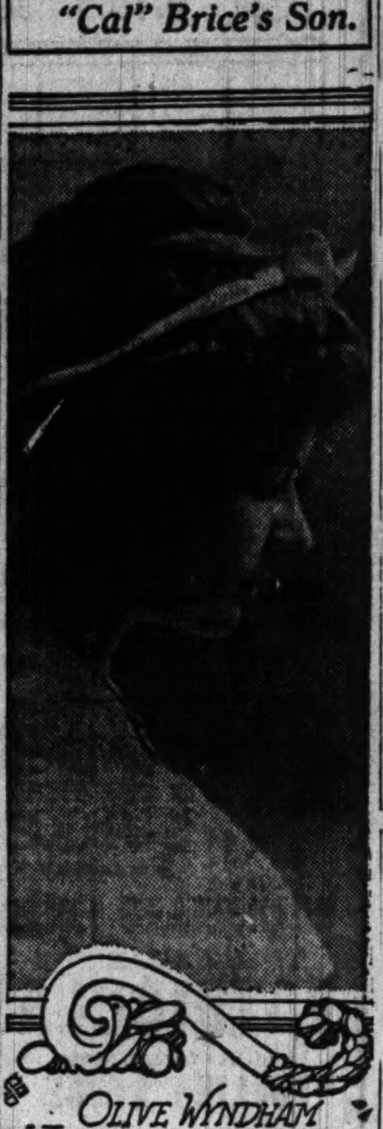
Speaker David E. Shanahan will be a candidate for state auditor if he should seek a place on the state ticket at all. Some Republicans have attempted to make it appear that he will go back to the house and again be speaker. It is known first hand that he will be a candidate for auditor or for nothing, and that the chances are for a state-wide fight between himself and Homer J. Tice.

Representative Tice was one of the formidable candidates for speaker during the late deadlock and during the senatorial campaign was the campaign manager for Senator Sherman.

Sherman Wants No Factional Row.

One of the significant developments from a downstate political viewpoint is that Senator Sherman and his immediate advisers are determined that the governorship and the makeup of the state ticket shall not enter into the elements of a factional row as affecting the Republican presidential nomination.

Actress to Marry "Cal" Brice's Son.



OLIVE WYNDHAM

New York, July 3.—The engagement of W. Kirkpatrick Brice, son of the late United States Senator Calvin S. Brice of Ohio, and Miss Olive Wyndham, an actress, has been announced. The marriage probably will take place during the summer.

MAYOR TO BEGIN DOWNSTATE WAR IN ALL DISTRICTS

Declaring that the Cook county fight in behalf of Col. Frank O. Lowden for governor and Mayor William Hale Thompson for national committeeman is won already, the city hall chiefs will launch their downstate campaign this week.

In their prospectus for the faithful ones now roped to the city hall chariot, nine of the fifteen downstate district congressmen are claimed to be riding comfortably in the Thompson-Lundin-Lowden wagon. These men and their districts are:

12—Charles E. Fuller, Belvidere.
13—John C. McKenzie, Elizabeth.
15—Edward J. King, Galesburg.
17—John A. Sterling, Bloomington.
18—Joseph G. Cannon, Danville.
19—William B. McKinley, Champaign.
21—Lorin Wheeler, Springfield.
22—William A. Rodenberg, East St. Louis.
24—T. S. Williams, Clay City.

Charles Ward and his brother, Harry, of Du Quoin have been given charge of "Egypt" and instructed to "bring home the bacon" before the Deneen forces can get into fighting trim.

Worked for Lorimer Crowd.

The Ward Brothers had charge of the organization work in southern Illinois for the former Lorimer machine and built up a formidable army of vote swingers in the old days. Most of that organization, or the main leaders in it in several of the far south counties, the city hall leaders now assert, can be relied upon to take the field on an hour's notice.

In the list of congressmen claimed to have been signed up for the Thompson-Lundin-Lowden slate appear some of the names of the downstate leaders who battled vainly through the memorable deadlock convention of 1904 for Lowden.

"Uncle Joe" Cannon was chairman of that convention, which finally resulted in the coalition of all the other candidates against Lowden and the nomination of Deneen. He then was one of the Lowden generals.

Others in Lowden Camp.

Sterling, Rodenburg, and McKinley also were outpost riders for the Lowden cause at that time, McKinley coming in from "Pash" Warner's district and soon after landing the nomination for congress after Warner was defeated for the nomination for governor, and former Attorney General Hamlin also pooled his votes with the coalition to defeat Lowden.

The Deneen leaders, who were not prepared for the suddenness of the city hall fight waged in Cook county, have hardly got their second wind as yet, but they laughed yesterday at the claims of the opposition.

Astounding Values-Astounding Prices

THE Chalmers Motor Company, with its new organization, even greater factory facilities, additional buildings, more men and still more capital, and with a quadrupled production is bringing out for the season of 1916 a series of cars the equal of which have never been offered before.

The Chalmers Company is the only leading manufacturer that is offering a new car for 1916 at a new price—in the medium-price class.

Others have either put out a new car at a higher price, the same old car at the same old price, or the same old car at a cut price.

Such prices at higher quality than ever before are only made possible by cutting out middleman's profits, buying for cash on definite specifications, utilizing new methods of manufacture and administration, working on smaller profits and greater production.

The Chalmers Motor Company has also inaugurated a new Chalmers Service Plan by means of which we are able to offer gratis to every new Chalmers owner service in the form of an interchangeable service coupon book, good for a definite amount of work—at any Chalmers dealers—anywhere.

Chalmers Six-40 $1275.00

This is the most remarkable motor car that has ever been offered for $1275. It is the lowest price at which Chalmers quality has ever been sold.

It is the only American stock car with valve-in-head overhead camshaft motor, the type that Europe was working on when war stopped production.

It is this type of motor that broke all records for 500 miles at both Indianapolis and Chicago speedway races, going at the terrific speed of 90 miles per hour at Indianapolis and 98 miles an hour at Chicago—the most gruelling test of motor car efficiency ever known.

This motor gives the car instant get away, wonderful flexibility, great power and economy.

The car rides like a Pullman.

It is the superior of cars that three years ago sold for $3000 or over. Be sure to come in and see it.

Seven-Passenger - - - - - $1550

This is the 1916 series of the popular Light-Six declared by thousands of enthusiastic owners to be the most satisfactory motor car they have ever owned. HUERTA AGAIN TAKEN BY U. S.; ROUNDUP ON Four Mexicans Arrested at El Paso; 15 Generals Will Be Seized.

OROZCO IN ESCAPE?

BULLETIN.

Juarez, July 3.—Convicted of attempting to induce officers and soldiers of the garrison to mutiny against Gen. Villa in favor of Huerta and Orozco, Maj. Salvador Rosa was executed by a firing squad late today. A crowd of Americans from El Paso, invited by the Juarez commanders, witnessed the execution. Maj. Rosa went to his death fearlessly.

El Paso, Tex., July 3.—In connection with a wholesale roundup of his adherents Gen. Victoriano Huerta was rearrested this afternoon on a new charge of violating the neutrality of the United States by trying to start a revolution in Mexico. The charge was brought against him in San Antonio.

Gen. Bravo, a Huerta officer, and three other Huertistas were arrested today. This marked the beginning of the wholesale roundup of Huertistas begun by federal agents.

The three others taken today are retained at the federal building. They are J. B. Ratner and Enrique Gorostieta, the former dictator's personal secretaries, and Gen. Caus.

None of those arrested could furnish the $5,000 bail demanded and all of them, including Huerta, were taken to the county jail. Huerta's bail now amounts to $30,000.

Huerta Protests Against Arrest.

While Huerta was being arraigned before the United States commissioner he asked to be heard.

"While I respect the laws of this country," said the former president of Mexico, "I must protest against the methods that have been used here since I was arrested. I gave the bond demanded. Then I was guarded like a prisoner who had not given bond. The doors and windows of my house have been kept open in order that guards might watch me and might listen to all I had to say to my friends and to my family even. Agents appeared from time to time in my house in search of those they would arrest."

Objects to Being Watched.

Huerta's eye flashed as he turned in the direction of the deputy United States marshal and personally directed to him an accusation of failure to treat with respect him or his family.

"Having held high position," Huerta continued, "it is natural that I should have enemies, and these are the ones who are making the trouble. I came here to visit my daughter and then go to San Francisco; but no, I am a revolutionist; I am a trouble maker; I must be arrested and my home turned into a prison. I cannot eat, cannot sleep, and cannot talk without espionage. I am mortified and my family is shamed by the situation in which I am placed."

Complains of Ill Treatment.

Huerta criticized Edward Bryant, deputy United States marshall, for what he termed "undue vigilance" after having given bond. "Had I not been placed in the circumstances in which I was," Huerta said, "I would have shot him."

Huerta did not then disclose the cause of this declaration. Later, in conversation, Huerta said that his anger was aroused when his little son was pushed from the running board of the automobile by Bryant as they started from the house. There was emotion in his voice and a tear in his eye as Huerta said:

"That is the first time I have permitted my temper to run away with me."

Other Adherents Face Arrest.

At least fifteen Huerta generals and other followers will be taken into custody, government officials stated.

Gen. Pascual Orozco, arrested with Huerta on conspiracy charges, disappeared today. Eluding six secret service men who have been guarding his apartments, Orozco was not to be found this afternoon, although the entire city was combed for him.

Word came late today saying that Orozco was at Valentine, Tex., not far from Marfa, Mexico. He intended to cross into Mexico tomorrow, the message said.

Gen. Huerta is known to have received [illegible] in cash from New York today.

Villistas Eager to Get Huerta.

Over in Juarez Villistas are talking of the day when Victoriano Huerta will face a firing squad. Despite reports from Washington that the state department will not grant Villa's request and extradite Huerta, the Juarez authorities today discussed the ex-dictator's fate at their [illegible]

"We won't execute him immediately," said Gen. Tomas Ornelas, commander of the garrison. "I'll see that he has a fair trial. A military court will be called to try him, and if he is found guilty he will face a firing squad. If he is acquitted he can go free."

Huerta Not Much Worried.

Huerta is not worried. He laughed today when the extradition case was mentioned. He would make no statement regarding it, maintaining the same silence he has observed on all political matters. He declared emphatically he had no intention of jumping his $15,000 bond.

"Why should I jump my bond?" he asked. "The fact that the government wanted the case continued last Thursday proves that it has a doubtful case. The delay was simply to gather evidence. I'll prove myself entirely innocent of any conspiracy when I am brought to trial next Saturday."

Three Mexicans Ordered Deported.

The Juarez firing squad will not be denied, however. If not Huerta, it will be Maximo Castillo, destroyer of the Cumbre tunnel; Gen. Rodrigo Quevedo, a Huerta general, and Jesus San Martin, a Castillo bandit, all ordered deported today by the immigration authorities. They probably will be turned over to the Juarez authorities, who say they will execute all three.

Gunther R. Lessing, Gen. Villa's attorney, was in Austin, Tex., today, pushing Villa's request for Huerta's extradition. Villistas here declared they would not be surprised to see Gov. Ferguson sign the papers.

Huerta Appeals to U. S. Supreme Court

El Paso, Tex., July 3.—Just before he left his home with the officers Huerta dictated a statement to the chief justice of the United States Supreme court. The message follows:

"I have the honor to inform you on the following affairs: That the representatives of the judicial department of the government in this city have, without just reason, molested me and my family here. I am already under arrest here under certain charges and have furnished bond with the local authorities. Now I have been rearrested.

"I respectfully ask an order from your court that your representatives here be instructed to tell me of the duties I am to perform and the conduct I must pursue in order that henceforth they may leave me and my family unmolested."

SUGAR MAN SAFE IN MEXICO.

Assurances of the safety of B. F. Johnston, president of the United Sugar company, reported some time ago to be in peril from Mexican revolutionists at Los Mochis, Mexico, were received yesterday by J. W. Nye at Lake Geneva, Wis. "Employes of the sugar company arrived at San Francisco on board the steamer Robert Dollar yesterday and reported that Mr. Johnston is perfectly safe and that Los Mochis is free from disorder," Mr. Nye informed The Tribune.

FOURTH'S FIRST FATALITY; CYCLIST KILLED BY TRAIN.

Machine Setter, on Holiday Outing, Fails to Look Out for Engine—Companion Escapes.

Swenson, who was a machine setter, had started for a motorcycle trip to Starved Rock with Charles Peterson. They were riding along a road in Plano which converges slowly towards the Burlington tracks and crosses them diagonally. Neither rider looked back to see if a train was coming. The noise of the locomotive rushing along in the same direction was drowned by the popping of the exhaust of the motors.

Peterson flashed across the tracks first. He escaped being struck by a few feet. Swenson was in the middle of the track when the pilot struck his machine and hurled it far out on one side of the right of way. He was dead when Peterson reached his side.

OWEN S. TILDEN ELOPES? RICH YOUTH GETS LICENSE.

Are you interested in marriage license No. 701,395—issued yesterday? It reads: "Owen S. Tilton, St. Louis, age 29; Ellen McNeills, St. Louis, age 31."

Owen Stanard Tilton was registered at the Congress hotel last night. He left word with the clerk he was not to be disturbed by reporters until today. Owen Stanard came into $700,000 in his own name about a year ago. It was part of the Tilton fortunes which have been swelled from year to year by a chain of flour mills throughout the southwest. At Amherst he was a crack athlete, and later helped keep St. Louis on the map as a throbbing metropolis.

Miss McNeills was a stenographer. It was rumored it was an elopement, although the pile of letters and telegrams in the Tilton mail box at the Congress would seem not to give it credence.

NOW are you interested?

PAVLOWA DANCES AL FRESCO

Anna Pavlowa last evening entered on her four weeks' engagement in Midway gardens, the occasion marking her first hot weather activity since coming to the United States in 1909. The chief novelty in her program was a ballet called "The Magic Flute." The accompaniment for her dances was played by her own orchestra. The audience, the largest to date of the Midway season, numbered 4,500 persons.

WILL BURY DIAZ IN FRANCE.

PARIS, July 3.—Though arrangements have not been made public, it was understood here today that the body of Porfirio Diaz, former dictator of Mexico, will be buried in Père Lachaise cemetery. Interment probably will be postponed several days, pending the arrival of friends and relatives of the former president.

"Bad Gang" Before Heap.

One girl was fined, a second was returned to the house of correction for violation of her parole, and seven boys were fined by Judge Heap in the Morals court yesterday on charges of disorderly conduct. They were arrested in a rooming house at Halsted street and Washington boulevard. A "bad gang," Judge Heap called the crowd.

SANE, ORDERLY 4TH ASSURED FOR CHICAGO

MAY RAIN TODAY.

Although showers are expected, the weather forecaster predicts agreeable conditions today. The temperature will drop slightly in the afternoon.

Sane Fourth patriotism—that new, intensive, self-contained sort of patriotism which needs no firecrackers and red fire to make itself apparent and leaves behind no trail of dead and crippled children—will obtain in Chicago today and tomorrow.

Today is the Fourth by the calendar, tomorrow the legal Fourth. In the old days the duplex holiday would have been hailed joyfully as a "double header" and there would have been forty-eight hours of noise, smoke, and accidents.

But the Sane Fourth has come to stay. This year advance indications of the resurrection of the one-time "insanity" were so slight that the Chicago Sane Fourth association, of which Marquis Eaton is president, made no special campaign.

Exercises in Churches and Parks.

Even the big parade, usually the tamest feature of the old fashioned Independence day celebration, is not on the program. Today there will be exercises in churches and public parks; tomorrow picnics and patriotic addresses.

The churches will have the first chance. In nearly every church the day will be recognized by patriotic sermons by the pastors and in many churches with exercises by the children.

At Olivet Memorial church, 1440 Sedgwick street, the blessings which American citizenship brings to all nationalities will be taught. Children will come into the church wearing the colors of the nationality under which they or their parents were born. They will leave wearing a United States flag thrown over the shoulders and covering all of the other national emblems.

Native Land Remembered.

At the evening service of the First Presbyterian church, Forty-first street and Grand boulevard, banners will be used representing the states of the union and one banner to represent those who are foreign born. As each person comes into the church he or she will be seated under the banner of his native state or country.

At the Grace Episcopal church, Oak Park, a brass band will furnish music and the attendants will be presented with flags.

Former Gov. Charles S. Deneen will deliver a patriotic address at the First Methodist Episcopal church, Englewood, at the evening service.

The Knights of Pythias will attend the Immanuel Baptist church, Twenty-third street and Michigan avenue, at 11 o'clock today and tomorrow will picnic at Fort Sheridan. The program provides for a moving picture entertainment, a baby show, and public ceremonial and drill by uniformed knights.

Programs at the Parks.

The Star Spangled Banner association will celebrate at Lincoln park at 2 and 3 o'clock. Bugle call, the singing of the "Star Spangled Banner," and addresses by James Edgar Brown and Judge Frank P. Sadler will be made.

Indian life will be presented in costume at Stanford park, West Fourteenth place and Union avenue. A band concert will be given.

The celebrations tomorrow will include everything from peace pageants to old fashioned picnics. There will be a Scotch celebration at Riverview Park grove, with races and Scotch dances. The graduating class of the Mont Clare school will give a peace pageant at Rutherford park, Mont Clare, at 3 p. m.

Members of the Danish-American association and their families will go to Kenosha, Wis., 1,000 strong this morning for their annual July 4 celebration. They will leave by boat at 8:30 o'clock.

At the Federal League Baseball park there will be fireworks displays tonight and tomorrow night. The Armstrong Improvement association has obtained permission from the board of education to have fireworks tomorrow night on the grounds of the Armstrong school.

Suburbs to Show Patriotism.

Practically all of the suburban towns will have elaborate exercises. At Lake Forest there will be a parade of police naval training cadets, First cavalry, bands, floats, decorated pony carts, and the fire department.

The Hinsdale Village league will have charge of the celebration in Hinsdale, which claims credit for being the first suburb to banish explosives and substitute a sane Fourth.

In Oak Park there will be celebrations in charge of the South Side Improvement club at Harvard and Clinton avenues and in charge of the Jackson Improvement club at Jackson street and Cuyler avenue.

Most of the clubs will have celebrations. The Chicago Yacht club will have a race of its mosquito fleet in the afternoon and dancing afternoon and evening. The Onwentsia club will have golf and tennis tournaments and a polo match with the team of Battery C, I. N. G.

A peace pageant will be the feature of the program at the Chicago Hebrew institute. At Albany Park there will be a puzzle contest, a popularity contest, an apple eating race, and other freak races; Judge Elect Charles M. Thomson will be the speaker. Indian life will be presented in costume at Stanford park, West Fourteenth place and Union avenue.

Bohemians will celebrate with a parade in the streets of the southwest side. The Teeny Weenies of The Sunday Tribune will be represented by children in the parade in Longwood.

Numerous fishing trips and visits to the country are being enjoyed. The persons on the streets yesterday without a suitcase or traveling bag appeared the exception. Some railroad officials estimated the railroads and boat lines would carry in and out of Chicago during the three days more than 1,000,000 Chicagoans.

Alden Kindred to Meet.

The Alden Kindred will meet tomorrow for a family reunion at the residence of E. G. Sears at La Grange. The Rothschil & Co. Employés' Social club will take a lake boat to Michigan City. Combined lodges of the Knights of Pythias will have a basket picnic at Fort Sheridan. There will be drills and addresses.

Judge Hugo Pam is to speak at the Maywood three day Sane Fourth celebration to be held in the village park. A large number of apprentice seamen from the United States naval training station at Great Lakes, Ill., and a large delegation of Modern Woodmen will take part. On Monday there will be a parade in which it is expected 10,000 persons will participate. There will also be an athletic contest between the bluejackets and Modern Woodmen. At 8:30 there will be a display of fireworks.

Country Clubs Will Combine Patriotism with Pleasure.

Independence day festivities began at all the various country clubs that surround Chicago on three sides yesterday, and the clubs are filled to overflowing for the week end.

At Onwentsia there will be polo events in rehearsal for the opening on Tuesday of the polo tournament for the Western Circuit cup offered by the Polo association, in which teams from the Kansas City Country club, the St. Louis Country club, Chicago Polo club from Wheaton, and Onwentsia will take part.

Aside from the polo events, which will occupy the greatest share of attention tomorrow afternoon, there are to be several Memorial day golf matches.

The John H. Hamline Memorial cup and a choice score cup are to be played for. These, with the annual match for the Bland Ballard Memorial cup, will be the chief events.

Luncheons will be given at the club house in honor of the men of the visiting teams and there will be outdoor dancing on the new dancing pavilion of which Onwentsia boasts.

At the Saddle and Cycle club there are to be exhibition swimming feats by Miss Anna Harris of New York and a number of mermaid friends in the new pool that is the feature this year of the club's innovations. There will be music this afternoon and a table d'hôte dinner-dance tomorrow evening.

Members of the Chicago Yacht club are planning a relay race by the mosquito fleet of the club, which all members and their guests are invited to witness from the newly enlarged veranda of the clubhouse. There will be a tea-dance from 4 until 7 and a dinner-dance at night, with dancing during the dinner, which is a feature now popular with the membership.

At the South Shore Country club a tea-dance has been planned for tomorrow afternoon, with a dinner-dance at night and a patriotic celebration. The club, which is now in the throes of rebuilding, finds its various summer activities highly flavored with a delightful informality, since the old clubhouse is overtaxed much of the time. There will be music this afternoon at the club.

Edgewater Golf club is planning a patriotic celebration which is to have the "Sane Fourth" as a feature. There will be a flag raising and patriotic music. There will be golf and a tea-dance for the day and a dinner-dance at night.

At the Indian Hill Country club the day is to be celebrated with interesting golf matches, a special luncheon, and a dinner-dance at night. The Indian Hill club, with its low lying clubhouse, its splendid links, enlarged this year, and its futurist furnishing finds itself living through a most popular second summer.

The Chicago Golf club at Wheaton will have to give up a number of its members for the polo tournament gallery at Onwentsia. But today there will be a special luncheon, golf, and music, and tomorrow there will be a dinner-dance for those loyal members who find polo no novelty.

Midlothian Country club will have golf features on its program for tomorrow, with special music and a dinner-dance in the evening.

At the Hinsdale Golf club there will be a special dinner-dance planned for the evening and golf and tennis will form the major part of the day's celebration.

The new clubhouse of the Park Ridge Country club, which was designed by Frank Lloyd Wright, will be formally opened tomorrow evening with a dinner-dance. The patronesses of the dance will be Mrs. E. E. Emerich, Miss Mildred Carstens, Mrs. A. J. Buchheit, and Mrs. Aubrey Stauffer.

There are a number of informal house parties being entertained at Lake Forest over the Fourth.

Mr. and Mrs. Leeds Mitchell of Lake Forest have with them as their guests Mr. and Mrs. Donald Wegg.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Aldis have Miss Harriet Monroe and Martyn Johnson of the Little theater as their guests over the Fourth.

Mr. and Mrs. James Ward Thorne have a few friends with them from the city over the Fourth.

At Lake Geneva Mr. and Mrs. John J. Mitchell of Ceylon court are giving a house party for their daughter, Miss Louise Mitchell, and Misses Rosalie and Beatrice Selfridge of London.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin Ryerson, who have just this week opened their Lake Geneva place, have as their guests over the Fourth Mr. and Mrs. James A. Field.

Another large house party for the day's celebration is that given by Miss Harriet Lowden, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank O. Lowden, at Sinnissippi Farm, Ill.

At Elmhurst Col. Charles Page Bryan and Mr. and Mrs. John Barton Payne have a few friends today, and tomorrow they are entertaining a large party of guests for a genuine celebration at Byrd's Nest, their summer estate there.

Among the residents at the Chicago Golf club at Wheaton who will entertain are Mr. and Mrs. Addison Stillwell, who are occupying the Taber place for the summer, and Mr. and Mrs. Mason Phelps, who have taken a house adjoining the Jarvis Hunt place.

J. O. ARMOUR HAS ADVENTURE WITH SUBURB POLICE

Chief of Police Peterson of Winnetka summoned his entire force before him and had one of the three call the roll.

"Men," he said, "you have served your city well. This is a day you will long remember. In fact, it is a real occasion," and then he drew a roll of bills from his pocket.

The three shifted uneasily from one foot to the other. It wasn't pay day. They searched their memories in vain for a reward arrest.

Get 'Em All Alike.

"You are to take this money and go to Chicago and buy three new uniforms," continued the chief. "Thus Winnetka shows her pride in her guardians of the law. There is only one thing I ask. Get all three uniforms alike."

There were grins on the faces of Patrolmen Fred Winters, J. Damlow, and "Buck" Freeman as they set out for Chicago. It was a holiday that comes not often to the police force of Winnetka.

Back they sauntered toward evening with jaunty step. Blue coated chests were protruded more prominently than Winnetkans ever had seen them before. The three stopped at Sheridan road and North avenue, the most conspicuous corner in town, to assail the critical eye of Winnetka en masse. Then and there they planned to make themselves worthy of their new regalia, to do themselves proud in the eyes of their chief.

Mr. Armour Interested.

"We must do our duty," remarked Freeman, stooping to straighten the crease of his trouser leg.

"Here comes a machine now," warned Winters.

The three swaggered out into the road and three upturned palms blocked the vision of the road to the chauffeur. The machine purred to a stop. J. Ogden Armour leaned from the car to learn the cause of the delay. Smiling and beaming like three bridegrooms, the trio informed him he had broken the speed laws. His protest of only twelve miles an hour fell on unhearing ears.

How About Drinks?

When the case was called, Mr. Armour's attorney told Justice of the Peace Carlton Prouty the police force had been drinking. Chief Peterson became indignant. He summoned the force.

"Did you get a drink in Chicago after you bought the uniforms?" he asked.

"I should say not," replied Freeman.

"Well, yes," interrupted Winters. "I remember we had a wee drop in Madison street."

"No more?"

What's That Old Song?

Damlow was called.

"When we were all dressed up we just dropped into a saloon near the depot and had three drinks, I remember," he said. "Then we came out to Winnetka and arrested Mr. Armour."

When satisfied the car had been traveling at the tremendous speed of twelve miles an hour, the justice dismissed the case, and Chief Peters, fizzing over with wrath, summoned the force into his private office and told them what he thought without stopping to call the roll

NO CHANGE IN CONDITION OF ARCHBISHOP QUIGLEY.

Rochester, N. Y., July 3.—[Special.]—No important change in the condition of Archbishop James Edward Quigley of Chicago was noted today by physicians in attendance on him at the home of his brother here, Chief of Police Joseph Quigley.

It was one week ago today that the archbishop came here seriously ill. The sick man slept most of the day. For the third time since his illness the sacrament of supreme unction was administered to him today. Bulletins are issued several times daily by the physicians in attendance. One bulletin said: "Although he appears stronger, his condition is very critical."

The archbishop sleeps fairly well, and in the last twenty-four hours has been able at times to take nourishment. He was able to talk with his private physician, Dr. T. J. Conley, but no effort was made to disturb him as the slightest excitement might cause a fatal stroke.

Telegrams and telephone messages continue to pour in.

MACVEAGH HOME LEASED TO NEW YORK DRESSMAKER.

Lady Duff-Gordon, who is "Lucille Ltd.," a fashionable New York dressmaker, has leased the Franklin MacVeagh residence at Lake Shore drive and Schiller street for a period of five years at an annual rent of $12,000. The dressmaker has the privilege of extending the lease for another five years at an annual rent of $15,000 and also has an option of purchase within two years at $250,000. The house is rented unfurnished.

"O, I hope it isn't true; but, really, I know nothing about it except what I read in the papers."

With true conservatism families living along the drive are awaiting "official information" regarding the lease. Exactly what form this "official information" is expected to take is a matter of opinion; but it must be "something more reliable than newspaper talk."

Mrs. Potter Palmer, whose home is just across the street, is out of town, as is Mrs. S. E. Barrett, who owns the house next door to the north. Further north are the homes of Harold O. Howard and Archibald Freer.

CITIZENS RAID GLENCOE "PIG"; TRAP MARSHAL

AFTER EVANSTON LEAD

Fashionable Glencoe on the north shore, wearied of the musical and the dansant, welcomed a new form of social diversion last night—the blind pig surprise party.

Two dozen citizens gathered at the home of Mayor Albert McRae at 3 o'clock. Two hours later the village, already legally "dry," was actually so. Three bootleggers, one of them the village constable, were under arrest charged with selling liquor without a license, and dozens of cases of beer and barrels of wine and whisky had been carted to the town hall as evidence.

The Glencoe raids followed close on the heels of raids by deputy sheriffs on two of six or more blind pigs outside of Evanston which were exposed in yesterday's Tribune. The raids by four of Sheriff John E. Traeger's deputies were made during the afternoon while the sheriff himself was busy explaining that he could not hope to stamp out the illicit liquor traffic in Cook county because "it was not his business to police the county."

The Glencoe raids follow an investigation of several months on the part of city officials. Evidence has been collected showing numerous violations of the dramshop act and prosecutions will follow one another, it is declared, until the bootleggers have been driven from the town.

Citizens Act as Deputies.

The citizens were hastily sworn in as special policemen and proceeded in three groups to the two blind pigs that were to be raided. Six automobiles were pressed into service. Some of the "special" policemen were armed with revolvers, but the larger part held canes or sticks. A few carried automobile wrenches.

The party under the leadership of "General" Fred D. Jackson, an attorney, left the waiting automobiles a block from the two story house of Peter Lensino at Vernon and Jefferson streets. Indian file, they trailed through the underbrush and wood which covers the southwestern section of the town until the house was surrounded.

Deputies Are Active.

The home of Constable Hugh A. Hammer, for many years a resident of Glencoe, on Park street, the main thoroughfare, was not raided. He was placed under arrest, however, to face trial for numerous violations of the law reported by investigators. All of the prisoners were arraigned before Justice of the Peace Roland Hurford and their cases continued.

Notices offering $50 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of any other bootlegger will be posted in Glencoe today by order of Mayor McRae.

In the home of Bertano Constantino, a few blocks away on Monroe street, a similar array of beer cases was found. Five Italians there were placed under arrest. No difficulty was experienced in rounding up any of the men at either place. William Schnorr, one of the special deputies and a Glencoe business man, was not accustomed to performing arrests. He took part in the raid at Constantino's.

Reporters on Trail.

Tribune reporters were again on the trail of bootleggers west of Evanston last night. They found two more places, in addition to those discovered the previous night, where liquor was being sold illegally.

In the frame house owned by Al Tichel in Gross Point six bottles of beer were purchased. The doors of the place were wide open and a dozen men were drinking in the room, at one side of which stretched a long bar.

The disclosure by Tribune reporters of the blind pig run near Evanston by Maurice Smith on Fairview avenue prompted Deputy Sheriff Emil J. Changelon to arrest Smith early in the day. After he had brought Smith to Chicago and lodged him in jail he returned to Evanston, and, accompanied by Deputy Sheriffs Edward O'Donnell, James A. Frawley, and O. T. McCormick, raided the place conducted by the Brosius family on Main street, just west of the drainage canal.

Flee Across Fields.

As the deputies hurried into the saloon several customers lined against the bar ook to their heels across the fields. A few shots fired in the air caused three of them to stop, and they were arrested. Valentine Brosius was taken into custody as keeper. His brother, Martin, said he was going to hitch up his horse to accompany the deputies to the Evanston police station. He disappeared, and a few moments later was dragged out from under several bales of hay in a manger. He was taken along and booked as an inmate, together with the other three, who gave their names as Carl Gunther, William Schmidt, and Joseph Moss.

Traeger "Passes Buck."

Samples of liquor and beer found in the place were taken by the deputies, but all said they could not prove the men had been drinking beyond the fact that beer glasses were found on the bar.

Sheriff Traeger said police duty was not his business, and that it would be impossible for him to drive illicit dram shops out of the county. He placed the blame on the local town constables and the justices of the peace, "who refuse to impose severe fines, even if we present the evidence."

Justices of the peace in Evanston indignantly denied the imputation of the sheriff that they failed to do their duty in blind pig cases.

"If the sheriff says we are to blame for conditions," said William J. Schatz, "he is a falsifier. He is the one responsible. During the last year I have only had two cases, and in those there was absolutely no evidence to warrant a conviction. It appears the sheriff and his men do not want to get the evidence."

"Blind pigs cannot be driven from the county," said Mr. Traeger. "I have raided some of the places mentioned in THE TRIBUNE, and I raid them whenever I get evidence aginst them. A number of my men do nothing else but scour the county for blind pigs and gambling games.

"It does not come within my province to police the county. I have about 108 deputies and they are engaged in serving writs and in other work in connection with the courts. I cannot station them in the blind pig districts to watch the bootleggers."

"Can't Spare Men."

"It wouldn't require but two or three deputies to go the rounds west of Evanston and keep the places closed, with the result that they would be forced out of business, would it?" was suggested to Mr. Traeger.

"Oh, goodness, yes," he replied. "It would take 1,000 men. But even if it didn't, I can't spare my men for the work."

READING COMPANY WINS OUT IN U. S. DISSOLUTION SUIT.

Philadelphia, Pa., July 3.—The United States District court today rendered a decision in favor of the defendant in the government suit to dissolve the Reading company and to separate the New Jersey Central railroad from the Reading.

Deciding that on the evidence the Reading railway and the Reading Coal and Iron company are distinct and separate corporations and did not violate the commodity clause, the opinion of the court further said:

"Where a corporation is a mere screen for an individual, or where one corporation performs a similar office for another, the device has not been allowed to stand in the way of justice and fair dealing.

"But we may safely say that in practically all such instances the element of fraud or bad faith is to be found, and it is certainly rare to find a situation where such an element is secure from successful attack. The cases already decided by the Supreme court make the distinction between good faith and bad faith.

"If, then, the government can succeed in the present case, it must offer evidence to satisfy the rules laid down by these decisions; and this brings us to consider what facts have been proved.

"That the law has been consciously and deliberately violated we do not believe, and decline to find. But as the commodities clause does not make the carrier's state of mind an essential element in the offense, the question is still open whether the Reading railway and the Coal and Iron company, whatever their intention may have been, have, in fact, so conducted their affairs as to violate the law."

AGED MOTHER OF MUSSEY SEEKS TO ENJOIN DAUGHTER.

Wants Mrs. Helen M. Shaw Restrained from Disposing of Forrestville Avenue Property.

Mrs. Asenath E. Mussey, mother of William P. Mussey, owner of a billiard hall at 67 West Madison street, filed a bill in the Circuit court yesterday asking for an injunction restraining her daughter, Mrs. Helen M. Shaw, from disposing of or collecting the rents from certain property at 5087 Forrestville avenue.

Mrs. Mussey is 80 years old and is described in the bill as being "feeble and infirm." She charges she transferred title to the Forrestville property and 253 acres of land in Du Page county to Mrs. Shaw, who lives in Staten Island, N. Y., with the understanding that the daughter was to sell them and turn the money over to her. The property was turned over to Mrs. Shaw, she sets forth, because the daughter informed her the son and Mrs. Kathryn McCoy Mussey were about to start legal proceedings to divest her of it.

A similar injunction is asked in regard to property at 713 Grace street, to which Mrs. Shaw obtained title by means of a transfer of the Du Page county land. A receiver is asked to take charge of the property pending litigation.

OREGON FIRM USED MAILS TO DEFRAUD, IS ALLEGED.

Charged with Selling Million Dollar Treasury Stock on Patents It Did Not Own.

Portland, Ore., July 3.—On the eve of the trial next Tuesday of the officers and salesmen of the United States Cashier company on charges of using the mails to defraud, Joseph Hunter, one of the salesmen under indictment, appeared in Judge Bean's division of the federal court today, withdrew his plea of not guilty and entered a plea of guilty.

The government charges that the company sold all its treasury stock of $1,250,000 for more than $1,000,000 on the fraudulent representation that it owned the patents to five change making machines which it purposed manufacturing.

Bonne Terre, Mo., July 3.—One man was killed and three were injured at a picnic at Desloge, Mo., near here, today when a fight occurred at the close of a debate on prohibition between G. O. Nations of Farmington and Congressman Meeker of St. Louis.

Sam Doss, deputy sheriff, was cut about the throat by Otto Huitt. The deputy sheriff shot and killed Huitt. William Allen was wounded in the hip, and G. R. Flack was slightly wounded in the right hand.

FORD TO BUILD TIRE PLANT WITH MODEL CITY FOR MEN.

Detroit, Mich., July 3.—[Special.]—The erection of a factory in which all tires used on Ford automobiles will be manufactured and the building of a blast furnace and a motor plant, all to be surrounded by a model city for the employés, are among several projects to be undertaken soon, according to an announcement by Henry Ford today.

UNIVERSITY LAW CITED TO EXPEL CHICAGO SALOON

28 Places Near Broadway and Devon Threatened by Interpretations.

If Corporation Counsel Richard S. Folsom follows the opinions of the city law department on previous occasions he will hold with the Chicago Law and Order league that twenty-eight saloons in the vicinity of Broadway and Devon avenues are operating in violation of the law.

Mr. Folsom's assistants yesterday made a search of the files of the office. They found two formal opinions directly bearing on the interpretation of the charter of Northwestern university prohibiting saloons within four miles of "the location of the university."

These opinions hold that the four mile zone is determined by measuring in a straight line from the boundary of the university grounds. The twenty-eight saloons in question are within a four mile zone laid out in this manner, according to measurements made by engineers from the Northwestern university.

How About Loop?

The suggestion was made that the prohibition might also apply to the territory surrounding the university law school at Lake and Dearborn streets and the medical college at Dearborn and Twenty-fourth streets.

Such an interpretation would abolish all the saloons in an area of about sixteen square miles, including the loop district. The opinions of the corporation counsel's office, however, do not bear out the contention.

The most recent opinion of the city law department, signed by William K. Otis and George W. Miller, assistants to former Corporation Counsel Brundage, was submitted to John D. Riley, superintendent of maps, May 6, 1907.

Part of Previous Opinion.

It says in part:

"It will be seen that the statute refers to the location of said university, and it will be presumed that the legislature was aware of such location at the time this amendment was passed.

"The conclusion reached in the decision of Judge Tuley is that the four mile limit shall be measured in a straight line from the outer edge of the university grounds, and while that decision is not binding, except as regards the purpose for which it was rendered, it is entitled to much respect."

Air Line Measurement.

Maj. Edgar B. Tolman and John W. Beckwith advised former Mayor Harrison on Nov. 7, 1904, that the measurement would have to be made on an air line instead of by the "shortest public road."

Using measurements submitted by the president of the Evanston Municipal association, Maj. Tolman came to the conclusion that the dry territory extended 1,487 feet south of Devon avenue on Clark street and 1,154 feet south of Devon on Broadway.

STATE HEALTH OFFICIAL TELLS OF JOLIET EPIDEMIC.

Rigid Quarantine Enforced by Illinois Board Justified by Results, According to Report.

Springfield, Ill., July 3.—The rigid quarantine enforced at Joliet by the state board of health in combating a serious threatened epidemic of scarlet fever has justified itself by the results attained, according to Secretary Drake of the state board of health.

A summary of new cases reported in Joliet showed that at the close of the week ending May 22, the day before the state assumed control of the situation there at the request of the local authorities, thirty-four new cases of fever had been reported. The next week there were four cases less. It was found necessary to close the schools, churches, moving picture theaters, and other places of public gathering to all children under 16 years of age.

The result was highly satisfactory to the authorities and townspeople. There was a gradual diminution of new cases until in the week ending June 26 but one new case was reported. The battle was not won without difficulty, however, for despite splendid coöperation from the educational force, the police, business men's organizations, the local press, and the medical profession of Joliet, Dr. Crawford, inspector of the state board of health in charge at Joliet, found it necessary to cause the arrest of some of the most prominent citizens of the city for quarantine violations.

"This experience has proved costly to Joliet business interests," says the report, "the loss sustained being amply sufficient to maintain a well organized health department for many years. It should be a lesson to every other city in Illinois."

STORES SLOW TO GIVE EMPLOYES HALF-HOLIDAYS

Some optimism and some disappointment is shown in a Saturday half holiday report just issued by the Juvenile Protective association. The work of the association on the half holiday closed with the first Saturday in July.

The optimism comes because of indications of a growing tendency on the part of retail firms to eliminate Saturday afternoon work and evening work. The disappointment arises in the large number of firms, some of them employing thousands of persons, who have not consented to allow their employés a weekly half holiday.

211 Promise Half Holiday.

Workers of the association canvassed the district bounded by and including Lake street, Michigan avenue, Van Buren street, and Fifth avenue, with the addition of Wabash and Michigan avenues to Seventh street. Only ground floor and retail stores were visited.

Out of 702 such stores in the district 211 promised to furnish a half-holiday for at least two months during the summer. There are 491 stores which are open at least six full days a week, summer and winter.

Drug stores, restaurants, cigar stores, and saloons, as well as barber shops, cleaning and dyeing concerns, and offices for the sale of goods not on the premises, as real estate or brokerage offices, were not included. It was found that the most liberal holidays are granted by the firms which sell both wholesale and retail, as the shorter hours customary among wholesale houses prevail.

Men's Furnishing Stores Firm.

"There is no hope for the Saturday half holiday," reads the report, "in the numerous men's furnishings and hat stores, which are open nightly until 7 or 9 o'clock and until 10 p. m. Saturday, or in the clothing stores, which are sometimes open Sunday morning. The unreasonable demand of the man downtown for the opportunity to shop at all hours is only equaled by the similar unreasonableness of housewives in residence districts, which keeps the neighborhood stores open several nights a week—and often every week day night—and Sunday mornings.

"The result is that these retail store employés complain it takes them so long to earn their living that they have no time left to live. Another result of these long hours in loop specialty stores and in outlying retail establishments is that they furnish the five great loop department stores which do not yet grant the Saturday half holiday with an excuse for continuing their refusal to do so."

SUES FOR $10,000 DAMAGES; HIT BY MOTOR TRUCK BUS.

Ivan Doseff, Supervisor of Playgrounds, Alleges He Was Struck by Auto Car During Strike.

An echo of the street car strike was heard yesterday when Ivan Doseff, a supervisor of playgrounds, brought suit for $10,000 damages against Edward and Ivan Lookholder, soda fountain dealers at 1235 Wabash avenue.

Attorney Harvey L. Cavender, representing Doseff, said that during the strike a motor truck belonging to the Lookholders, which was being used for carrying passengers, struck Doseff while he was riding on a motorcycle. Doseff alleges personal injuries.

Suit for $5,000 was brought against Joseph and Mrs. Lizzie Miller, proprietors of a warehouse at 4117 Broadway, by Jackson Tarantina. Attorney Walter M. Farmer, representing Tarantina, said his client will allege false imprisonment and malicious prosecution. He said Tarantina was held at a police station on suspicion of having taken a tray of jewelry which afterwards was found intact in the warehouse, where evidently it had been misplaced.

The Great Russian Army in Battle

In The Chicago Tribune Animated Weekly

Mr. McCormick, "The Tribune" man, is seen chatting with the war lords as they await the arrival of automobiles to carry them to the firing line.

This picture shows a company of Russian soldiers making their last stand behind the one remaining wall of a building in the outskirts of the beleaguered fortress of Przemysl. You see the men fighting behind the wall, shooting through apertures that they and the enemies' shells have made. You see men who can find no hole to shoot through clamber to the top of the tottering wall to get a shot at the foe. And you see the men, as they are hit, drop from the wall and fall, dying or dead, to the ground.

GREAT PICTURES OF CHICAGO BOY SCOUTS. There are nine companies of boy scouts in the city of Chicago. The pictures in THE TRIBUNE ANIMATED WEEKLY show a company of them on board Steamship Carolina on their way to their annual encampment at Whitehall, Michigan. On the boat you see Captain McGarity showing the boys how to use the telegraph, how to steer the boat, how to make sailor's knots, how the life boats are handled, and other nautical technique. You see the boys ready for their march at Whitehall. You see them scampering down for their morning swim. After their plunge they march back to breakfast. The picture closes with the boy scouts' salute.

There has never been an idea that has grown so rapidly among the youth of America as the Boy Scout idea. Within the last few months this patriotic movement has spread like wildfire. Maybe your boy is a scout. If he isn't he wants to be. This is a particularly interesting picture at this time, and if there were no more in The Tribune Animated Weekly than it you could not afford to miss it.

CHINA BELIEVES JAPANESE PLAN TO TAKE COUNTRY

BY OSCAR KING DAVIS.

[STAFF CORRESPONDENT OF THE TRIBUNE.]
[Copyright: 1915: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PEKING, China, June 1.—If one may judge of the feeling in China over the result of the negotiations on the Japanese demands by the sentiments expressed by the vernacular newspapers, there is complete unanimity as to Japan's purpose to absorb China, and almost complete unanimity in criticism of the government for yielding without a fight.

Among men who have spent years in China and have watched the development of a vernacular newspaper press opinions differ as to the extent of the influence now wielded by that institution.

It is to be remembered that the native press of China is of very recent growth. Fifteen years ago there were scarcely a score of newspapers printed in Chinese in the whole empire. It was only about twenty years ago that the telegraph was first introduced into China, and it was that new means of communication between province and province and between city and city which led to the establishment of the vernacular newspapers.

Shows Awakening of China.

The growth of the institution has been fairly rapid, and is one of the most significant facts of the awakening of China. There are now about a thousand Chinese newspapers in the whole country and they are well scattered through all the eighteen provinces.

None of them has yet reached anything like the position of power and influence enjoyed by so many American and English newspapers.

None of them has achieved anything remarkable in the matter of circulation.

But many of them have widening circles of readers and of influence, and it is indicative of the manner in which they serve to spread information quickly among the people that a simple little paragraph announcing the holding of a public meeting for the discussion of the present crisis has resulted, on two days' notice, in an attendance of a hundred thousand persons at the meeting.

"What Japan is actually aiming at," says one of the Peking native papers, the Yahsiya Jih Pao, "is the overthrow of the balance of power in the far east and the monopolization of the rights hitherto granted to Great Britain and other powers.

Desire to Absorb China.

"Her desire to absorb China is clearly indicated in the demands for the monopoly supply of armaments and the appointment of military, political, and financial advisers. . . . As to her designs on the other powers, we see that she has already gotten rid effectively of Germany by occupying Kiaochow and appropriating all the properties of the latter

"Her recent friendly offers of big guns and officers to Russia is a dagger hidden beneath the robe. For when Russia is fully occupied in the West Japan is endeavoring to consolidate her position in Mongolia.

"The Fukien demands Japan openly declares to be for the purpose of checking America, while it does not take very much wisdom to see that the Yangtse demand is anti-British through and through. The suppression of China by Japan at this critical moment is, therefore, the suppression of America and the European powers in the far east."

"Subjugation of China is perhaps an easy thing," says this paper, "since Japan's army and navy are decidedly China's superiors.

Predicts World Opposition.

"But Japan should not forget why Napoleon met his final defeat. . . . What cry the world will raise when the opportune time comes nobody can say. It is certain, however, that the unusually aggressive policy will serve only to arouse suspicion and opposition from the world powers when their attention can be safely taken off Europe.

"This may take some time, but come it will, and when that is done Japan's days will be numbered. Japan may be now deceived as to the real cause of safety. She may say that her safety lies in her army and navy, but that is not really the case."

The paper goes on to say that the real safety of Japan now lies in the concentration of attention on Europe, and to ask whether Japan will be able to contend with the other powers when she shall have taken full possession of China.

In another article the same paper discusses Japan's veracity and strategy, and asks some pertinent questions.

Japan's Pretense of Fairness.

"Although it is public knowledge," it says, "that the Japanese demands badly conflict with the principle of equal opportunity and the open door, Japan still denies the facts and puts forth instead a fine sounding phrase about the 'maintenance of peace in the far east.'

"In the same way Japan uses a catch phrase to describe her deliberate attempt to destroy the independence and integrity of China, calling it the 'maintenance of the integrity of China.'

"Now, if the demands are really not in conflict with the principle of equal opportunity and the open door, why did not Japan make them in a time of peace instead of a time when Europe is engaged in war?

"Again, if Japan's demands are really harmless to China, why did not Japan disclose them to the rest of the world instead of endeavoring to compel China to keep the strictest secrecy? There is something behind it all."

China Has Confidence in U. S.

Several of these papers print comments on the situation having a decided bearing upon the position of the United States. China has confidence in the United States and is firmly convinced that the American republic has no designs whatever on her territory or her national existence.

But the Chinese do not quite understand why a nation so powerful as the United States and so interested in the preservation of the independence and integrity of China, has permitted the Japanese aggression to go on uninterfered with despite Japan's obvious violation of the Root-Takahira agreement. So the Kuo Min Kung Pao directs this shaft at that situation:

"We imagine the Japanese are now saying to themselves that a certain power, which professes no aggressive policy in China, is really unable to assume any aggressive policy, and in case that power should interfere with the policy of Japan, she may be awed into yielding by means of Japan's superior position in the far east."

Sample of Government Criticism.

"Our foreign authorities, with eternal yielding as their object, have merely played the part of a footman carrying out the orders of a master. Taking advantage of their weakness and lack of judgment the Japanese minister has attempted to exact as much as possible from China.

"When a diplomat, in the course of negotiation, has come to a stage where he can neither concede nor resist certain oppressive demands, he should either contend with the bitterness worthy of the important position he occupies or he should resign."

Declare Nation Disgraced.

The Ta Shih Yu Pao remarks on the general fault finding that has developed out of the negotiations.

"One single ultimatum," it says, "has deprived China of countless rights; thereby disgracing our nation and people. We accuse the Japanese of violence in wringing concessions to these injurious demands from us; the Japanese attribute their high handed action to the weakness of the Chinese government, and our government accuses the people of inability to stand up.

"The question whether or not China will be absorbed by Japan depends upon the attitude of the Chinese people themselves."

The REV. F. J. URBANUS

THE REV. FREDERICK J. URBANUS, who was ordained July 1 at Oconomowoc, Wis., will read his first holy mass today in St. Alphonsus church at Southport, Lincoln, and Wellington avenues. When a boy Father Urbanus was run over by a street car. While a wrecking crew was raising the car to get him from under the trucks the victim vowed he would devote his life to the church if he emerged alive. Father Urbanus' parents live at 2945 Lincoln avenue and are well known on the north side.

GERMANY BLOCKS HOPE OF PEACE, VIEW OF BRITAIN

BY T. P. O'CONNOR.

[Copyright: 1915: By Central News Co.]

LONDON, July 3.—I sought an interview today with Lord Robert Cecil, the new undersecretary of the foreign office. I questioned him with reference to the various peace movements which, under the leadership of William J. Bryan and others, now and then emerge in American life.

The appointment of Lord Robert Cecil was one of the surprises of the coalition ministry. Not, of course, that he was not marked out by his abilities for the office, but becouse it was generally expected that he would reach cabinet rank instead of a subordinate position. He is now the most remarkable of the great family of Cecils, for though he has not the astonishing oratorical glow of his brother, Hugh, he is a far more effective parliamentarian and much more a man of the world, as well as much more practical, than Lord Hugh.

Praises American Fairness.

It is a delightful surprise that this man, so narrow and vehement—even rancorous—in all domestic struggles, reveals in foreign affairs a clear, cold, impartial brain. He is easily accessible, has a charming manner and is energetic, promptitude itself. He is a truly remarkable man.

"I am glad," Lord Robert said, "to have the opportunity of laying before you Americans my views of the present international situation. Every Englishman owes much to the impartiality with which the American people as a whole have judged the vital issues raised by the present war, and it is a privilege to be able to contribute, however slightly, to their clearer understanding.

"But it must be remembered that I am speaking purely as a private individual and not in any degree as a representative of the foreign office, which has its own appropriate channels for communicating the position of this country in international controversies.

Britain Fighting for Life.

"The first thing to be said is as hackneyed an expression as it is literally true—that in this war this country is fighting for its life. We see sometimes well meaning aspirations for peace, and you know how ardently all inhabitants of these islands desired peace last summer.

"But we must look the facts in the face. I read only this morning, quoted in the London papers, a long article by Count Reventlow in the Deutsch Tageszeitung, in which he advocates what he calls the 'Calais idea.' The Calais idea seems to me the occupation by Germany of a large part of the Atlantic coast of France and Belgium. The reason Count Reventlow wishes to occupy that territory is because occupation would be a 'vital danger for England.'

"He is, of course, perfectly right that with Calais in the hands of Germany the existence of the British empire would be threatened. No one doubts this in Europe, least of all England, France, or Germany. Nor is this all: with Belgium a part of Germany, Holland would soon have to follow. It is not possible to imagine the cession of Calais by France unless that country had been crushed.

Germany Seeks World Empire?

"It is clear, therefore, that Count Reventlow and his friends have in nowise abandoned their dream of world empire for Germany. They realize that now as ever, Great Britain stands for the liberties of Europe and the world as a consequence of its determination to preserve its own freedom."

"Do you think," I asked, "that it is necessary to attach so much importance to the utterances of Count Reventlow? He is, after all, only the spokesman of the militarist party of Germany, and we are constantly assured that there are many Germans who are not militarists. The Social Democratic papers and politicians from time to time give vent to different sentiments, repudiate all ideas of conquest, and claim Germany is merely fighting in self-defense, and that as soon as its security is assured it will lay down arms. They repudiate utterances of the King of Bavaria and his son, no less than those of Count Reventlow. Why, then, may we not regard them as expressing the true mind of Germany, and trust to their pacific assurances?"

Says Militarists Hold Sway.

"The answer to that," Lord Robert replied, "is that, unfortunately, the history of the last forty years shows that whenever the militarist party has been at issue with any other force or party in Germany it has been the militarists who have won. Even Bismarck, who for many years was not only their leader and prophet, whose unscrupulous and relentless policy is still upheld as their model of statesmanship, and who himself was by birth and education a 'junker'—even Bismarck, when he ventured to oppose the development of 'junkerism,' was disowned by his followers and dismissed by his master.

"Since his fall the same thing has been repeated over and over again. Not once nor twice the official rulers of Germany have assured the world that they did not contemplate some particular action, or some new expenditure on the army or fleet, or that they were favorably considering some domestic reform which would have diminished the power of the 'junkers,' and within a few months of the declaration we have seen them submitting to militarist dictation and taking the action they had repudiated.

Judges Germany by the Past.

"May I proceed to explain my meaning by literary illustration? In Robert Louis Stevenson's story of Markheim Markheim professes that with the proceeds of his latest crime he intends to establish himself as a reformed character. He is asked by his interlocutor whether his past history does not show on every occasion that he has allowed the worse part of his nature to triumph. When he admits that this is so he is told his future is irrevocably determined by his past.

"So we must think of Germany. If there be any effective pacific forces in Germany they must give some proof of their existence and their power to control the policy of the country.

"There are many observers who declare that the Germans, by long training in militarism, have lost all power of independent acting, and even of independent thought. Certainly their recent history seems to support this view.

Holds German Pacifists Impotent.

"The Social Democrats, for instance, are fond of boasting that they are the largest party in Germany. That may be true as a matter of numbers, but up to now their influence on German policy has veen virtually negligible.

"As for the so-called Liberal party, they are and have been obedient servants of the imperial administration. So long as that state of things continues we must consider the German militarism party as the only party in Germany that counts, and take our measures accordingly.

"Pray tell our friends in America that the views of all of us are faithfully set forth in these words of Prime Minister Asquith: 'Rather than sacrifice the cause of liberty we will fight to the last farthing of money, the last ounce of strength, and the last drop of blood.'"

SCOUTS SEE LIBERTY BELL.

E. A. Halsey, scout commissioner for the Chicago district, has issued instructions to the troopmasters to have as many boy scouts as possible on hand Tuesday evening when Liberty bell will be viewed by the public in the La Salle street station. The committee in charge of arrangements asked for the assistance of the boy scouts on this occasion. Scouts and scoutmasters will meet on the steps of the Illinois Trust and Savings bank, Jackson boulevard and La Salle street, at 6:15 o'clock.

AMERICAN IN FRENCH ARMY TELLS OF TERRIBLE LOSSES.

PARIS, July 3.—Private Rockwell, an American in the foreign legion, is in Paris for a month's rest after being discharged from the hospital at Rennes. He says that of the twelve Americans who entered the action near Arras on May 9 only one was left on the front nine days later. He was Kenneth Weeks, who is described as being the most formidable bomb thrower, grenade and knife artist, and altogether the luckiest man in his regiment.

Of the remaining eleven the whereabouts of three men who were wounded is known. These include Rockwell, Pavelled, and Jainz. Eight are missing, and of these two were seen lying wounded on the battlefield. They were John Smith and Russell Kelly, who maybe were captured.

The First regiment of the foreign legion went into action 4,000 strong and came out with 700 men unscratched. An officer told Rockwell that 500 were killed and 2,500 were wounded and taken prisoners.

BOHEMIANS TO CELEBRATE.

Bohemians of Chicago, in conjunction with those of the nation, will commemorate the five hundredth anniversary of the martyrdom of "Master" John Huss, the noted Bohemian scholar and religious reformer of the fourteenth century with a parade tomorrow night on the southwest side. A program will be given July 6 in the Auditorium.

Speakers will relate details of Huss' struggles from poverty to the position of first rector at the University of Prague; his efforts at religious reforms, and finally his appearance before the Council and his burning at the stake July 6, 1415. Huss was born in Husinec, Southern Bohemia, in 1369.

Is the Determining Factor in CASE CARS

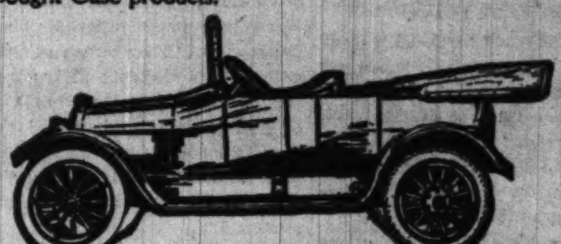
FOR EVERY CASE CAR embodies the engineering and manufacturing experience of a company covering a period of 72 years. What other automobile has such a pedigree?

EVERY CASE CAR is made to add to a reputation that is world wide.

EVERY CASE CAR embodies those fundamentals that pleased your father or your grandfather—when he bought Case products.



CASE 30
MODEL R

Let us tell you, item by item, of the many superiorities that make Case Cars conspicuous because of the genuineness with which they are built.

See the Case. Ride in it—and you'll know the upkeep costs—compare operating costs—and you'll know why men choose the Case. Then think how all the "extras" not included in the price of other cars are included in the Case Car. The cost of these "extras" you'll have to add to the price of any other car. In our price are included the tire and tube on rim with tire cover, Weed non-skid tire chains and 8-day clock. Here is another advantage that emphasizes how the Case Car includes things found in few other cars.

ONLY A FEW of these 30's remain allotted to this territory. Even they may be demanded by other territories. So to all those who have been considering Case Cars we must advise quick action. We do not want to disappoint you.

Will you make at once your appointment to see and learn more about the Case 30?

DO NOT WAIT. Come in and see this car and talk it over with us. Let us refer you to many enthusiastic Case owners. Next week may be too late.

J. I. CASE T. M. COMPANY, Inc., RACINE, WIS.
Founded 1842

The honor of the Case name has been built on the reliability of Case products—and accepted the world over as the standard by which others are judged. We are determined to stand by the faith that has given us this name. Our name may be wholly selfish in thus making worthy products. It is, we believe, essential for our own preservation, but it is this spirit of selfpreservation that makes us put into our cars those qualities which make them worthy of our name. By this selfishness you profit.

—Stephen Decatur.

NORTHCLIFFE'S SERVICE.

Lord Northcliffe's unpopularity in Great Britain is caused by the unpopularity of the truths his newspapers tell. English military history reveals a persistent devotion to precedent and it would not be surprising if the British were trying to fight the Boer war over again in Flanders. When they had adapted themselves to that method of fighting they used it well and they afterwards perfected it. Germans observed with admiration the British skill in taking cover in an advance.

Now the method has been changed again, but it is not apparent that the British have dropped their South African precedent. The English do not drop precedents quickly. It is part of their solidity not to do so. It is a part of their tenacity not to. Sometimes it works out the way it did at Quatre Bras and sometimes the way it did in the woods near Duquesne.

Complacence is another English characteristic. So long as the London newspapers give the home folk sufficiently interesting narratives, revealing the heroism of the British troops, the English are likely to be satisfied with the British conduct of the war and be curious to know why the French and Russians "don't do something."

To disturb complacency and attack precedent will not make any newspaper director popular. The Daily Mail is thrown out of clubs. A club ought not to be distressed by criticism of systems and institutions which must be perfect because they are English. It will not be so distressed. The favorite reading is an account by Eye Witness of an instance of indisputable British valor.

Northcliffe's offense was to do his patriotic duty and tell the English people that the valor was being wasted because the men did not have the proper tools for their work. In June the British lost 34,200 men and gained nothing. Northcliffe says it is because they are fighting with shrapnel and rifles against explosive shells and machine guns. Explosive shells wreck trenches, shrapnel sprinkles them.

Northcliffe's newspapers have not given comfort or aid to the enemy, but they have given discomfort and tried to give aid to the English. For that reason their director is regarded as something nearly a traitor. He would be in the Tower of London if some of the people he has offended had their way, and we suspect that the final injustice will be that when the methods he advocates have been adopted he will remain unforgiven for urging their use.

GERMANS NOW RESPECT THE FRENCH.

Karl H. von Wiegand, writing from the headquarters of Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria on the western front, says that there is in the German army from privates to generals nothing but admiration of the French valor. Ever since the Franco-Prussian war the Germans have professed contempt for the French military establishment, believing that the nation was decadent in physique and morals and no longer had the stuff needed in war.

This popular notion of French manhood was an irritant to a nation which had to recall the fiasco and tragedy of a humiliating war and a humiliating peace. There was not only the draped statue representing Strassburg to remind the French of the loss of provinces but there were plenty of expressions from the Germans to reveal contempt. These were not constituents of peaceful relations.

If respect is taking the place of these emotions the two nations may fight their way to a better understanding. It is a tall price to pay, but it is a slight consolation that there is a profit in sight. The French are conscious that they have done well. The Germans know it.

UNPREPAREDNESS.

Dispatches from Denver announcing the amalgamation of the four powerful railway employés' unions for increased wages and service demands mean something real to informed persons. It is a mobilization for war between the brotherhoods and the railroad managers, with the nation as unprepared and helpless as Chicago was last month for the traction strike. Unless the coming session of congress develops more adequate protection the probable course of events during the coming spring, when new schedules will be demanded, is not encouraging.

Under the Newlands act the machinery for mediation and arbitration has been provided, but there is no obligation to accept the board's services, and Chicago will witness that even a powerful public opinion is not powerful enough at times. Besides the men complain that arbitration has been used as a mask to stack the cards. Since the recent proceeding in Chicago there have been violent expressions. The Utopian theory cracks under the strain of practice, we are told. The award was accepted for the stipulated period of one year and in the meantime all the units will be welded together into one compact fighting machine. This does not look promising for settlement by arbitration, which, after all, the public interest demands, under the proper guarantees to the men.

It is apparent that congress must take some action. Canada has had excellent success with a law which goes one step farther than ours by prohibiting lockouts or strikes until the board of mediation has made a complete investigation of the issues and made its findings public. In seven years there have been only eighteen cases in which strikes were not either averted or ended, and the labor forces have not been treated unfairly. Others urge the necessity of compelling the disputants to accept the offices of the board if a strike is insisted upon even after the first investigation.

At any rate, the public that makes the laws of the country cannot afford to readopt the trial by battle as the test of justice. Arbitration might not be perfect and still be a godsend. Now that the employés have perfected their offensive and the railroads are prepared for the clash, is it not about time for the public, that must act as referee in all industrial disputes, to come forward with rules limiting the struggle to a definite arena?

MILITARY SOCIALISM IN WAR AND PEACE.

Germany's military efficiency is not by any means the product solely of a war machine. The nation at peace made the nation in war. The organization of the people to meet and better conditions of life made it possible for them to enter the harder struggle without disorganization.

Germany's militarism rested upon the foundation of sound national life. The government which had made the citizen a better citizen found him a better soldier when he was needed.

Germany's armies are the flower of the constructive work of more than a generation of wise administration, of intensive culture of humanity and careful guarding of conditions of life. German legislation had been conservative of the strength of the nation in time of peace, and it was there to rely upon in the time of war.

If the indifference to community good which prevails in extremely individualistic nations had controlled in Germany, the nation would have been found insufficient for the emergency when it arose. Its manhood instead of being robust would have been vitiated. Its resources would have been inadequate for its great population. Poverty and disease, discontent and disloyalty would have made impossible the exhibition of national strength and exaltation which the nation revealed.

We may not like the exhibition, but we are compelled to admire the qualities which made it possible and the wisdom which developed and nourished the qualities. We may not like the military socialism which controls everything for the good of the state, but we are bound to find it necessary to study the measures for the protection of citizenship and to adopt such as will conform to our ideals of life, if not, in cases, modify our ideas to conform to necessity.

Germany not only preserved her citizens physically but bound them together in an intense patriotism which we find expressed in provoking, irritating terms. We do not understand how a people can have such fervid and indomitable conviction of infallibility and superiority. It is because of the intensity of German patriotism, which will neither doubt nor question.

The destruction or suspension of the critical faculty of a researchful nation is not in itself admirable, but it is useful in such times as these in Europe, when doubt might result in weakness. The German has no doubts. Some of the leading Socialists have preserved their internationalism, but so far as the national temper is revealed it is one at white heat in the conviction that the German cause is the cause of mankind at its highest.

To have made this sentiment dominating, whatever unpleasant phases we may observe of it, and to have a strong nation prepared and able to defend it is a work of promotion and conservation of national energies such as the world seldom has seen.

What we should be interested in considering is that it is not the result so much of a militaristic program as it is of a pacific program. It is the effect of a cause to which humanitarians are devoted. Militarism made use of what humanitarianism wrought.

Germany's strength is based upon such foundations as pensions which give old age the guaranty of protection against poverty; upon workmen's compensation, which keeps the crippled industrial worker and his family in possession of a livelihood; insurance against invalidity, which keeps him from the worst consequences of illness; building and sanitary regulations which prevent the lapse of metropolitan and manufacturing districts into slums; thorough education and physical training of children, industrial training of workers, provision for healthy amusement, and regulation, control, and direction of production, etc.

It is possible that these are measures of military socialism, that the nation bent its energies to develop and preserve its strength, to be used either aggressively or defensively. They did develop and preserve it. They organized the nation and coordinated its elements. They made possible the instant transition to the more compact organization of war. They also increased the intensity of the German's patriotism. The state to him is not an aloof abstraction. It is the directing, sustaining power which gave him his strength and to which he returns it.

Partiality or prejudice aside, the system which did this must have its extraordinary qualities, and many of them must recommend themselves to nations which, however much they may abhor the military aspect of German solidarity, must consider ways and means of meeting the competition which it thrusts upon them.

This nation should understand that the strength of Germany was provided for in legislation which conserved its citizenship. The need of such conservation will make itself apparent more and more even in this rich nation, and Americans may hope that their government will recognize it in time.

Editorial of the Day.

THE BEST INVESTMENT.

[From the Minneapolis Journal.]

Ever since the war began the United States has been looking for the return of its billions of securities held in Europe. They do not come.

The heavy flow before the war began stopped with its arrival. Our stock markets were closed to check a rush, but when they opened the accumulations were soon cared for and prices began to rise. The liquidation has been almost imperceptible.

Turning attention from things anticipated to things as they are, Americans are beginning to ask why European investors should sell our securities. They want sound investments more than ever, now that all their own properties are demoralized.

There is no better investment than the selected securities of the richest neutral which are held in Europe. Investors there can have no better safeguard against the worst that may happen. So far they cannot sell American securities dear enough and buy Europeans cheap enough to tempt them to the change.

KING ALFONSO returned the other day specially to Madrid from La Granja in order to attend the wedding of Dona Aracelli y Fernandez de Cordova, Duchess of Almazan in her own right, and daughter of the Duke of Hijar, to Don Alfonso Maria y Dul, Count of San Bernardo, and son and heir of the Duchess of Monteleone.

The marriage has given rise to some expressions of surprise that the daughter of so historic a house as that of the Duke of Hijar should be willing to mate with the son of the Duchess of Monteleone, the acquisition of whose ducal title of Monteleone was a source of so much unpleasant notoriety, not to say scandal, some twenty years or so ago.

The Spanish government at one time was rather free in the distribution of titles, especially where foreigners were concerned, and all sorts of disputes were caused by foreigners who, having failed to succeed in getting their pretensions to hereditary honors recognized by the authorities in their native land, managed to obtain from Spain a Spanish patent for these foreign titles.

With regard to the dukedom of Monteleone, it is in reality an Italian dignity, and there is also a princely title of Monteleone, borne for some 200 years by the Erba and Hungarian branch of the house of Odescalchi.

When, therefore, the extremely rich Spanish Countess of San Bernardo obtained from the Spanish crown near a quarter of a century ago a patent creating her Spanish Duchess of Monteleone, with the right of succession to her son, there was a great outcry raised by the Monteleones of Italy and of Hungary, an outcry which reached Madrid, and led to a judicial and legislative investigation as to the circumstances under which the Countess of San Bernardo had managed to obtain the patent in question.

The leader of this investigation was Count Xiquena, afterward minister of the interior, and one of the greatest experts of the peninsula in matters of genealogy and heraldry. He was particularly vigorous in his denunciation of the methods of Mme. de San Bernardo, brought to light the very large sums of money that she had paid to various officials in order to obtain the patent, and, in fact, held her and her husband up to obloquy, pointing out that her pretensions of having a right to a title long in abeyance in Spain were without foundation.

As for the Duke of Hijar, he is one of the greatest and proudest nobles of Spain, although of peasant origin in the middle ages. It is, indeed, in recognition of an act of devotion performed by the peasant founder of his house in 1431 that the Duke of Hijar receives on each Epiphany a suit or uniform worn by his sovereign during the preceding twelve months. It is conveyed from the royal palace of Madrid to his own ancestral palace, in the Castellana avenue, with pomp and ceremony, by the dignitaries of the court, in full uniform, riding in state coaches and escorted by cavalry.

This ceremony has been taking place on every Epiphany for near 500 years, and in the palace of the duke at Madrid there is to be found to this day the most wonderfully interesting collection of costumes. Well nigh half a thousand in number, each one has been worn by a king or queen of Spain, thus furnishing a complete and uninterrupted history of royal fashions during the course of centuries.

The story current in Spain with regard to the origin of this gift by the sovereign to the Dukes of Hijar on each Epiphany is as follows: A plot had been organized in 1431 by the Infant Enrique for the assassination of King Juan of Castile at the grand banquet which he was giving at Toledo in honor of the feast of the Epiphany.

While the banquet was in progress Don Roderigo Villadrando, Count of Rivadeo, suddenly approached the king and whispered something in his ear, whereupon the monarch hastily retired with the nobleman into an adjoining room.

The absence of the king filled the conspirators with alarm, lest their plot should have been discovered, and accordingly they burst into the apartment to which the king had retired and fell upon him, piercing him through and through with their poniards and swords. The room was almost dark, and it was only on the following day that they ascertained that the man whom they had murdered was not the king but the Count of Rivadeo, who had changed clothes with the sovereign and thus enabled him to effect his escape.

The Count of Rivadeo of the reign of Charles V. was raised to the dukedom of Hijar, and the present duke won the good will and gratitude of King Alfonso and of his mother, Queen Christine, by undertaking the particularly delicate and difficult task of keeping old Queen Isabella in order during the closing years of her life in Paris.

Impulsive, reckless, and in many respects altogether unconventional, she was constantly becoming involved in entanglements with adventurers and adventuresses: added to which, her almost incredible extravagance in money matters had the effect of implicating her in all sorts of financial messes. It was to protect her from her own weaknesses, largely due to her generous character, that the Duke and Duchess of Hijar undertook the duties of grand master and grand mistress of her household at the Palace of Castile in Paris.

Premier Asquith has officially announced in the house of commons that Lord Hardinge, whose term of office as viceroy of India was to have terminated in November, is to remain on in that capacity until the beginning of April next. It is hoped that by that time the war will be finished, and that the cabinet will be able then to spare the services of Winston Spencer Churchill, who is universally regarded in court and official circles in London as slated to succeed to this, the most lucrative and magnificent office in the gift of the British crown.

FOURTH OF JULY INJURIES.

EIGHT years ago the Fourth of July saw the Chicago health department operating somewhat elaborate plans for the care of the day's injured. The custom of the day meant burns, wounds, and death. The health department followed up its warning by preparation to care for those who it knew would neglect the warnings.

Thanks to THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE and other papers, the Journal of the American Medical association and other medical publications and various civic bodies, a sane Fourth movement has decreased the celebration accident rate. Here and there a backward community celebrates July 4 in the old fashioned way. No, not the old fashioned way. The old fashioned way of celebrating the Fourth was by picnics, barbecues, patriotic speeches, and music. These backward communities will celebrate the Fourth according to a heathenish custom which grew up about forty years ago, and which flourished for over thirty years. Some people who celebrate in this savage way will be injured.

Advice as to Fourth of July wounds will come handy today in some quarters.

LOCKJAW—Any dirty wound is liable to become infected with lockjaw bacilli. The best way to guard against this is to take an injection of tetanus antitoxin, if much powder and dirt has been driven into the wound. The army surgeons in Europe have found that twenty units of antitoxin, a very small dose, will suffice, if it is given within twenty-four hours of the time of injury. In this country tetanus antitoxin is put up in vials, each containing 1,500 units. As a rule, it is advisable to take the contents of a vial. Perhaps in time a smaller vial may be available in this country.

The first symptom of lockjaw is stiffness in the jaws. If a wound has been neglected and lockjaw begins to develop, say ten days later, cure is still possible, if treatment is begun without delay.

The percentage of lockjaw among the wounded in the different wars has been as follows:

Crimean	1.5	Franco-Russian	3.5
American Civil	2.5	Present	6.5

The army surgeons in this war have had an unparalleled opportunity to study lockjaw. Grundman, a German surgeon, says that about four out of ten cases of lockjaw treated at the army hospital get well. The principles of treatment are: Early diagnosis, cleaning the wound with peroxide, local injections of antitoxin into the blood, and injections of magnesium sulphate under the skin.

Wounds into which much dirt and powder have been driven are liable to develop gas gangrene. The surgeons in the present European war have seen more gas gangrene than was ever seen before.

A part of the prevalence of gas gangrene and lockjaw is due to the fact that the fighting has been done in deep trenches. A great deal of dirt has been carried into the wounds. The wounded men have had to lie in the dirt for a long time. The war has been waged in highly cultivated fields. It has been proved that certain horses are lockjaw carriers, just as certain people are typhoid carriers. There are many such horses in Belgium, Alsace, and eastern France.

Another reason for the prevalence of gas gangrene and lockjaw is the wide use of first aid dressings, or rather misuse of them. Every soldier in western Europe carries a first aid dressing packet. When he gets a wound he immediately dresses it, if he is able to do so.

That is all right for a fairly clean wound, or for a dirty wound, if the first dressing is to be removed, treatment given, and a new dressing applied within a day. It is all wrong if a lot of dirt and powder is sealed in the wound, or if the dressing through the fortune of war or for other reasons is to be left on for a week. Dr. Mills, who worked for several months in the Vienna general hospital, used as a base hospital, writes:

"Many patients returned beautifully tamponaded with gauze or with pads of cotton next to the wound and so dried and hardened by the secretion that they formed most efficient plugs. Iodoform powder and tincture of iodine also were used, but in common with the cotton dressings they coagulated the discharge of blood and serum, and patients often reach the general hospitals with the skin distended almost to bursting with thick pus, gangrenous muscle and bone fragments. Later practice became fairly well standardized and plain gauze dressings the rule."

Gas gangrene is treated by cleaning out the wound with peroxide, free incisions, injections into the tissues of peroxide or superheated air.

These experiences teach that, if a Fourth of July wound is clean, it should be swabbed or washed out and over with tincture of iodine and covered lightly by gauze. If it is dirty, it should be lightly covered by gauze and kept open. By kept open I mean that it must not be allowed to scab over or to seal up, and no adhesive strips or other sealtight dressing must cover it.

If it contains grease, benzine can be used to clean it. The surface can be swabbed with iodine, but the wound must be open, and, from day to day, soiled dried dressings must be replaced by fresh, clean dressings, loosely applied.

In all cases of dirty Fourth of July wounds antitoxin should be given as a prophylactic.

BURNS—Burns are divided into three classes. In a first degree burn the skin is reddened, blisters form, and there is severe burning pain. A first degree burn destroys only the outer layers of the skin.

In a second degree burn there are the same symptoms, except that blisters are not so prominent, that is, in the areas of second degree burn. A second degree burn involves all the layers of the skin.

In a third degree burn the pain is less, but the shock may be greater. Upon inspection one can see that the burning has extended through the skin to the tissues below it. The skin may peel off in casts. Blebs and blisters are more prominent in the areas of milder burn which surround the deeper burn.

To give immediate relief apply cooking soda dry or in solution. Remove the clothing and clean away gross dirt. Then apply picric acid gauze. Picric acid gauze can be bought from the drug store. It can be made by saturating ordinary sterile gauze with a solution of one-half teaspoonful of picric acid in one pint of water.

If the gauze is dry moisten it with clean water, preferably water that has been heated. Apply to the wound lightly with cotton and hold with a light bandage.

Do not apply any grease or oil unless it is known to be sterile. Carron oil and most of the other old fashioned oils for burns are not sterile. Any grease or oil can be sterilized by heating.

People who have been burned are unusually prone to suffer from shock. The first aid instruction for miners, from the bureau of mines, gives the following symptoms of shock:

"Subnormal temperature; an irregular, weak, and rapid pulse; a cold, clammy, pale, and profusely perspiring skin; irregular breathing; the person affected usually remains conscious and will answer when spoken to, but is stupid and indifferent and lies with partly closed lids." To this should be added nervous rigor with chattering of the teeth frequently present and fainting occasionally present.

A person suffering from shock should lie flat, or, better still, the feet should be slightly higher than the head. He should be wrapped in hot blankets. Hot bricks should be put to his feet. All of this is in common practice, except the position of the head. The common practice, an erroneous one, is to raise the head.

Half a teaspoonful of aromatic spirits of ammonia should be given every thirty minutes until the shock passes off or relief comes. If ammonia cannot be had, two teaspoonfuls of whisky every thirty minutes can be given as a substitute. It is a poor substitute. Camphor or smelling salts can be inhaled. A hot water bag over the heart may be applied.

The records show that a large percentage of the children who celebrate the Fourth are grown people. Maybe these grownups are grown up in age and size, but not in mentality. Maybe the men who celebrate the Fourth by promiscuous pistol shooting are 10 and 12 year old morons. But that is another question. The question now is, what shall be done with bullet wounds?

Ordinary bullet wounds made by pistols fired at long range heal very well. They should not be probed. Generally speaking, the bullet should be left undisturbed. The symptoms of shock given above are also the symptoms of hemorrhage. In case of bullet wound the possibility of internal hemorrhage should always be borne in mind.

Then there is the question as to what internal organs have been wounded. Clearly all cases of bullet wounds should be seen by a physician. The first aid attention should be limited to the application of a light gauze dressing and to treatment of shock by heat externally and aromatic spirits of ammonia internally.

BLOOD PRESSURE AN EFFECT.

C. A. R. writes: "At what point in the circulatory system is blood pressure measured? By what means or instrument? What is the unit of measurement and how does it compare with pounds per square inch? Within what limits does the blood pressure lie for a normal healthy adult? How does it vary with age? What is the significance of an abnormal pressure, high or low? Is abnormal pressure merely a symptom, or is it in itself an ailment that can be and should be treated directly? Is there any care that should be taken in regard to blood pressure by an ordinary person who desires to take every reasonable precaution to guard his health?"

REPLY.

2. A sphygmomanometer, or blood pressure measurer.
3. The force required to lift a column of mercury one millimeter. A reading of 200 means that the pressure which must be applied to the artery to collapse it wholly, and thus to prevent blood from throbbing through it, is great enough to lift a column of mercury 200 millimeters.
4. Many factors come into play. Examples: Women about ten less than men. Physical weakness causes a variation downward of ten. A good muscular development, a rise above the normal of ten. Exercise and hearty eating sends the pressure up ten to twenty. Sleep causes a fall of ten to twenty. Other factors are body posture, time of day, altitude, and age.
5. To calculate the pressure for a given age, consider the age of a normal man of 20 as 120. For every two years over 20 add one to 120.
6. Answer would require more space than can be given here. From time to time articles of from 500 to 2,000 words on this question have appeared and also will appear in this column.
7. It is an effect. The cause has operated throughout a series of years. It causes some effects. Up to a certain point treatment directed to it as a cause is justified. In the main treatment must be based on the theory that it is an effect.
8. Yes; right living.

CAUSES OF INSOMNIA.

O. A. M. writes: "I have insomnia. My brain is working overtime. I dream all night. Tell me, please, if there is any help for me?"

REPLY.

Of course there is help for you. Any person can be cured of insomnia if he will go at it right and stay at it long enough.

In the first place make up your mind that you will not take medicine to make you sleep. Whoever takes medicine to produce sleep brands himself a quitter to start with. When a man is a quitter and knows it, his chance is wiped out.

Do you take coffee? Stop it.

Does your digestive apparatus fill with gas in the early morning? Eat no supper or a light one.

Is your room poorly ventilated? Change that.

Are you worrying because you do not sleep? If so, know that you sleep fairly well; much better than you think. If you will quit worrying you will sleep 10 per cent better.

Of course you dream. Everybody dreams the night through. Anybody who thinks in the day dreams at night. Teach yourself to think calmly, quietly, and without excitement during the day, and you will dream quietly and sleep well the night through. If you cannot be quiet mentally all day long, at least be quiet mentally for three hours before you go to sleep. If you go to sleep with your mind tense, you will dream tense dreams, and presently they will awaken you.

Outside of coffee, poorly ventilated rooms, uncomfortable beds, and intestinal fermentation, the causes of insomnia are mental. Therefore, the cure for insomnia is mental training. If you cannot do this by yourself, see a physician who knows how to direct you along that line. But if you go to a doctor, and he gives you sleeping medicine, get out and keep going.

THINKS LIGHTS NOT NECESSARY.

Chicago, June 29.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Permit me to call your attention to the fact that lights are much needed on Kildare, Kolin, and Kostner avenues, between Fifty-ninth and Sixty-third streets. Kindly see what can be done to have the same given immediate consideration and oblige J. G. SALVATO, 4319 West Fifty-ninth street.

A careful investigation of this location has been made and while conditions would ordinarily warrant the installation of additional lamps in this territory, funds are not available for their installation at the present time. The department has been requested by the city controller to reduce all expenditures as far as possible on account of the limited funds available to the city for this purpose. We have recently adopted the policy of installing lamps only in emergency cases, and as no such conditions exist at this location the department is not justified in installing additional lamps at the present time. RAY PALMER,
Commissioner of Electricity.

CANNOT OIL ASPHALTIC MACADAM STREETS.

Chicago, June 28.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Kindly inform me if the city intends to oil the macadam streets in the Cobe & McKinnon subdivision at Sixty-third street and Western avenue.
THOMAS COFFEY,
6412 South Artesian avenue.

These streets are constructed of asphaltic macadam and therefore cannot be oiled. Streets in said subdivision are cleaned weekly.
WALTER G. LEININGER,
Superintendent of Streets.

STRONG HEADLIGHTS IN PARK.

Chicago, June 30.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Kindly inform me why the city ordinance relative to strong headlights on autos is not enforced. It is nothing unusual to see scores of violations of this ordinance in Lincoln park any night between 8 and 10 p. m. SIG FALLER, 1307 Newport avenue.

I have taken this matter up with our captain of police and he has informed me that our ordinances governing glaring headlights are being enforced and will continue to be enforced to the full letter of the law.
G. L. CROWLEY,
Secretary Lincoln Park Commission.

TENANT CANNOT CANCEL LEASE.

South Chicago, Ill., July 2.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I am renting a residence property under a lease running to April 30, 1917, and there is a provision in the lease reserving to the lessor the right to cancel said lease at any time on sixty days' notice, in the event the property is sold. Is this provision binding on me in view of the fact that there was no consideration in the way of reduced rental or otherwise? I am paying the same rent I paid under former lease, when there was no such clause in lease. Under the circumstances have I the right to cancel the lease on sixty days' notice, regardless of whether the property is sold or not, or is this special provision in the lease void and the lease otherwise binding on both parties for the full term? H. G. J.

This provision entitles the landlord to cancel the lease on sixty days' notice, but you have no such right. No increase in rent was required to furnish a consideration for this part of your agreement.

NEIGHBOR CAN MAINTAIN TREE.

Chicago, July 1.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—My neighbor has a large cottonwood tree in his yard which keeps me busy raking leaves during the summer and fall. It is a nuisance and I would like to know if I can force him to cut it down. J. G.

We know of no reason why your neighbor cannot maintain the cottonwood tree on his premises, provided there is no danger of its damaging other persons and other property.

CAN ASSESS WHERE PROPERTY IS BENEFITED.

Chicago, July 2.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I am the owner of a few lots in Oak Park. Can the village board make me pay a special assessment to raise money to install an electrical plant to make electricity for lighting the streets only? J. A. L.

If your property is benefited by the proposed improvement the village board can assess your property in proportion to the benefit received.

SPREADING THE FAME OF 4041.

Congress Hotel, June 28.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I have been just over a month in the city of Chicago, and have always found the policeman most courteous and obliging when I have had to "ask a policeman." But today I witnessed a sight that made me wish I had possessed a camera just at that moment. I would have shown the picture to my Australian friends in my lectures on my return there with pleasure and pride.

Policeman No. 4041 was carefully conducting across the street, in the throng of traffic at Adams and Wabash, a poor white faced looking man, who carried two crutches, and was apparently just getting over some illness or accident. The cynic will probably say it was only the duty of 4041, and he was paid for it. Quite so. But he could easily have dodged the duty, and it was to me one of the brightest, yet most touching and pathetic, pictures in city life that I have ever seen, and I have crossed the continent of the United States twice and traveled round the world a few times.

No. 4041, I take my hat off to you. I shall tell of that kindly little act to our people in Australia, and as long as memory holds her seat it will live with me.
WILSON J. BAILEY, Sydney, Australia.

EDITOR GRAF REVENTLOW.

Chicago, July 1.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Your objection to the editorials written by Graf Reventlow in a Berlin paper is not well founded. The gentleman is the regular editorial writer of that paper, therefore has a right to give expression to views that might not be desirable as a private citizen and ex-government employé, which is the parallel you draw. PAUL W. E. WITTSTEIN.

EMBARGO AND BLOCKADE.

Atlanta, Ga., June 30.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—The cotton crop of 1915 will soon be harvested and unless the notorious British order in council is immediately revoked or modified so as to permit shipments to neutral countries the south will again be hard hit financially.

Unless Great Britain immediately recedes from the position she has taken in this matter this government should threaten to retaliate and no delay should be tolerated. Congress should be convened and the entire matter placed before the representatives of the people. A prompt embargo on shipments of arms and ammunition unless Great Britain ceased her unwarranted interference with our commerce with neutral nations would soon bring her to terms.

BRYAN AND THE PRINCE OF PEACE.

Evanston, Ill., June 28.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Insistently proclaiming himself to be a "humble follower of the Prince of Peace," Mr. Bryan seems to reveal a misconception of the Man of Galilee which has beguiled many. "Gentle Jesus, meek and mild!" This is the view some superficial readers of the gospels have of Him, to the exclusion of belief in robust qualities of character. Much religious art, with its languid Messiahs, has fostered or encouraged such thinking. An anemic, effeminate Christ, distinguished by fugitive and cloistered virtues, has claimed the faith of numerous believers.

But a close examination of the evangelists' memoirs of the Great Teacher shows a different, a manlier figure. Infinitely tender, gentle, and loving we see Him to be. But He was more. Take but a single instance in proof, the cleansing of the temple [here He furnished Carrie Nation with a precedent], when, with a whip of cords He violently ejected the profaners of the sacred place. This does not savor of pacifism. It shows us a gloriously wrathful man, magnificently militant.

Never on this earth lived one more virile than Jesus of Nazareth. In Him a rugged vitality had its residence. He was the strong Son of God.

Some of earth's greatest soldiers have been the greatest saints. They were "humble followers of the Prince of Peace," but not in a revolting Uriah Heap fashion. Two of many that might be cited were "Chinese" Gordon and "Stonewall" Jackson. "The bravest are the tenderest."

Mr. Bryan should get orientation, theologically as well as politically. He should remember that the Lamb of God is called also the lion of the tribe of Judah. If there is a time for everything, as affirmed in scripture, occasions may arise when the lion must have his day. Grandly leonine are the tones of Christ, as He thunders those tremendous philippics against the would-be leaders of his nation. This is a term He applied to them: "Ye blind guides."

Let Mr. Bryan beware lest he be in the same condemnation. E. W. STAHL.

DEMOCRACY AND ART

By Edward Goldbeck.

AMERICA'S civilization, although an imposing monument of will power, ingenuity, and industry, is so far incomplete. It has not engendered a national art, an art which would express the American character, the American conception of the world. Art is the universal mirrored in the individual. There is no reflection of the spiritual world up to now which could be called American and claimed as national property. Of course, there are artists, but none of them has given us a vision of his own, none of them has been a creator in the highest sense of the word. They were all craftsmen and distinguished from one another only by a little more or less of technique. The authors—I am including literature in art—are clever cooks who serve more or less palatable and spicy dishes and cater to the taste of the public, but they do not listen to an inner voice. Even the best of them know too well what they are aiming at, and they hardly understand Heine's boasting that while he wrote a certain poem he heard an eagle's wings rustling over his head.

Every human production, be it ever so spiritual, is bound to material conditions. Art can only grow as a tree does, in a certain climate, a certain soil, fostered by sunshine, refreshed by rain. The conditions which are favorable or obnoxious to the development of art have not been thoroughly studied up to now; we do not know, for instance, how the political and social constitution of a state influences art. If we look back at history we find two names which are fraught with proud memories of great art: Athens and Florence. At the first glance an American might think that the achievement of these immortal towns augurs well for his own country. Superficially regarded, they seem to have been democracies. However, in reality they both were oligarchies; a small minority reigned in them. The lowest social stratum in Athens were slaves, in Florence peasants, workmen and people who were dependent on the patrician families. The United States is the first democracy on a grand scale, the first democracy which seriously strives to incarnate this form of government, while the antique "demos" was nothing but the upper four hundred or the upper ten thousand. To use the word democracy for the Athenian or Florentine commonwealth is a sort of historical cant, and the name has become utterly inadequate by now. The Greeks and Italians, when talking of democracies, had in mind the contrast with the towns which were ruled by so-called tyrants, a denomination which meant only that the prince reigned autocratically without intending to slight his character with the charge of cruelty.

IS the idea and are the ideals of democracy favorable to the development of art? The fundamental axiom of democracy is equality. If you deny that all human beings are equal the whole building tumbles down. As a sensible man cannot believe such nonsense for a single second, the theorists invented the fallacy that, although of course at the moment when a child first sees the light it is stronger or weaker than the child of the neighbor, all children are born with the same human rights. I call this a fallacy, as the notion of a "right" is nothing natural, but a social convention, and humanity has been existing for geological periods before such an idea could dawn in the brain of man. But fallacies of this kind can be very useful, beneficent, and indispensable, just as science needs hypotheses, which in an advanced stage may be rejected. Moreover, the ingrained democrat thinks that education and instruction may smooth out the inequalities of birth which he does not like to mention or to think of.

This fundamental idea of democracy appears as something unspeakably hideous to the artist. As his only mission on earth is to create a cosmos out of the chaos, to mold the shapeless, to shape the amorphous, to give "form" to tones, colors, stones, thought, which are scattered in the universe, he is a multiform being and must hate uniformity, for which democracy is making. An artist's senses are keener than those of the average man; he is more apt to perceive the characteristic distinctions of everything which exists; he will discover the individual in stone, plant, and animal, and because he has received this discerning faculty to the degree of intuition he refuses to believe in equality. Flaubert advised his disciple, Maupassant, if ever he wanted to picture a tree, to study it until he would discover the features by which it would be distinguishable from all other trees. About himself the artist feels that he is essentially different from other human beings, and this makes him an aristocrat. He may be the most modest and even bashful man in social intercourse; when he is alone in his garret he will have moments of elation in which he says to himself that God has singled him out among millions. The hours of deepest depression will probably follow very soon, but they come from the same source; they, too, exclude him from the common lot.

The artist, if he is a real artist, would not exchange his sufferings for our commonplace joys. He wants to be "different," he revels in individuality. The idea that education might equalize the people is repulsive to him and ridiculous at the same time. For he knows that instruction and education can never give "the real thing." It is absolutely necessary to be industrious if you want to be an artist, but you may acquire the most stunning technique and then come to feel that it means nothing at all compared to a mysterious power which old fashioned people used to call the "divine spark," and which it is best to designate as "je ne sais quoi."

THE atmosphere in which an artist is living is of greatest importance to him. He suffers much more from a feeling of antagonism or incongruency between human society and himself than the scholar does. The scientist has to school himself to indifference; he is accustomed to discipline his feelings. The philologist, the anatomist, the historian, all want to find truth, be it pleasant or unpleasant. The moment they try to shape reality after their own likes or dislikes they leave the domain of science. The artist feels more than he thinks, and as all the impressions which we receive from the outer world take the line of least resistance, the faculty of feeling is constantly irritated. That is why the aura, or, as the Italians say so graphically, "l'ambiente," has such a strong effect on the artist. It is not at all irrelevant to the quality of his work, whether he is in harmony with his nation and the "Zeitgeist," the aspirations of his period, or lives in a compelled isolation, without any echo and response to his productions.

Now, the atmosphere of a democracy is bound to be utilitarian. The ideal is to give the greatest possible happiness to the greatest possible number. Happiness? Hebbel says: "When God was embarrassed about a lot of people who could not shape themselves into anything he created happiness." What sort of happiness can we give to other people with whom we are not in constant and immediate connection? Only material happiness. We can lend them money, we can make them work, we can cure their maladies, improve their lodgings, and so on. All these endeavors are meritorious, but they do not appeal to the artist. The only thing that appeals to him is beauty. But beauty has no aim, it is useless. If it should aim at anything it would wait for fulfillment, and if it were yearning for fulfillment it would not be perfect, it would not be beauty.

The real artist can never have any other creed but "L'art pour l'art." He is neither moral nor immoral; he does not want to influence his contemporaries for good or bad. If he does, he is not an artist, but a preacher, as was Tolstoi in his second period, as was the Russian painter Wereschagin. They were artistically endowed reformers. And here we discover a reason why it must be an arduous task for a real artist to live and work in an Anglo-Saxon and democratic country: it is not so much the dumb stolidity of the masses, the well fed indifference of the bourgeois, the unintelligent snobbishness of the smart set, it is the trivially utilitarian tendency of the American "uplifting" tendencies.

BE it far from me to revile or ridicule any work which is done in a spirit of self-sacrifice and sincerity for those who have not had the same opportunities as the richer classes! I appreciate the enthusiasm and value the results at their due. But the artist will only notice that most of these endeavors are made in a spirit which, while idealistic, is utilitarian, too. We arrange cheap performances to keep the men from the saloon and the girls from the dancing hall. We build libraries for the enlightenment of the masses because a well instructed citizen who knows his real interests will not be a prey to the inducements of socialists and anarchists. We recommend good plays and nice books, but with the purpose of improving people. The books and the plays must be "clean" and must not give the readers "false notions" and "inflated ideas." In the universities science is taught, but if the results of investigation are offending to the prejudices of the benefactors, science goes overboard or the professor does. There is always a practical purpose connected with all these commendable endeavors. Nothing is done for beauty's sake and in the exclusive service of art; there are always outside motives sneaking in which seem sacrilegious to the artist who knows only one goddess and one religion.

Democracy is estranged to the feeling of awe, of worship before men and their deeds as the revelations of divinity. The masses have no sense of greatness. They like plain men, who have worked up to the top and are just as they are themselves. Lincoln is loved much more for his humble origin than for the transcendental side of his nature, the "infinite sad patience" which endears him to the student of the human heart. Goethe said the highest aim of education was "Ehrfurcht," "veneration." No feeling is more uncomfortable to the average man than that. He wants to know that he can reach any height of mental (and social) accomplishment if he only works hard enough. The idea that there are privileged beings—privileged by the grace of God—disturbs his conception of the world and hurts his vanity. But the trouble is that without this feeling of reverence you will never be able to understand the great masters, because this feeling only gives you the perseverance in studying them which is necessary to appreciate them. Every genuine work of art is a mysterious symbol, capable of different interpretations and to a certain degree unfathomable. (Mona Lisa, Moses, Hamlet, the Ninth symphony.) If a work of art is created by the intellect only it is easily understood, but soon exhausted.

THERE is no real criticism in this country, although there are some good critics. The reason is that the average American thinks all people about equally clever or stupid. The political institutions of a democracy explain this opinion; are not we all sovereigns, born rulers, is not public opinion the power which reigns over the country? So it is difficult to impress the American. I do not mean that as praise. One day a promising youth was presented to the great poet Lamartine. Afterwards Lamartine was asked how he had liked the young man. "Not at all," the poet answered, "my presence did not impress him." ("Il n'a pas été ému en ma présence.")

Democracy makes for tolerance. This is certainly an admirable quality as long as it knows where to draw the line and escapes the danger of tolerating idiots and scoundrels, but it is pernicious to art. There are lots of people dabbling in art who ought to be clerks or nurses. What we need is the severest, the most ruthless criticism. But democracy teaches us all to be "nice" and "kind," and the result of this attitude is—rubbish.

Why did the taste—I do not say the genius—of the French always remain superior to that of other nations, even in periods of mental fatigue and barrenness? Because dozens of essayists and critics from Montaigne to Lemaitre have educated the nation. And these critics—mind that, too!—wrote with the purpose of creating a work of art in their very criticisms; every sentence, every punctuation sign, was considered just as conscientiously as the architecture of the essay as a whole.

America seems to be the type of the future Caucasian nation. Maybe this type will be without any creative art at all. (Imitative art is no art, it is craftsmanship.) The citizens of such a nation might be very happy without art. Why should we hide to ourselves the desolating fact that the overwhelming majority is so even today? A German poet has said: "The world easily misses just that for the sake of which it only deserves to exist."

TRAVELING IN WAR TIME

By Robert Herrick.

PARIS, June 18.—The six weeks I have been in Europe have made me wonder what has given rise to all the reports I heard before I left America of the dangers and difficulties of travel over here. The unbroken impression I have got thus far is that it is both much easier and more agreeable to go about in Europe at present than at any time I have been here during the last twenty-odd years. To be sure, I have not yet been near any front except that during the first week of the war in Italy I passed through the "military zone" from Bologna to Venice and after remaining in Venice a week journeyed via Milan to the Swiss frontier and thence into France to Paris. In these six weeks I have moved about freely without the slightest restraint or difficulty except in one instance at Venice when through my own carelessness in neglecting to register at the local police station I incurred a lengthy examination at the hands of the military authorities on the Lido.

Americans, with their easy going ways and habitual neglect of all governmental regulations—also with their usual ignorance of the language of the country in which they have placed themselves—are apt to get into trouble. But even these national defects could not account for all the wild tales one hears here and at home. These compel me to believe that the majority of the human race cannot tell the simple truth and that most of the stories of brutality and hardship suffered in Europe last summer were either exaggerated or the result merely of ignorance and hysteria. In time of war, with many people of all nationalities moving about across frontiers, it is natural that all sorts of conditions and precautions should be taken by the authorities; that they are not unnecessary is proved by the prevalence of spies throughout the belligerent countries and the accuracy of their information about each other. Under these circumstances it behooves the stranger guest to observe punctiliously all regulations and forms imposed; if he does that and if he can speak even a little the language he will find no trouble whatever in legitimate traveling.

RAILROAD travel in Italy has never been considered expeditious or comfortable from the American point of view, but the Italian railways have greatly improved in recent years. Otherwise it would have been physically impossible for Italy to have concentrated over a million soldiers with equipment and supplies on the northern frontier without any appreciable disturbance of the usual train service throughout the regions involved. It was a feat that an American traffic manager might have been proud of, given the restricted facilities of the Italian system. The troops were moved usually by night, and the long trains were sidetracked for the passenger trains on which the superior officers traveled.

The day before war was declared against Austria I made the journey north on the regular night express, which was filled with officers and Red Cross men and secret agents. The only restrictions were the warning not to prowl about the stations—one had to stay in the train or leave a station immediately—and the injunction to keep the window curtains pulled down after leaving Bologna. This was to prevent nonmilitary passengers from observing the passing of troop and supply trains, military preparations, etc., and it is needless to add was rarely obeyed by the curious Italians.

Venice, of course, was within the "military zone" and an important center of naval operations. The military zone extends at present from Bologna northward to the frontier and westward as far as Milan; within this zone everybody is subject to the military authorities, who without explanation can arrest or order the expulsion of any person they deem undesirable. Yet during the first days after the outbreak of the war, while the final mobilization was taking place, I found it perfectly possible to move about within this zone; the fast trains were running and approximately on time except on the frontier itself.

Throughout this disturbed period the railroad management, under the control of the military authorities, proved that in spite of the enormous burden put on the service they could do the business without unduly disturbing travel. For a day or two private telegrams were not accepted, as the wires were given over to military business. Letters went forward with some delay, and the parcel post was temporarily suspended.

ONE heard many stories in Rome as well as in America of the dangers and difficulties of crossing frontiers these days even between friendly or neutral states, of the arbitrariness of officials. Again and again I heard at the consulate, at the American embassy, at the bank, that it was not possible to take out of Italy more than a few dollars in gold because of the law designed to prevent the export of the precious metal during war times. It seemed a little unreasonable that the gold with which the American traveler had provided himself in America and had brought into the country for his personal use should be confiscated at the frontier on leaving the country. However, the stories of men and women being stripped and searched for their gold at frontier stations were so vivid and constant that I prepared to obey the law by disposing of what gold I had in Venice. But when an official of the Bank of Italy—the government bank—advised me to keep my gold, as no questions would be asked of a foreigner who was not a speculator in gold, I put the precious eagles in their bag and tried my luck. As the train approached Domodossola on the Italian frontier I remembered a long letter from an American business man which I had read in a New York newspaper, complaining that he had contracted a severe cold by being searched at the frontier, that his American passport was "no good," his wife's letters finally saving him from prison, and I wondered whether I had done well in keeping my gold. It was June, and at any rate one was not likely to get pneumonia!

Needless to say no difficulty of any kind was encountered either at Domodossola or at the French frontier, on the other side of Lausanne. I had provided myself with the required French passport and identification papers at the French consulate in Rome, paying for the privilege of entering France 20 francs in gold, and these, which are limited in time, I had had extended at Venice and again in Lausanne, each time being carefully registered in the consul's books—and no doubt information was sent on each time to the frontier station through which I was supposed to pass.

At Domodossola instead of the dire search I had imagined a pleasant secret agent who reminded me of a Tammany customs official glanced wearily at my American passport. Not even a question about my small secret hoard of gold! I felt disappointed. At Frasne on the French frontier it was naturally a more serious affair. About midnight the passengers had to descend and enter a small waiting room from which one by one they were passed before the officials, their papers scrutinized, and their signatures demanded.

IN Switzerland, of course, the traveler can move about with no more restriction, except for registering at the police station, than at any time, and I am told that the same is practically true in Germany. At Paris, having once properly registered with the police and having the police permit stamped on one's French passport, one is at liberty practically to go wherever he chooses except into the zone of operations. I have dwelt on these trivial details to show how exaggerated are the conceptions many Americans entertain of conditions in Europe during war time. Whatever confusion there may have been at first, by this time Europe has adapted itself to the state of war and each country seems desirous to prove that the conditions of ordinary social life still exist intact. War is the one chief business of Europe, to which everything else is sacrificed, but even war to be efficiently prosecuted requires a certain stability in the social background.

Another misconception I have found is that concerning the food question. Living is not high in Europe, at least for the traveler. Indeed, in some ways it is cheaper than before the war. As there are fewer travelers and everybody exercises economy, even the best hotels offer exceedingly reasonable arrangements "pendant la guerre."

Outside of the hotels residents in Italy, Switzerland, and France have complained to me of the rising prices of foodstuffs, but so far as I can tell that is hardly as serious as in our own country. Europe is not starving or even living poorly. Except for the price of meat in Germany, which has risen phenomenally of late, and a general rise in England, which must be due to English inefficiency, as she has all the markets of the world to draw on, the war has not yet brought about anything like starvation or even penurious food conditions. The cutting off of luxuries is a good thing. But the abundance of fruits, vegetables, butter, eggs, and cheese in Italy and in France indicates no hardship on the food side. European governments have taken and are taking extraordinary precautions against scarcity of the food supply—another aspect of this phenomenal war which proves how much governments can accomplish by concerted action when they are given the power. Pity that so much social force cannot be exerted under peace conditions as well!

THUS far I have spoken of the more prosaic conditions of life as the traveler experiences it in this time of war. But I cannot close without saying a few words on something of more real importance. This is the first time I have ever been in Europe when I have seen both Italy and France undisturbed by the task of catering to the wants of a horde of foreign pleasure seeking tourists, and the experience is one never to be forgotten. The mere absence of the tourist on the street is a great relief; it must be a blessed relief to the natives of these countries!

These tense days, when all thoughts and emotions are absorbed in the struggle, which one feels to be veritably the struggle for survival, Italy and France have returned to their deepest, most genuine selves, to their fundamental natures, as the individual returns to his real nature under the stress of a great feeling. Rome, Venice, Paris, they are today not as they were before the war came—they will never in all probability be like that again—but they are more fully and strongly themselves. As my landlady in Venice said with that singular appreciation of distinctions that the Latin peoples have, "Venice is what it must have been 300 years ago, before all the world came here."

THE HAPSBURG-SLAV FEUD

PETROGRAD.—From the Balkans, where the war was started, I wrote of its cause, the strife between the Slav race and the Habsburg dynasty. Now that I have been all around Europe, talked with the public men of all the countries, and studied the situation at the source, I will write why it spread like an explosion. The congress of Vienna established the principle that Europe was to be divided at will by the concert of sovereigns. It also via the holy alliance gave birth to the Monroe doctrine, which has its share in this war. In 1818 and again in 1848 popular rights rose against this principle, only to be beaten into submission.

East of France and Italy—unpopular statement—popular rights have been on the wane for sixty years. The principle of a governing board of sovereigns overcame them, but only to meet two new opponents—race consciousness and the empire of Bismarck. Italy was made by a combination of the principles of liberalism and racialism. Germany by racialism and Bismarck. The two combined made chaff of the brotherhood of kings, so powerful seventeen years before Sadowa. Indeed, royal fraternalism had been jarred when Austria failed to support Russia in the Crimean war of 1854 after the czar had shut down the uprising of the Hungarians in 1849.

In 1878 Russia became infected with the new spirit of racialism, in this case combined with religion, and drove the Turks from Europe. This was too much for Bismarck and for English liberalism. They resuscitated the congress of Europe, reintroduced the Turk, and turned over a few thousand square miles and hundred thousands of souls to Austria to administer "in the interest of Europe." Thereafter the congress of Europe passed away. Its father, Russia, was disgusted with the child. Bismarck and England had used a "precedent" for purely practical purposes.

Eighteen hundred and seventy-one brought a new nation into the world, welded in six weeks from small parts into the most powerful empire of Europe. At first it had plenty to do at home, extracting the benefits of the new found union. Then it began to branch out into world commerce. Bismarck, "not a colonial" man, wanted Germans to trade under the protection of the English flag. England was his ally of 1878. England was the enemy of the only possible military rival, Russia. At the same time he founded the imperial navy.

GERMANY, the most powerful nation in Europe, was unique in several respects. First, she was new in an old world. Second, she had created an empire by the conquest of old, highly civilized, vital peoples, not by new discovery or the conquest of savage or decadent races, as with England, Russia, France, and America. Unlike all these, she had no contiguous territory into which to push her increasing population and production. On three sides she had the three strongest military powers in the world. Over the horizon from Cuxhaven lay the mistress of the sea. The very mouth of the Rhine was in foreign hands.

People talk slightingly of German diplomacy. I cannot see it that way. Within fifteen years of Sadowa, Germany made an ally of Austria and a few years later Italy joined in alliance with her old tyrant.

Germany strongly supported Russia's adventure in Manchuria—sound policy. It withdrew the latter's attention from the near east; it consumed her resources. Shortly after the Russo-Japanese war the Young Turk rebellion, led by German educated soldiers, afforded the chance for Austria to annex Bosnia-Herzegovina. Russia protested, but was powerless. England was alarmed. France had never forgiven the loss of Alsace-Lorraine and the huge war indemnity.

CONSCIOUS of France's hate, Germany had thought of destroying her in 1875, but had been deterred by international opinion. The nearness of the crisis further aroused France and led to the dual alliance, in which republican France practically bought the military support of autocratic Russia against the power that lay between them.

Germany embarked on unprecedented military preparations, including strategic railroads to concentrate against France, Russia, and Belgium. Germany also engaged in the building of a navy that might challenge England on the sea. Other nations had been willing for a century to trade abroad under sufferance of England and to arm only against each other. This imperial Germany was not content to do. Supreme on land, she wished to be supreme as well at sea. "I am admiral of the Atlantic" wrote the kaiser to the czar.

Now England depends upon her supremacy at sea not only for her riches, for her empire, but for her very existence. Let another rule the waves and Britannia may starve! Worldly wise Edward VII. conceived and executed the triple entente. Franz Ferdinand of Austria was a strong ally. He it was who was chiefly responsible for the annexation of Bosnia and Herzegovina. He brought the dual kingdom to a much greater pitch of military efficiency than had ever existed before. His death was brought about by a Serbian cause. Its time and manner was most opportune for the German advance.

In the second place it was an assault on monarchy.

In the third place it came before France and Russia had completed their contemplated army reorganizations.

In the fourth place it found Russia in the midst of industrial disorder. France in political anarchy. England on the verge of civil war.

In the fifth place Germany, winning a quarrel in which Austria alone was helpless, could expect to give Austria a place in the empire analogous to Bavaria, Saxony, and Wurtemberg.

Turkey was almost a dependency. Bulgaria had been conciliated with a needed loan—had a German king. Greece a German queen. Let Serbia be conquered and the overland route to the east was open!

Germany would have limited her aggression to Serbia if possible, pleading the rights of sovereigns to Russia. If Russia fought, France would fight as well, not to regain Alsace-Lorraine—she knew her weakness too well for that—but because on the support of the empire of the north hung the life of the republic. France could not stand alone and must follow when Russia called.

Germany could not prophesy England's attitude. No man could forecast that in advance of the fact. What were the thoughts of the czar and his advisers when the issue was made plain that Serbia must be given to Austria with all the consequences it involved, I have no means of knowing. How desperate they expected the war to be I can judge, for I have been given a partial insight into their original plan of campaign, very different from the offensive one they have maintained since the outbreak of war. The new school of Russian generals knew too well France's weakness to count on the French army long holding the Germans in check.

Perhaps a frontal attack across the Franco-German boundary, as the French army turned out to be at the outbreak of war, would have succeeded. Perhaps in that event England would have stayed out of the fight. The German plans were otherwise. Germany demanded free passage through Belgium. Belgium refused. Germany was justified in expecting consent. She knew the Belgian army was only a name. She did not expect Belgium to make herself a vicarious sacrifice. Her mistake lay in not realizing that powerless nations do not appreciate their weakness. Belgium thought that forts and militia could defend her. Frightfully has she paid for her combination of pugnacity and unpreparedness; but by blowing up her own bridges and holding her forts until artillery came up she gave Russia time to make the invasion into East Prussia which, by forcing Germany to withdraw her six army corps from Von Kluck, defeated the invasion of France.

BOHEMIA AND THE CREATIVE ARTS

Thomas Capek has edited a book, "Bohemia Under Hapsburg Misrule," which has recently been published by the Fleming H. Revell company. Besides Mr. Capek several authorities have contributed articles on the Bohemians to the volume. Among them is Prof. Will S. Monroe, whose article is given in part herewith.

By Will S. Monroe.

THE civilization of the Bohemians is distinctly older than that of the German-Austrians, and it developed wholly independent of the Teutonic art movements in Germany and Austria. In the matter of literature Bohemia occupies a place of distinction and priority. The development of the vulgar tongue took place at a comparatively early period. Some of the most ancient of the poetic documents date back to very early times. Indeed, the prose literature of Bohemia, after the Greek and Latin, is one of the oldest in Europe. The three centuries from the time of Charles IV. to the outbreak of the thirty years' war covers the early brilliant period in literature. Two centuries of intellectual barrenness followed the fatal battle of the White mountain and the usurpation of the Bohemian crown by the house of Hapsburg.

The ancient constitution of the kingdom was suppressed and it was replaced by a slightly veiled system of Teutonic absolutism. The lands of the Bohemian nobles who had been patrons of letters were confiscated and given to generals in the Austrian army and to Austrian noblemen. The inhabitants of the flourishing cities, that had been strongholds of the national language and literature, were driven into exile and their places were taken by immigrants of non-Bohemian birth. The country people were reduced to a state of serfdom and attached to the soil. The pillory, the gallows, and the whipping post were the sinister arguments that were employed to obliterate all traces of national culture.

Not only was there a complete arrest in the remarkable literary movement that intervened between the middle ages and the beginning of the thirty years war, but most of the literary treasures of the previous centuries were destroyed by the royal edicts of the reactionary Hapsburg rulers. This was done with the notion that the brilliant period of Bohemian existence might be blotted out and forgotten.

The modern Bohemian literary movement dates back only 100 years. Joseph Dobrovsky (1753-1829), the patriarch of Slavic philology, initiated the literary movement at the beginning of the nineteenth century. The few other Bohemian scholars of the day—Jungmann, Palacky, Kollar, Safarik, and the incomparable publicist Charles Havlicek—lent their services to the rehabilitation of a national language that was long supposed to be dead. The letters of Jungmann give us our most intimate accounts of the struggles of himself and co-patriots during the early day of the modern Bohemian renascence.

During the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries the Austrian government had penalized the publication of books in the Bohemian language and the teaching of the vernacular in the schools of the kingdom. But in spite of prohibitions of the Hapsburg rulers the vernacular continued to be spoken in the country districts. This fact facilitated the extraordinary progress made in the fields of poetry, drama, fiction, criticism, and historical works during the last fourscore years.

The satirical writings of Jan Neruda, the historical dramas of Alois Jirasek, the rich lyrical poetry of Jaroslav Vrchlicky (Frida), the bold imaginative compositions of Julius Zeyer, the modernist poetry of J. S. Machar, the great national epics of Svatopluk Cech, the historical works of Francis Palacky, and the political and sociological writings of Thomas G. Masaryk have made notable contributions to the literary history of modern Bohemia.

In matters of art also Bohemia was early in the field. The Prague school of painting that came into prominence during the reign of Charles IV. (1316-1378) took favorable rank with similar early art movements in Italy. Painters, sculptors, and architects trained in Bohemia are represented today at most of the great cities in Europe where art treasures are preserved. The zealous and promising artistic movement inaugurated in the country by the followers of the Prague school, like most of the other culture movements in the kingdom, was wellnigh extinguished by the attempted Teutonization of the country by the Hapsburg rulers after the fatal Bila Hora.

Bohemia's music is probably better known throughout the civilized world than any other branch of her creative art. This is largely due to the universal character of the language of music and to the eminence of her great tone poets, Smetana and Dvorak. We read in the chronicles of the medieval historians of the rôle played by music in the life of the Bohemian people, and we know that during the Hussite period the Bohemian hymnology attained a degree of excellence that has not been surpassed by later ages. The Bohemian school of music of today takes foremost rank among the music schools of modern Europe.

RIFLES GO; MACHINE GUNS COME

(By a German Purchasing Agent in Rotterdam.)

MILITARY science develops so rapidly in time of actual war that the weapon of today is soon discarded and something better taken up. The greatest asset Germany possesses is her ability to see ahead and make today the weapon of tomorrow.

With the enemy, the rifle is a sort of fetish. The English are highly elated because the war has shown that their men can shoot straighter and quicker than the Germans. There is little cause for triumph in this. A large part of the time is spent in teaching them the construction and use of the rifle, while our men are being taught how to handle and serve the machine gun.

The present war will see the end of many things, as it has seen the birth of many things, and although the rifle may not disappear before peace is signed, its doom as the principal arm of infantry is sounded.

Where is there any sound argument against the gradual substitution of the light machine gun for the rifle? After all, a maxim is merely an improved automatic rifle with a water jacket. A man who could fire a kicking gun of the period of 1815 could fire and carry a maxim with less effort.

Are we not told that in the old days the concentrated fire on one side of an English square emptied less than a score of French saddles at effective range? One modern machine gun would have wiped out the whole squadron.

In modern warfare, and particularly in trench warfare, the soldier who can fire a hundred shots to his opponent's five has ninety-five chances of coming out unscathed. The German soldier prefers the machine gun to the rifle; it enables them to sit down comfortably and squirt death at the foe as water is squirted through a hose, and it gives him that sense of superiority and security which the possession of a superior weapon always brings to the fighting man.

WHEAT REACTS; DEMAND SLACK

Increased Country Sales a Factor; Cable News Mixed; Liverpool Higher.

The wheat market action yesterday was the reverse of that of the previous day. Offerings were heavy and prices receded sharply, the July being especially weak as the result of the lack of demand from shorts and increased hedging pressure. Offerings from the country were quite liberal. Prices at the finish were 1@2⅛c lower for the day.

Cables were steady to 1¼d higher, but some of the strength was due to increased anxiety over the submarine operations and not wholly to the better demand for wheat. The recent advance in American and Argentine markets was a bull factor abroad. Indian shipments were much larger than estimated at 3,184,000 bu, and 2,500,000 bu are expected to be exported the coming week. United Kingdom reports indicate prospects for liberal supplies.

Harvest Area Extending.

Crop news was mixed, but indications were that harvest operations were quite general over most of the winter wheat territory in the central and southern portions. Rains were quite general, but mostly were too light to interfere materially with operations. It is expected thrashing will be general in Oklahoma the coming week, and there should soon be a liberal movement of wheat to market started.

The cash demand was less urgent than it has been recently and premiums were shaded materially. No. 2 hard was 21@21½c over the July. Offerings from some sections were quite free, while the foreign demand was slow. The seaboard reported but little inquiry for new wheat and a New York exporter wired that United Kingdom advices were generally bearish.

Missouri Yield Reduced.

The Missouri report for July makes the average wheat yield 13.2 bu per acre and the total crop 33,000,000 bu, or 4,000,000 bu less than was estimated a month ago, and 10,000,000 bu less than a year ago. The reports of the Kansas Grain Dealers' association makes the crop in that state 108,000,000 bu. This is the lowest estimate yet made. The report shows abandoned acreage of nearly 1,000,000 acres.

Receipts were 390,000 bu at primary points for the day and for the week were 2,409,000 bu, against 2,744,000 bu a year ago. Clearances were 486,000 bu. Northwest points had 194 cars. Selling of July wheat was led by Jackson Bros., Ware-Leland, Wagner, Shearson-Hammill, Raymond-Pynchon, and Harris-Winthrop. Lamson and Bartlett-Frazier were the leading buyers.

Corn Receipts to Increase.

Better weather in some parts of the belt with reports of an increased movement from the country the coming week took the edge off the corn market and prices for the day were ½c to ⅝@⅞c lower. Country houses were credited with being free sellers of the December. The cash demand was fair and there were sales of 125,000 bu. Receipts were 159 cars, with 153 cars inspected yesterday. Primary arrivals were 3,528,000 bu for the week, against 2,774,000 bu a year ago. For the day western receipts were 511,000 bu. Clearances were small at 3,000 bu. Cables were ½d higher. Argentine corn was offered at the seaboard at 72⅝c. Buenos Aires was firm for corn as a result of good export demand.

Oats Prices Close Week.

Oats were weak both for spot and futures, but there was a good shipping demand and sales were 250,000 bu, including some for export. Futures closed ⅛@⅜c lower and spot prices were ½@1c off. Offerings from the country were fair of new oats, but generally at above market prices. No clearances were reported. Commission houses were free sellers. Primary receipts were 837,000 bu, and for the week they were 2,421,000 bu, compared to 3,469,000 bu. The Missouri report makes the July condition 96, against 85 in June and 56 last July. Local receipts were 115 cars, with 102 cars inspected yesterday.

Slow Trade in Products.

Trade in products was slow and without any special feature. Offerings were not heavy, but there was not much demand, and prices were a little easier. Receipts of hogs were 11,500, with 34,000 estimated Monday and 125,000 for the coming week. The cash trade was moderate. There was some talk of an export demand, but details were lacking. Liverpool prices were weak, with backs 6d lower and Cumberlands and hams 3d lower. Cash lard was 3d off at the English market.

Rye Prices Off Sharply.

Barley was 1c higher. Malting sold 70@74c, feed 69½c, and screenings 63@69c. Receipts were 24 cars.

Timothy seed was steady. September sold $7.60, October closed $7.30 asked. Country lots were easy at $5.50@6.50 nominal. Clover seed was unchanged, with country lots $8.50@13.25 nominal.

Duluth flax closed ⅛@1½c higher, with cash on track $1.75½, July $1.76, September $1.78½, and October $1.80. Receipts 14 cars. Minneapolis closed ½@1c higher, with cash on track $1.73@1.74. Receipts were 12 cars. Winnipeg closed 1⅝c higher for July at $1.55½, and ¼c up for October at $1.50¼. Receipts 6 cars.

NEWS AND GOSSIP OF BOARD OF TRADE.

Judging from the demand for cash wheat the situation was not so acute as it appeared the previous day. Premiums were lower for No. 2 hard, which sold at 21@21½c over July. No. 2 red was about 17c over and new No. 3 red sold at $1.18½. July wheat was weak relatively. Offerings of new wheat from the country were fair, and there was considerable hedging. Outside markets generally were easy for the July and also for cash wheat, with offerings generally reported more liberal in the southwest.

Dealers reported somewhat more liberal offerings of corn from the country, and some predicted quite a fair run the coming week. St. Louis wired that a canvass of receivers showed the country to be loosening up on corn and that much larger receipts were expected the coming week. Cash prices here were about ½@1c lower, and there were sales of 125,000 bu. Oats were in good demand, with sales of 250,000 bu.

A government bulletin says: "The Hessian fly is inflicting immense damage to wheat crops through northeastern Oklahoma, northern Arkansas, Kansas, Missouri, Nebraska, southern Iowa, and in Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, and Pennsylvania." The department says nothing can be done now to lessen the damage to the present crop, but warns farmers to sow no wheat in August in order to save next year's crop from bugs.

The Missouri July report as wired by King of Toledo makes the condition of corn 76, against 85 in June, and 81 last July. In last September the corn condition was 56. Acreage is 95 per cent of last year. Wheat crop is placed at 33,000,000 bu. Government June estimate was 37,000,000 bu, against 43,000,000 bu a year ago. Wheat yield was 13.2 per acre. Oats condition was placed at 96, against 85 in June and 56 last July.

A leading oats shipper said that he was unable to buy any new oats for July-August shipment at the market price yesterday and that the demand east was good. In some quarters liberal offerings of oats for August shipment were reported, but generally at a little better than the prevailing market prices. For new standards for August or July-August shipment ½c under September was bid.

Le Count wired Barrell from Watertown, S. D.: "Prospect through this country is nearly perfect. Stand is very heavy and if this crop matures properly it will be the greatest this country ever raised. Weather very cool. Corn is making no progress, and I do not believe the corn crop in northern part of belt can mature."

Springfield, Ill., wired Barrell: "Thrashing of wheat general in southern Illinois this morning. Looks like the greatest crop of wheat and oats ever raised. Corn is making wonderful progress and about 6 feet high, with greatest prospects in years."

Liverpool cabled Bartlett-Frazier: "Wheat market affected by advices from your side. No. 2 hard winter, July-August shipment, 3d per quarter higher. The market is dull at the advance. There is no demand. Forecast is for large shipments."

A report to J. A. Edwards from Mineral, Ill., said there was a good deal of smut in oats. The smut appears to be quite noticeable in nearly every piece of oats. Crop is also weedy. Corn is making rapid progress.

Smiley estimates yield of oats in Kansas at 37 bu to the acre. He places abandoned wheat acreage at 928,000 acres and this leaves area to be harvested 8,357,000 acres. The average yield will be 13 bu.

Receipts of wheat here for the week were 144,000 bu, compared to shipments of 1,048,000 bu; corn, receipts 1,129,000 bu; shipments, 1,425,000 bu; oats, receipts, 1,251,000 bu; shipments, 1,549,000 bu.

Most of the weather reports received during the day indicated clear and fine weather southwest and west, although the forecast was for unsettled and showery weather in the southwest.

Estimated receipts for Tuesday: Wheat, 9 cars; corn, 153 cars; oats, 102 cars; rye, 2 cars; barley, 24 cars. Hogs for Monday, 34,000 head, and for all next week 125,000 head.

Minneapolis wired Keusch-Schwartz that all the cash grain was strong and in good demand. Barley was ½c higher. Yellow corn was reported especially strong.

Indian wheat shipments for the week were 3,184,000 bu. The estimate for the coming week is 2,500,000 bu. Shipments were much larger than expected.

Secretary Smiley of the Kansas Grain Dealers' association places the Kansas wheat yield at 108,000,000 bu and corn condition is 61.

Reports from around Dwight, Ill., say oats prospects are best ever known and corn is making good growth the last week.

A cargo of spring wheat of about 100,000 bu has arrived here from Duluth, grading No. 2 mixed spring.

Wheat is expected to start moving from central and southern Illinois by the middle of the month.

Kansas City messages said the July wheat there was strong and would sell as high as Chicago July.

Rain was reported at Hutchinson, Kas., and a few other points early.

Argentine corn was reported offered c. i. f. New York at 72⅝c.

Oklahoma reports said thrashing would be general on Monday.

Minneapolis wheat stocks decreased 60,000 bu for one day.

Flour sales at Minneapolis were reported light.

HOGS.

Hog market opened at a decline of 5@10c, but only the most desirable offerings were taken on that basis and holders had to make concessions of 15@25c from Friday's figures before they could clear mixed packing and heavyweight animals. Receipts were posted at 10,000 head, or about as the trade had expected, but the shipping dmand was light and packers did not want many, as slaughtering is to be completely suspended on Monday. Top sales early were made at $7.82½, while best hogs on the late market had to sell at $7.70 and the bulk of the receipts cleared at $7.25@7.70.

Final prices made hogs largely 25c lower than a week ago, although best lightweights showed a loss of only 15c. The average price for the week was lowered to $7.60, showing a loss of 10c from last week's average. Pigs closed at a decline of 25c, most of which loss was sustained in the Saturday trade. Receipts for the week were about 2,000 head in excess of last week's and 25,000 larger than for the same week last year.

CATTLE.

Although receipts of cattle at Chicago this week were the largest in two months, prices of fat corn fed and distillery steers made spectacular gains and closed 40@50c higher than a week ago for the most desirable grades, and 10@35c higher for cheaper kinds. A top of $9.95 was made, and the bulk of the steers sold at $8.65@9.50, compared with $8.40@9.35 for the bulk and $9.70 for the best last week. Cows and heifers also sold higher early in the week, but had a bad reaction towards the close because of the suspension of slaughtering operations at local packing plants next Monday, and finished the week 25@35c lower than a week ago. Bulls and calves closed steady with a week ago.

Cattle at six western markets for the week, 112,400, against 106,200 the preceding week, 111,000 a year ago, and 91,200 two years ago. Total for 1915 to date, 2,968,000, against 2,871,000 the same period in 1914.

SHEEP.

Matured sheep finished the week on a firm basis and largely 25c higher than a week ago. The week's receipts consisted chiefly of spring lambs, however, and these closed 50@85c lower than last week. Receipts for the week increased nearly 10,000 head, while packers' requirements were curtailed, especially late in the week, because of the closing up of packing plants on Monday, July 5. Range wethers topped the sheep division this week at $7.00, while range spring lambs reached $10.90. There were no desirable sheep offered on the market on closing days, but spring lambs on the last active session sold down to $10.00 for the best.

TAKE STEPS TO ADJUST STATE SWITCHING RATES.

Conference Considers Tariffs That Apply to Local Car Movements—Intercity Schedules Not Affected.

Steps leading to the adjustment of switching rates in Illinois were taken yesterday at a conference between representatives of shippers and carriers. The meeting was presided over by J. L. Bowlus, examiner for the public utilities commission, which has the switching case under consideration.

The rates will affect Chicago chiefly, though all the industrial centers in the state will be affected. The regulations will apply only to purely local movements of cars and not to switching at the conclusion of an intercity haul.

The shippers and carriers have agreed on a classification of services performed, but they have been unable to determine the proper rates. If no agreement is reached the commission will probably hear the discussion on rates on July 26.

Eastern Wisconsin Railway and Light.

S. S., Oshkosh, Wis.—The Eastern Wisconsin Railway and Light company is earning just under twice its interest charges. Earnings have increased steadily for ten years. The results in 1914 were: Gross earnings, $332,445; net after taxes, $122,898; interest, $62,651; surplus, $60,247. There is $500,000 of stock, on which 6 per cent dividends are paid. The $1,196,000 of bonds are a first mortgage on most of the property, but are subject to $187,000 of underlying bonds on part of it. The bonds appear to be a sound investment. The market for them is narrow because the issue is comparatively small and the corporation not widely known. The bond house from which you bought your bonds is probably the best market. Similar bonds in larger issues are selling on a 5½ to 5¾ per cent income basis at present.

New England Mutual Life.

F. R. T.—The New England Mutual Life company has been in business seventy-two years and has had a steady growth. At the end of last year it had $290,732,446 of insurance in force, $70,168,011 of assets, and $5,003,584 of surplus. It is economically managed and its death rate is low, making the net cost of insurance moderate. Investments are of good character and yield a good rate of income.

American Telegraphone.

A. E. K.—The American Telegraphone company has a capitalization of $5,000,000, and controls patents on a device for dictating correspondence in an office or recording speeches or conversation at long distances. The company has a factory at Springfield, Mass., and a number of machines, but it has not made a commercial success of its invention thus far. It has never paid any dividends, and sees no immediate prospects of any. If you paid $15 a share for stock, the only way you can get any part of the money back is to sell your shares. There is a nominal market for them of 35 cents bid 60 cents asked.

Twin City Rapid Transit.

P. C., Duluth, Minn.—The Twin City Rapid Transit company has enjoyed prosperity during the last year, showing an increase in traffic every month in comparison with the corresponding month a year before up to the month of May, when a decrease was shown. The company pays 7 per cent on its $3,000,000 of preferred stock and 6 on its $21,672,100 of common. This rate has been paid on common since 1910. Bonds outstanding to the amount of about $20,000,000 are a high grade investment. The preferred dividend is protected by a wide margin of earnings. The common dividend is being earned rather more than twice at present and nothing but a great decrease in earnings is likely to lessen it. The common stock has a nominal market quotation of 97 bid, 98 asked.

Brief Answers.

C. G. L., Esq., Mason, Ill.—New York stock quotations are in per cent of par value unless otherwise specified. Mining stocks of low par value are quoted in dollars. The price of 36 for Anaconda means $36 a share. Quotations on other exchanges than New York are usually in dollars.

V. E. P., Albany, N. Y.—There is no information available concerning the oil company you ask about, but if, as you indicate, the company is selling stock to raise money to drill for oil you may be certain it is a hazardous speculation.

Blindfolded Tire Buyers

The Way to the Light

We are fighting your battles as well as ours when we advertise these facts.

Tires are not alike. There are dozens of standards. The fierce competition forces many a compromise.

Two tires may seem almost identical. Yet one may twice outlast the other, and reduce troubles 50 per cent.

Features Which Cost Millions

Goodyear Fortified Tires have five great features found in no other tire. They have other features which are rare—hidden features, never missed until the tires meet trouble.

Those Goodyear extras, on this year's output, will cost us $1,635,000. Our 1915 improvements alone will cost us $500,000 yearly.

All this—or nearly all—for things you never see. For things you never miss in other tires until failure shows their lack.

$5,000,000 Saved

Yet our late price reduction saves our users about five million dollars this year. And that was our third reduction in two years, totaling 45 per cent.

While we add costly betterments we are reducing your cost. This by new efficiency and multiplied output. We are giving a value in Goodyear tires with which no rival can compete.

How to Judge

Judge tires by the maker. Goodyear standards appeal to every man.

But judge, above all, by records. Not by incidents, not by exceptions. Good luck or mishap affects individual tires. Note that Goodyear tires, after 16 years, far outsell any other. Note how they have held this top place for years. That gives you the broad-view verdict.

By every measure you can use, Goodyear tires are best. Come join their countless friends. Any dealer will supply you.

HEAVY CHANGES IN BANK FIGURES

New York Loans Up, While Surplus Reserve Shrinks Nearly $30,000,000.

The New York bank statement showed some heavy changes covering the July 1 period of interest and dividend disbursements and special operations. Deposits were swollen by over $69,000,000 and loans expanded $80,000,000, while there was a decrease of $29,310,930 in the excess reserve compared with the previous week. The surplus reserve item, however, stands at $163,942,100, and the changes in yesterday's figures were largely abnormal in character. The "actual" statement follows:

Morgan and the Market.

The reported attempt on J. P. Morgan's life had a temporary effect on yesterday's market. It is probable that what was suggested will have greater influence in the coming week than did the events of yesterday.

From a purely financial viewpoint the action of the market disclosed the belief that the Morgan firm is now an institution and an operating proposition in which any one member is recognized as a cog. United States Steel common stock, a Morgan promotion, sold off from 60 to 58. There was one sale at that quotation when the price began to advance and sold up to 59⅞.

When J. P. Morgan, founder of the firm, passed away his demise had no effect on the market or business situation. This was not because Mr. Morgan was not regarded as the greatest financier in the country, but because there were no deals pending in which his personality was a master factor and which could not be carried out successfully without his direction.

No Fabric of Credit Involved.

The only matter with which the Morgan firm is now conspicuously identified is that of agency in this country for the British government in the matter of purchasing war supplies and chief representative in placing loans. That business could presumably be carried on impersonally by the firm. There is no fabric of credit depending for its permanency on any act the firm may or may not do.

In domestic finance there is no great reorganization pending owing its inception or successful consummation to the Morgan firm. There is no important consolidation of industries pending; there is no United States loan pending whose success might depend on concerted action that could only be brought about by such personality as that possessed by the late J. P. Morgan. The federal reserve bank system now stands as the source of credit toward which any financial necessity will direct the mind of the country.

What the attack on Mr. Morgan suggests is of great moment. If the war situation is to incite assumed cranks to attack the most shining marks in this country the gravest results may follow.

ny is the manufacturer of acetylene gas tanks which universally used before the electric lighting systems for automobiles. It was thought that the introduction of electric lighting systems during the last two or three years would seriously affect the company's earnings, but on the contrary they have increased. This was due largely to the continued refilling of tanks on over a million automobiles, motorcycles, yachts, etc., and to the progress the company is making in adapting its system and products to commercial fields, such as furnishing and refilling gas tanks for contractors, railroads, and manufacturers, and refilling of oxy-acetylene outfits for cutting, welding, etc.

St. Paul Situation.

"I do not know of any occasion for a slump in St. Paul market prices. The cause must be unrelated to the company's affairs that are within the view of the management here. Business is just dragging along, but traffic prospects are more encouraging throughout the northwest.

"Our May net was not very much and a comparison with June probably will not show substantial change. The first half of June showed some gain in loadings. I have heard no talk of a change in dividend rate."

IN FOREIGN STOCK MARKETS.

LONDON, July 3.—Money and discount rates were quiet and steady today. The stock market was dull and uninteresting, with the exceptions of a moderate showing of strength in oil shares and home rails and the usual markings in the war loan for conversion purposes. New York's holiday Monday accentuated the dullness. In the American section of the stock market prices were merely adjusted to parity with a few sales of Canadian Pacific and United States Steel. Bar silver, 22 15-16d per ounce. Money, 1¾ per cent. Discount rates, short bills, 4¾ per cent. Three months, 4¾ per cent.

BERLIN, July 1, via London, July 3.—[Delayed by censor.]—The statement of the Reichsbank, issued June 29, showed the following increases:

Metal stock, treasury certificates, and notes of other banks, $38,486,500; gold, $788,750; discounts, $176,909,000; loans, $158,250; note circulation, $153,656,000; deposits, $46,868,000. There was a decrease in treasury bills of $214,500.

DRY GOODS.

NEW YORK, July 3.—There was a good deal of interest displayed in four-yard sheetings for delivery during the next sixty days, but the placing of business was postponed until next week. Colored cotton goods were in steady demand for immediate delivery. The linen market continued to be strong though generally quiet. Burlaps continued to rule very high.

STOCKS RESIST MORGAN SHOCK

Total sales of stocks, 190,000 shares.

Total sales of bonds (par value), $1,425,000.

New York, July 3.—The underlying strength of the financial situation was again demonstrated today by the manner in which the stock market withstood the attempted assassination of J. P. Morgan. For a very brief period prices wavered from 1 to 2 points, but made almost complete recovery before the close, on assurances that the financier's injuries were not serious.

Irregular tendencies prevailed at the opening, mainly because of further selling of St. Paul, yesterday's weak feature which soon recorded a loss of 2¼ points to 82, its lowest quotation for many years. This was followed by sympathetic weakness and some short selling of other grangers, as well as the transcontinental group, where the average recessions ran from 1 to 2 points.

Steel Hit by Morgan Shooting.

News of the Morgan shooting came midway in the brief session and affected the industrial group more than other issues. United States Steel, with which the name of Morgan is so closely identified, fell off 1¼ to 59, while American Can, many of the war specialties, and motors sagged from 1 to 2½.

The setback was only temporary, however, supporting orders soon overcoming any threatened liquidation. Before the close most losses were reduced to minor fractions, the market showing absolutely no trace of disorder.

Trade Reports More Encouraging.

Trade reports were more encouraging, the last half of the year in the opinion of authorities affording striking contrast to the first half. Shipments of textiles and general merchandise were heavier than in the corresponding week of last year. Rumors of further upward revision of prices for steel and iron were current.

With its actual loan expansion of $80,000,000, the local bank statement plainly reflected the shifting of moneys incidental to midyear interest and dividend disbursements. It is not improbable, also, that foreign sales of our securities contributed to the loan increase. The cash loss exceeded $26,000,000, with a $29,000,000 decrease in reserves.

Bonds were irregular, with further moderate foreign sales. United States bonds were unchanged on call during the week.

THERE is much satisfaction in real estate circles over the fact that the real estate corporation bill safely passed Gov. Dunne's scrutiny and has now become a law. Despite its safeguards and limitations many supporters of the bill were fearful that it might not secure the governor's approval, so strong has the sentiment been down the state against real estate corporations of any character. There also was some opposition to it in Chicago, but it is evident the governor was impressed with the merits of the law and the arguments of those who favored it.

Regarding the prospective operations of the law, there seems to be an impression among many that it is going to bring about a big building boom, particularly in the downtown district, because of the facility with which buildings can be erected under the terms of the new law, and because it is thought a certain class of operators will seek to exploit the new field with propositions appealing to the small investor who heretofore has been barred from this field.

It is thought by some, too, that many big flat building propositions will be launched, and that generally speaking there will be a volume of building such as the city has not witnessed in all its history.

Note of Warning Sounded.

In this connection it may be well to sound a note of warning for the benefit of those who are without accurate knowledge of the building situation from an investment standpoint and who are likely to be influenced by the specious showing made by some smooth promoter to put their money into unprofitable projects.

Regarding the downtown district it may be said without fear of contradiction that there is no crying need for more buildings, unless it be to provide a larger or more suitable home for some particular mercantile concern whose business has outgrown its present quarters.

As for office buildings, there are enough and to spare. In fact, it is estimated by competent judges in this field that the present supply of office space is sufficient to meet the requirements of the city for at least three years to come without the erection of another building. The same is largely true of store and loft space, although not to the same extent.

Regarding flat buildings, it may be said that the number of vacancies in various parts of the city is not suggestive of a particularly inviting field for many additional buildings of this character. It perhaps should be said that the situation is a somewhat peculiar one in that there seems to be a good demand for certain classes of buildings in certain parts of the city, while other buildings, particularly those of the older type, in other parts of the city are much neglected.

The neighborhood and character of the building determines its earning capacity, hence no hard and fast rule can be laid down. Experience and a knowledge of local conditions are important factors in successful ventures in this field.

Too Many Outside Stores.

As is the case in the downtown district there has been overbuilding of business buildings in the outlying parts of the city. It may be said that this is not true of all the outlying business sections, but as a rule the supply of space in these structures is considerably in excess of the demand.

To illustrate, in two adjoining blocks in an essentially residence district there are two buildings nearly completion, one of which contains ten stores and the other fourteen. It is probable that four of the stores are sufficient to meet the business requirements of that neighborhood.

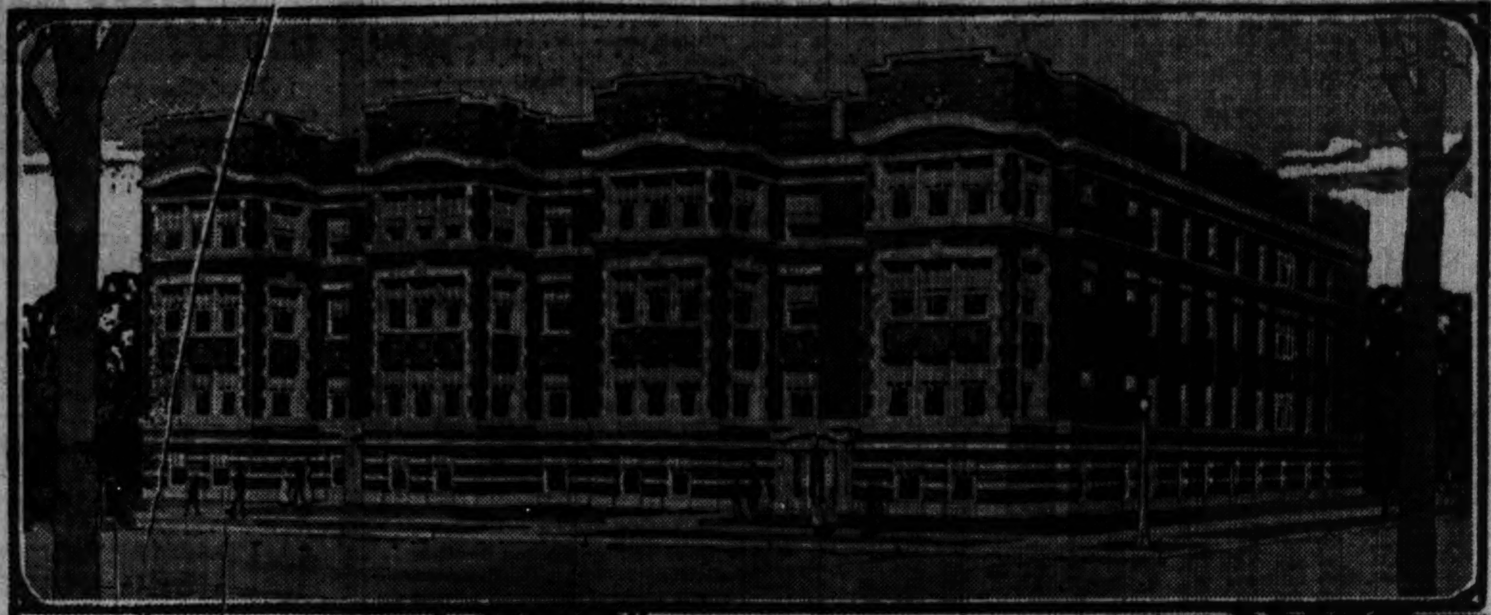
The moving picture theater building is in the same category, and the erection of these buildings in all parts of the city is largely responsible for a development of local business centers in excess of the requirements of their respective neighborhoods. The trouble is, as in all fruitful fields, that it has been overdone, despite the remarkable growth of this institution in public favor. For a time it was an exceedingly rich harvest, and it is today as respects certain classes of theaters, but not to the extent it was two or three years ago.

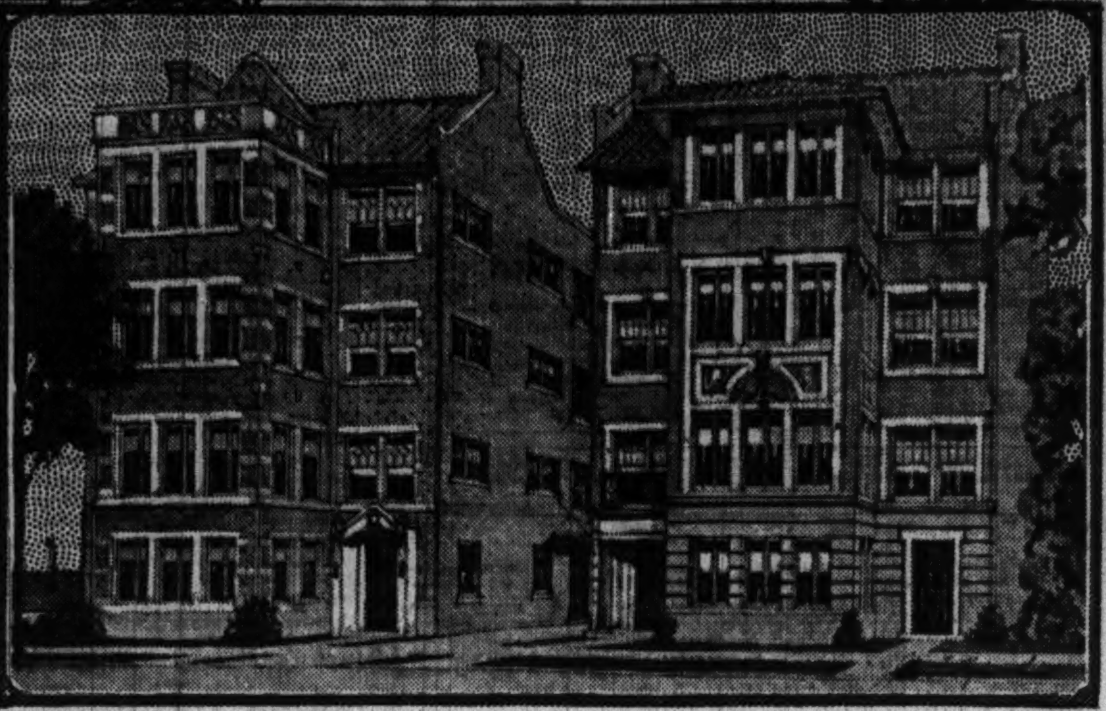
One Inviting Field Benefited.

There is, however, one particularly inviting field for the operations of the corporate building law, and one concerning which little has been said, and that is the construction of manufacturing buildings. The opportuity is presented in the fact that there are hosts of manufacturing concerns which really need new and larger quarters, but which are not prepared to take the money out of their business to construct them. They are solid, substantial concerns, who would be excellent tenants for any corporation which built for them. Here is a field where the new corporation law has broad and inviting opportunities.

The advantages of the new law in a more general way are so many and so great that the people of Chicago and Illinois are to be congratulated on finally securing what should never have been denied them.

Classy Flat Homes in Hyde Park and on North Shore.





THE "Ingleside apartments" is the name of a particularly attractive building being erected at the southwest corner of Ingleside avenue and Fifty-second street. It will occupy a lot 100x109 feet, is three stories and English basement, and will contain twelve apartments, each with six rooms, two baths and sun parlor. It will be completed about Oct. 1. In connection with its construction the Central Trust company has made a 6 per cent serial bond issue loan of $54,000.

Two unique apartment buildings are being constructed at 7737-39 Garrison avenue, just south of Sheridan road, conspicuous features of which will be a combination boathouse, garage, and roof garden, 20x40 feet. The buildings, detached three apartment structures, are being constructed by Simeon Swenson. The buildings will occupy a lot 80x175 feet, west front, backing up to Lake Michigan, with a driveway between. Each apartment will consist of eight rooms and reception room, two sleeping porches, and billiard room in the basement. There also will be a teahouse and pergola on the lake front for each building. The apartments will rent for $225 a month each.

Subdividers Report Corner Trade Brisk

The clear and warm weather of the last week, together with the advent of the interest and dividend period for the half year, have operated to the advantage of the subdividers. Increased sales are the order of the day. Reports from the larger operators indicate a good demand for property with speculative features and this demand is intensified by the conditions in the building trades. The demand for property around section line corners and transfer corners continues brisk and there is undoubtedly much savings money and dividends going into this class of property.

The most important subdivision features of the week were the announcement of the closing sale of Marquette Manor and the initial offering of Frederick H. Bartlett & Co.'s new La Grange subdivision.

The aggregate sale of lots in Marquette Manor since the first of the year amounts to over $1,500,000, and the closing out sale is announced for today and tomorrow. The activity brought to the southwest side by the widespread advertisement and sale of Marquette Manor has benefited property generally in this district. In speaking of the closing sale William H. Britigan, manager of Marquette Manor, says:

"It is our intention to stand behind the development of Marquette Manor and to guide the destiny of this important real estate enterprise for some time to come. We do not consider our work done at the present time, and we will only be satisfied when all our plans have been carried out to their completion. We expect to maintain at least one office on the property, from which we will handle Marquette Manor business. The Marquette Manor club is under our direction and other developments will be handled in the same way. We will have some important public announcements to make within the next thirty days relative to Marquette Manor and the Marquette Manor district."

Much progress is being made in the vicinity of Forty-eighth street and Belmont avenue, where Koester & Zander and George C. Hjeld & Co. are operating. The price of acreage along Forty-eighth avenue has advanced considerably in value during the recent activity in this section, and this is true also of the acreage on Belmont avenue between Fortieth avenue and Fifty-sixth avenue.

Sales continue brisk in H. O. Stone's Hill Crest subdivision at Seventy-second and Grand avenues and at Green Fields, the half acre property being offered by Mills & Son. This latter property is situated at North and Seventy-second avenues, directly adjoining the property of the new Oak Park Country club.

FLAT PROPERTY DEMAND LIGHT

There was not much doing of an important character in flat property during the week. There was a fair run of minor transactions, but a scarcity of those of any magnitude.

The most important deal of the week was the sale by W. H. Hess and J. W. Wood to Varina S. Smith of New York of the eighteen flat building, southwest corner Clarendon avenue and Montrose boulevard, lot 100x136 feet, for a reported consideration of $130,000, subject to $50,000. The purchaser gave in part payment Arkansas land valued at $50,000. Edward E. Hamer & Co. represented both parties.

24 Apartment Building Sold.

John S. Holmes, the builder, sold to Julius Strauss the twenty-four apartment building with 100x170 feet of ground at the northwest corner of Estes avenue and Paulina street for an indicated consideration of $90,000, subject to an incumbrance of $52,500. In part payment the purchaser conveyed the property at the southeast corner of Highland and Greenview avenues, improved with a two flat building.

The nine apartment building at the southeast corner of Kimbark avenue and Hyde Park boulevard, lot 50x120 feet, has been sold by O. F. Richter to Ward B. Sawyer for an indicated consideration of $36,000, subject to an incumbrance of $20,000. L. T. Kelley, with Thomas H. Kelley, was the broker.

W. J. MacDonald Buys Flat.

Stafford & Trankle sold for C. W. Moore to W. J. MacDonald a twelve flat building, lot 37.7x144 feet, for a stated consideration of $37,250, subject to $20,000 incumbrance.

Ben Lowenmeyer bought from John O'Connor the high grade six flat building in Grand boulevard, 196 feet south of Forty-third street, lot 48x150 feet, east front, for an indicated consideration of $50,000, subject to $28,250.

OUTSIDE SECTION BUSINESS SITES IN GOOD DEMAND

Store Property Continues Active and Makes Best Showing for Several Weeks.

Outside business property figured conspicuously in the week's market, making in the aggregate a better showing than for several weeks. Considering the depressing effect of the trouble in the building trades on the market it is standing up surprisingly well, affording the best possible evidence of its real strength.

One of the notable deals of the week was the sale of the seven story Allen building and leasehold at the northwest corner of Cottage Grove avenue and Oakwood boulevard in exchange for the Nottingham apartments at the northwest corner of Pine Grove avenue and Cornelia street. The Allen building, which contains 5 stores, 10 offices, and 112 small apartments, was conveyed by Joseph L. Duplissis to C. E. Gamet et al., trustees under the Nottingham trust.

Gets Nottingham Building.

The latter conveyed to Mr. Duplissis the Nottingham building, which contains 30 apartments of 4, 5, and 6 rooms on a lot 100x125 feet a block from the lake and the new extension to Lincoln pak. The building was erected in 1912 and figured in the transaction at an indicated consideration of $148,833, made up an incumbrance of $93,833 and $55,000 paid for the equity.

It is stated the Allen building was given a value of $110,000 in the transaction. The lease of the ground, which has seventy-five years to run, provides for an annual rent of $7,500, which, capitalized on a 5 per cent basis, gives a leasing value of $150,000. Mr. Duplissis subsequently transferred his interest in the Nottingham apartments to William Pusch of the Laporte Milling company for the property of the latter at a reported consideration of $45,000, clear.

William J. Accola of Chandler, Hildreth & Co. represented all the parties to the transaction, while John D. Wild attended to the legal details. Chandler, Hildreth & Co. will continue the management of the properties.

Big Deal on South Side.

Another important transaction in south side business property was the purchase by Edward S. Hunter from Richard Curran of the property at the northwest corner of Sixty-third street and Blackstone avenue for a reported consideration of $85,000. Mr. Hunter gave in part payment the residence property at 5228 University avenue, 100x173 feet of ground, for a reported price of $50,000.

The business block occupies 180x150 feet of ground and is improved with a two story store and office building. It was sold subject to an incumbrance of $35,000. The residence is three stories, of brick and stone construction, and contains twelve rooms, with a brick garage in the rear. It is considered one of the handsomest residences in the Kenwood district.

The deal was negotiated by J. E. Bistor of W. K. Young & Bro., who acted for both parties. Judge Jesse Holdom attended to the legal details for Mr. Hunter.

A notable north side transaction covered the Eagle building at the southeast corner of Sheridan road and Clarendon avenue, which was sold by Isaac Ettelson to Mrs. Helena J. Reed for an indicated consideration of $90,000. The building, which occupies a lot 50x125 feet, is a two story and basement white tile front building containing five stores and fifteen offices.

Active Trading in District.

There is much activity in this immediate district, buildings with an aggregate value of $500,000 being now in course of construction within one block.

The property was sold subject to an incumbrance of $38,000, the purchaser conveying in part payment the three story and basement brick residence at 2824 Sheridan road on a lot 50x170 feet, at a valuation of $40,000. The deal was negotiated by Regelin, Jenson & Co. representing Mr. Ettelson and Cremin & O'Connor Mrs. Reed. Julius Ettelson was connected with the deal.

Abraham D. Ansher sold to Benjamin Sachs the property at the southwest corner of West Twelfth street and Karlov avenue, lot 50x141 feet, with store and flat improvements of four stores and fifteen flats, for a stated consideration of $65,000, subject to two trust deeds, amount not stated, but the revenue stamps on the document indicate that $32,500 was paid for the equity.

Takes Leasehold in Payment.

In part payment Mr. Sachs conveyed the leasehold estate in 52.9x172 feet of ground, east front, in Michigan avenue 436 feet north of Sixteenth street, and the three story building thereon for an indicated consideration of $25,000. Steinberg, Orner & Astrahan were the brokers.

Henry I. Holton and A. S. Justin sold to Kathryn and George S. Haskell the property, southeast corner Sixty-seventh street and Blackstone avenue, lot 104x115, with new building containing three stores, with six offices and flats, fronting on Sixty-seventh street, and a six flat building fronting on Blackstone for a reported $64,000, subject to $35,000, trade being taken in part payment. Moore & Schmidt and Holton, Seelye & Co. were the brokers.

The two story frame store and flat building, lot 50x120 feet, at 8329-31 Lincoln avenue, was sold by Henry I. Ritter to Sam Wolf and Nathan W. Mittleman for $30,000, subject to $23,00, the seller taking the store and flat property at the southeast corner Fullerton and Spaulding avenues, valued at $26,000, subject to $10,000. Gordon, Lapin & Co. were the brokers.

SELLS AT $50 FRONT FOOT.

Ben Lowenmeyer, the north shore subdivider, who purchased 1,350 feet of frontage on Sheridan road, south of Highland Park about two weeks ago, reports the sale of 800 feet of the tract at the rate of $50 a front foot.

Leases and Loans.

A noteworthy loan in the downtown district, one of the largest of the year, was closed late in the week. The amount was $570,000, five years at 5 per cent, and was loaned by the Northern Trust company, trustee, to Mrs. Carrie L. Munn of Washington, D. C. The borrower has the privilege of paying $10,000 or any multiple thereof on any interest paying day, although it is provided no more than $70,000 of the principal is to be paid in any one year.

The loan was secured in connection with the construction of the new Lyon & Healy building at the northeast corner of Wabash avenue and Jackson boulevard. Mrs. Munn is the owner of the 96x171 feet to be occupied by the building and under the terms of the lease to Lyon & Healy is to furnish $500,000 of the cost of the building, anything above that to fall on the firm.

Generally speaking, little change is reported in the mortgage loan market, although the trend unquestionably is toward easier interest rates. Thus, while 6 per cent continues to be the prevailing rate for outside loans the man with really good security is becoming quite insistent upon a 5½ per cent rate, and is getting it quite often. A few months ago he would have accepted a 6 per cent rate without question.

As regards leases, there was nothing of a really important character reported last week. The renting situation in the downtown district, while not satisfactory, shows an improvement over conditions prevailing two months ago, and it is believed there will be a sharp revival in this field. Much of the slowness here is due to a feeling of uncertainty as to the business outlook which is operating as a deterrent to all new undertakings or enlargements. Accordingly, it is believed that with convincing tangible evidence of improved business conditions there will naturally follow a sharp demand for much of the space for which little demand is had at present.

Several interesting leases were reported of space in the upper floors of the Tower building, Michigan avenue and Madison street, by Lee J. Lesser & Co. One comprises the lease by the School of Domestic Arts and Science of the entire fifth floor of the building for a term of years at a reported term rent of $127,900.

The school, now located at the southeast corner of State and Lake streets, has been in existence for about fourteen years and has taken twice the amount of space in the Tower building that it occupied in its old quarters. Lesser & Co. represented the building and Baird & Warner the school.

In another transaction Sylvester J. Simon has leased space in the Tower building for a reported term rent of $62,900. It is stated that these leases, in connection with the other tenants in the building, take practically over 90 per cent of the upper floors of the building.

The Chicago Title and Trust company is trustee in a loan of $90,000, twenty years at 5½ per cent, to Harder's Fireproof Storage and Van company, secured by the property of the company at the northwest corner of Calumet avenue and Fortieth street, 175x128 feet, with fireproof warehouse.

Acting for Dunlap & Co. of Oak Park Francis M. Case & Co. have made a loan of $75,000 to Dr. Harlan on the high grade twenty-seven flat building to be erected at the northeast corner of Washington boulevard and Ridgeland avenue. The same firm has made a loan of $28,000 to Adolph Lundgren on the southeast corner of Lawndale and Leland avenues, 97x125 feet, and a twelve flat building.

Gustav G. Anders has given a trust deed to the Fort Dearborn Trust and Savings bank on the property at the northeast corner of Drexel avenue and Fifty-third street, with 135x109 feet of ground, west front, as security for a loan of $52,500 for seven years at 6 per cent interest.

Record was made of a lease to Roder & Co. of the ground floor and basement space in the Union Hotel and Restaurant building for fifteen years from Dec. 1, 1914, at a term rent of $176,000. Also the lease by S. A. Cohn and J. M. Lavelette of store and basement at 184-86 North Clark street for ten years from May 1, 1915, at a term rent of $54,300. The leases were negotiated by E. F. Keebler & Co.

The trustees of the Field estate have leased to the Metropolitan Life Insurance company of New York about 3,000 square feet of space on the sixteenth floor of the new Conway building. The lease is of special interest for the reason the Metropolitan, while one of the largest life insurance companies in the country, is not now located in the loop district.

SISTERS BUY CONVENT SITE.

There was filed for record during the week a deed in which the Sisters of Providence, St. Mary's of the Woods, Vigo county, Ind., acquired from the Sisters of the Visitation the property in Evanston known as the Convent and Academy of the Visitation at 2128 Ridge avenue, for an indicated consideration of $145,000, subject to an incumbrance of $50,000. The property has an equity of $95,000, according to the amount of revenue stamps attached to the deed. The improvements comprise a five story and basement brick structure, with accommodations for forty sisters and from 75 to 100 pupils.

LABOR TROUBLE FAILS TO HALT BUILDING PLANS

New Projects Taken as Indication of Optimism Over an Early Settlement.

Considering the serious troubles in the building trades, a surprisingly good showing was made last week in the way of new building projects. As intimated a week ago in this column, this does not mean that it is planned to begin work at once in all these projects, but it certainly does seem to indicate a general belief that a settlement of the pending trouble is likely to be reached in the near future.

One of the interesting developments was the announcement that East Forty-seventh street in the district east of Cottage Grove avenue, where there has been much building during the last year or two, is to have another large new building. It will occupy a plot of ground having a frontage of 160 feet, with a depth of 160 feet on the north side of the street between Greenwood and Woodlawn avenues, and will be erected by John D. Farrell.

Will Have 68 Apartments.

The building, which will be three stories and basement, will contain sixty-eight apartments of three to five rooms and six stores and will have an estimated annual gross rent of about $32,640. The building is expected to cost about $175,000, and in connection with its construction Mr. Farrell has secured a bond issue loan of $140,000, six years at 6 per cent, from Peabody, Houghteling & Co.

Plans for a $150,000 structure containing a 1,000 seat theater, seven stores, and fifteen apartments were announced yesterday in connection with the sale of property at the southeast corner of Montrose avenue and North Lincoln street to Charles H. Kusel. The consideration is given as nominal, but the actual figure is said to be $25,000.

Buys Vacant for Flat.

The vacant property at 5633-39 Cottage Grove avenue, 96x130 feet, has been purchased by Mrs. Emma J. Walker from Dr. Oliver L. Mitchell and John Boomer, securing from the former 48 feet and from the latter 24 feet. It is stated the purchaser will immediately improve with a court apartment building to contain twenty-six apartments, to cost approximately $85,000. T. D. O'Hern and C. F. Parker, with C. W. Hoff & Co., were the brokers in the transaction.

A store, theater with seating capacity of 1,000, to cost about $90,000 is to be erected by Ascher Bros., who own and operate a string of theaters, on South Ashland avenue, 125 feet north of Sixty-third street. It will occupy 100x125 feet, east front, which the Aschers purchased from Michael Maisel for a reported consideration of $60,000. John Bain & Co. were the brokers.

Frederick A. and Axel W. Andersen are to erect a high grade eighteen apartment building on 98x215 feet of ground, southeast corner of Drexel boulevard and Forty-fourth street, to cost about $150,000. In this connection they secured a loan of $100,000, eight years at 6½ per cent, from O. H. Haugan, trustee.

A new high grade apartment building to cost in the neighborhood of $100,000 is to be erected by Edward M. Bertha, the builder, at the southwest corner of Stony Island avenue and Sixty-first street, on a lot 125x125 feet which he has just purchased from the estate of Martha S. Hill for a stated consideration of $14,000.

Model Flats to Be Constructed.

The building will contain twenty-one apartments of four, five, and six rooms, all with sun parlors and two baths, renting at from $50 to $80. Geary & Forbrich and C. H. Trainer represented all the parties to the transaction. In connection with the construction of the building Mr. Bertha has secured a bond issue loan of $65,000, six and a half years at 6 per cent, from S. W. Straus & Co.

The vacant property at the northeast corner of Armour avenue and Twenty-fifth street, 298x100 feet in extent, have been bought from Ernest Uhlich Jr. by Charles W. Price, president of the Overland Motor company, for an indicated consideration of $55,000, subject to an incumbrance of $42,269. The consideration takes the form of a purchase money mortgage, bearing 5 per cent interest and maturing in five years. The property adjoins the new plant of the Overland company now in process of construction, and was acquired for future building requirements.

The vacant on Lakeside terrace, fifty-three feet south of Rogers avenue, with 100x161 feet of ground, west front, through to Lake Michigan, have been sold by E. H. Uhl to James H. Sullivan for an indicated consideration of $20,000, or $200 a front foot.

GOOD SHOWING MADE BY REAL ESTATE TRANSFERS.

The real estate transfer and building figures for the first six months of the year make a good showing, considering the many unfavorable conditions which have obtained, including the European war and the labor troubles. There were 25,122 deeds filed for record, having a total consideration of $56,394,822, as against 28,417 deeds with a total consideration of $67,774,212 for the same period last year, a decrease of 3,295 deeds and $10,379,390 in consideration.

There were 4,510 building permits issued, to cost $37,492,750, as against 5,079 permits to cost $43,916,200 for the first six months of 1914. This is a decrease of 569 in number and $6,424,450 in cost.

CHARLEY WHITE SHADES WELSH IN 10 ROUNDS

> New York, July 3.
> The decision of "The Tribune" fight reporter is that White wins.
> Signed:
> WILLIAM VREELAND.

BY WILLIAM VREELANE.

New York, July 4.—[Special.]—Charley White of Chicago to all intents and purposes won the lightweight championship of the world from Freddie Welsh of England at the Brighton A. C. at Brighton Beach tonight. The only thing that prevented the title passing from Welsh to White was the law of this state which prohibits the referee from giving a decision. White earned the honors of the boxing in seven of ten rounds. Welsh had a clear advantage in the fifth, sixth, and seventh sessions.

Neither lad scored a knockdown or anything approaching it. White was unable to land his knockout punch because of Welsh's clever defense and ring generalship in the fourth round, the eighth, and the ninth. White so clearly outfought Welsh and had him in distress with a fusillade of left and right hooks to the body that the champion was forced to hold on to save himself.

Clinching Stops White.

Several times Welsh pinned White's arms to his sides thus preventing him from striking a blow when a clear cut victory was within reach of the Chicago fighter. Time and again White tried to pull away from the encircling arms of Welsh in order to land a swing, but failed.

During the fifth, six, and seventh rounds White was slow. He was saving his strength for the final rounds and for an effective punch. During these rounds Welsh continuously stabbed Charley in the nose until he had him bleeding.

At the finish White was the stronger, and had the bout been a twenty or twenty-five round affair indications pointed to a decisive victory for him. The body blows that Welsh received, supplemented by occasional right crosses to the face, made the champion puff and blow from distress.

Foot Work Helps Welsh.

Welsh was clever with his footwork and ducking and escaped many a punch by stepping inside White's swings. Welsh jabbed White in the face many times, but his blows lacked steam.

The bout was fought in the rain. It began to drizzel at 9 o'clock, at which time there were about 6,000 spectators seated in the grand stand and on the benches of the brick lawn. The fans who paid a cheap admission were protected from the rain by the roof of the grand stand, while those whose seats were on the lawn had to grin and bear the rain as best they could.

Many women sat on the lawn. They proved to be good soldiers, for they wrapped veils and papers around their hats, tucked up their skirts, placed their heels on the rungs of the chairs to keep their feet out of the wet, and stuck to their seats until the end. The crowd was not as great as the one which saw the Jim Coffey-Jim Flynn bout.

Sheeting Protects Boxers.

Cotton sheeting formed the canopy for the boxers. The rain came down straight and did not beat in on the ring, consequently the boxers were protected and were able to do their best work in spite of the unfavorable weather.

White was first to enter the ring. He climbed between the ropes at 9:45 p. m. with a big American flag draped from his shoulders. He stood in the middle of the ring and waved the stars and stripes vigorously. A few minutes later Welsh followed, dressed in green fighting trunks.

The conditions called for both men to make 135 pounds at 3 o'clock. Both were under weight at that hour. Just before they entered the ring the men were reweighed. White tipped the beam at 133½ and Welsh at 136 pounds.

The Fight by Rounds.

FIRST ROUND—Welsh was the aggressor. He hooked White to the face with a right and came back with another to the stomach. At close quarters Welsh was busy and hooked White to the face. This treatment roused White's anger and he showered three or four hard blows to the pit of Welsh's stomach. Welsh clinched at every opportunity. Welsh kept on top of White and would not let him set. Just before the round ended White made a rally and hooked Welsh six times to the stomach without a return.

SECOND ROUND—White was anxious to stand off and box at long range, but Welsh worked in close and clinched after sending in short hooks. This method of boxing frequently tied White up and the Chicago lad was unable to swing or hook at arm's length. Both centered their attack to the stomach. White finally got the champion's head in chancery and with his left arm circling Fred's neck he uppercut and hooked Welsh to the face and stomach. When they broke out of the clinch White shot in three hard rights to Freddie's midsection.

THIRD ROUND—Welsh started with two punches to the face, but both blows lacked steam. He then jabbed White in the face. White retaliated with short hooks to the face which rocked the champion and made the crowd wild with the hope that the Chicago boy would win. Welsh was aggressive and used his jabs, but they carried no steam. Near the close of the round White nearly doubled Welsh up with a left hook to the stomach and a right to the chin.

FOURTH ROUND — White met Welsh's rushes with left hooks to the face, one of which made Welsh stagger. The blow landed too high to knock Welsh down or to hurt him seriously. In a rally with both men standing toe to toe, White hooked Welsh repeatedly to the face and stomach. He showered Welsh with a cross fire of rights and lefts, until the crowd jumped to its feet and cried to White to knock Welsh out. Welsh kept his feet, and, though hard pressed in a corner, he managed to wriggle out just as the bell rang.

FIFTH ROUND—Welsh came out of his corner puffing and blowing and very short of wind. White calmly stood up and met Welsh as he came in with a straight left and occasional right to the face. Welsh made White's nose bleed slightly. This made White fight fast, and he hooked Welsh to the stomach.

SIXTH ROUND—Welsh started fast with three lefts to White's face without a return. White's judgment of distance early in this session was bad, and he missed several punches. Welsh kept close to White, but Charley pulled away and sent over two rights to the face. Twice White's punches went over Welsh's shoulder. Charley made his best showing when Welsh missed a swing and left himself open. White sent in two rights to the face. Freddie ducked and sidestepped cleverly.

SEVENTH ROUND—It was tit for tat in this session, both landing lefts to the face. Welsh kept stepping inside of White's swings, the punches passing around the champion's neck. Freddie ducked cleverly several times. He was in and out, stabbing Charley with lefts and right crosses. White had slowed up considerably. Welsh kept his left glove almost continually on White's sore nose.

EIGHTH ROUND—White took the lead in this round and for the first time carried the fight to Welsh. He kept stepping in and landed three good punches to the face, then doubled up Welsh with a terrific right to the pit of the stomach. The punch made Welsh hop in the air. Charley failed to follow up his advantage for a full half minute, which gave Fred a chance to recover. Welsh kept dancing around to keep out of the danger zone.

NINTH ROUND—Both were willing to carry the attack and stood at arms' length, each trying to land an effective blow. White played for the stomach, and after raining solid blows to the mid-section tried for the chin, but most of the punches bounded off, as the gloves were wet. White rallied and punched Welsh so often to the face that he forced Freddie to hold on. More blows to the stomach followed until the champion wrapped his arms around White and held on. The crowd was wild for a knockout and shouted encouragement to White.

TENTH ROUND—Welsh would not give White a chance to set and swing, but kept in close so Charley could not land a knockout punch. Three times White hooked Freddie to the chin, but Welsh hung on, ducked low, and came up with his arms around his rival. Whenever White threw him off, Fred would dance, jab with left, and then clinch. White forced Welsh to the ropes, but the champion twisted out of danger. Just as the last bell rang White crossed over a hard right to Welsh's chin.

SECOND SPEEDWAY RACE PROMISED IN SEPTEMBER.

E. F. Reid, president of the Speedway association, yesterday made the announcement that Chicago is to have another big motor race on the new Maywood track. The date for the contest is Saturday, Sept. 18. A field of entries which will contain the pilots who figured in the world's record competition at Chicago a week ago will start in the autumn race, according to Mr. Reid. A purse of $25,000 will be split with the winners. Many of the drivers in the recent contest have agreed to return for the second contest.

GUARD SQUIRRELS IN JULY.

Bloomington, Ill., July 3.—[Special.]—Illinois sportsmen who have been accustomed to hunting squirrels in July are warned that these animals are now protected until Aug. 1, the open season being reduced one month by the recent legislature. In the past it was lawful to shoot squirrels from July 1 to Nov. 15.

*New events and performanaces stand as records until broken.

BY WALTER H. ECKERSALL.

Represented by an evenly balanced team of athletes who scored points in seventeen of the nineteen events, the C. A. A. yesterday won the annual senior outdoor track and field championships of the Central A. A. U. on Stagg field with a total of 89 points. The Illinois A. C. was second with 72 units, and the University of Wisconsin, mainly through the efforts of Arlie Mucks, was third with 18 points. The University of Chicago and the Danish-American A. C. tied for fourth place with 10 points each.

The meet, which was a forerunner to the championship tryouts to be held on the same field on July 17, will go down in history as one of the most successful in the history of the association. Several new central association records were established and the performances registered in six new events will stand as records until broken. In addition the marks in the century and furlong were equaled.

Maroon Sets First Record.

Favored by ideal conditions and a fast track, the first record to go by the boards was in the half mile, when Roy Campbell of the University of Chicago footed the distance in 1:55 4-5. The Maroon, after covering the first circuit in fourth place, went into the lead at the crack of the pistol denoting the last lap and won off by himself, defeating Myers of De Pauw university, who competed under the colors of the Illinois A. C., by ten yards. The former mark was 1:59, held by Frank Sauer of the C. A. A., who made the record in 1912.

The next record broken was in the mile, when Franz Marceau of the C. A. A. defeated Joie Ray of the Illinois A. C. by a scant five yards. The Cherry Circle runner led from start to finish and always had enough reserve to outrun Ray whenever the latter attempted to jump him. Marceau covered the distance in 4:21 1-5. The former record was 4:32 2-5, held by George Waage of the Illinois A. C. He made the mark in 1913.

Two Marks for Mucks.

While the spectators were watching the track events, Arlie Mucks of the University of Wisconsin was busily engaged hurling the shot for a new record. He tossed the lead ball 46 feet 6½ inches, thereby creating a new mark. The former record, 45 feet, was held by A. W. Kohler of the Illinois A. C., and was made in the championship meet at Dayton last year.

Not satisfied with establishing a new record in the shotput, Mucks came back and hurled the discus 143 feet 3½ inches for another record. On one occasion he threw the saucer shaped missile 145 feet, but fouled in his effort. The former mark in this event was 136 feet 8 inches, made by M. Griffin of the C. A. A. in 1908.

Joe Loomis, the versatile athlete of the C. A. A., then came along and smashed the record in the running high jump by clearing the bar at 6 feet 3½ inches. Before that event, Joe won the century and tied the record of 0:09 4-5. He did not attempt to jump until the bar was placed at six feet. The previous record for this event was 6 feet 2 inches, and was made by A. W. Richards of the Illinois A. C last year.

Knourek Vaults to Fame.

Edward Knourek of the Illinois A. C. not only defeated Red Graham, holder of the world's interscholastic pole vault record, who competed for the C. A. A., but he established a new mark of 12 feet 5⅝ inches. The previous record was 12 feet 1½ inches, held by L. Samse of the University of Indiana, who competed for the C. A. A. when he made the record in 1906.

The addition of six new events to the championships resulted in the establishments of records in these contests. The performances registered in the three mile walk, 440 yard hurdles, each barrier three feet in height, the running hop, step, and

TRIPLE SCORES THREE FOR REBS; WHALES BEATEN

BY J. J. ALCOCK.

With three Pittsburgh runners dancing on the base lines in the eighth inning, Jack Lewis pounded a three base torpedo into left center and beat the Whales in the first game of their long home series, 6 to 3. Up to the time that Lewis let loose his damaging blow the Whales and Rebels had been indulging in a free hitting duel. Twice the Whales had come from behind and tied the Rebels after the invaders had grabbed the lead.

Clinton Rogge and Cluade Hendrix were pounded freely, the Rebels gathering an even dozen hits while the Whales assembled eight. Jim Kelly was chief swatsmith with four straight bingles, the last a double. Al Wickland, a Whale discard, ran second with three swats to his credit.

Hitch on Twin Bill.

We regret to report that there was only one game instead of the advertised double header. While conversing with Manager Tinker over the long distance phone Friday morning regarding a trade for Benny Kauff, President Weeghman remarked that the Cubs had billed two games for Saturday. Weeghman asked Tinker if it would be all right to double up, and Joe said go ahead. Thus the Pittsburgh club was informed and sent along word that a bargain card would be staged. But when Weeghman consulted the schedule he found there was no game with Pittsburgh he could afford to advance, hence the single contest.

Not many folks were disappointed at the curtailment of the advertised program. When play started there were not more than 5,000 folks on hand to welcome Tinker's returning heroes. That was not many, considering that the Whales won thirteen out of seventeen games on eastern soil. Quite a few of the spectators came early, expecting two games. They were informed at the box office that no such bargain was on tap, but most of them stuck around anyway. The hippodrome band dispensed sweet music, which helped pass the moments.

Pittsburgh First to Score.

Pittsburgh got the jump with an undeserved run in the third. Kelly started with a single and moved to third on sacrifices by Berry and Rogge. Berghammer walked and then started half of a double steal while Kelly camped at third. Tinker took Fischer's throw and got Berghammer by a nice dive, but allowed Marty to jar the ball out of his mitts, whereupon Kelly scored. Wickland then slammed a single into right and Mann caught Berghammer at the plate by a whale of a throw. That lead didn't last long. Flack doubled in the home third, advanced on Fischer's demise, and scored the tying run when Zwilling singled to center.

Two runs in the fifth put the Rebels in front again, Kelly and Rogge singled, the latter's blow sending the Turk to third. Rogge was allowed to steal second unmolested, as two were out, but Berghammer spilled the peas with a double to left which scored Kelly and Rogge. Wickland popped the side out.

Whales Again Tie Score.

Rogge lost control in the sixth and the Whales evened matters with two gift tallies. Westerzil and Beck walked before Mann sacrificed. Jackson went up for Tinker and waited for a pass, which filled the bases. Hendrix singled too hard for Berghammer and Westerzil counted. Smith forced Beck at the plate, but Flack poked another hit through short and Jackson scored. Fischer's fly ended the fun.

A pass put the Rebels on the way to victory in the eighth and three runs crossed the pan in a hurry. Wickland drew the fatal walk and Oakes singled. Hendrix failed to force Wickland at third on Koney's bunt, and the bases were filled. They were emptied in a minute when Jack Lewis slammed a triple to left center. Lewis died on a squeeze play that went wrong, then Kelly poled his fourth hit, a double to right. It was wasted.

Cub Sydelights.

Pittsburgh once more today.

Perfect weather and a bargain attraction drew a crowd of 10,000 to watch the even split.

Baird was a busy boy in the first game. He had nine chances to accept and eight of them were assists.

The Pirates today will wind up their year's work in Chicago with the exception of a one day visit on Oct. 1.

Collins gave the Cubs such a merry chase in the third inning of the first game, when he was headed off at the plate on a double steal that he drew the whole infield into the play, in addition to the battery men. Heine Zim finally got the putout.

Wagner made a spectacular catch of Williams' line drive in the eighth of the second game. Honus jumped and hit the ball with one hand. It squirted out of his mitt into the air, but he caught at as it fell over his shoulder and finished with a tango step to show his elation.

Schulte made a magnificent catch of a whale of a fly from Wagner's bat in the sixth of the first game, going back near the bleacher stand to get it. In the eighth of the second game Wagner hit one still farther over Schulte's head and won the game with it, because the ball almost hit the barrier on the fly.

Notes of the White Sox.

Detroit, Mich., July 3.—[Special.]—One more contest will wind up the jamboree in Detroit.

It is likely Jim Scott will oppose the Tigers in the final game, and George Dauss is slated to work for Detroit.

Umpire Connolly stopped the game for a moment in the mad sixth and ordered the Tigers to rearrange their array of bats. They had them scattered all over the ground in front of the bench.

The day the Sox arrived here Hughey Jennings came out with a statement that he would be satisfied with three out of four. A lot of fellows tonight think Hughey knew what he was talking about, though it sounded rather boastful at the time.

Hughey Jennings pulled an 1890 trick in that sixth inning which never should have been allowed by a 1915 umpire, but he got away with it, and perhaps it had something to do in causing the big blowup. Two were out, one man was on, Boland was at bat, and just when the first ball was pitched Hughey ran in from the third base coaching line protesting about something Russell was doing on the slab. He dragged Umpire Connolly out to the middle of the diamond, a lot of players gathered around, and Hughey did a lot of pointing and talking, all of which was meaningless. It held up the game for at least two minutes, then Russell resumed and walked Boland, just what Hughey wanted him to do. The big splash followed.

Three double plays hurried a combat that dragged horribly at times. The Rebels executed two of the twin killings.

It took the fans a minute to recognize Wickland the first time he stepped to bat in an alien uniform. Then Al was cheered generously.

Westerzil did nicely in his first appearance here as a Whale. He waited for two passes and sacrificed once in five times up. He took care of three fielding chances without a stutter.

There will be a display of sane Fourth fireworks at Weeghman park tonight and tomorrow night. All the pyrotechnical appliances were manufactured under the grand stand. In the eighth inning it looked as if Hendrix thought he belonged with the skyrockets.

Rogge passed six batters, which doesn't say much for his control. But he was luckier than Hendrix. Rogge gathered five strikeouts, getting Hendrix three times and Smith twice.

Weeghman said nothing new had developed in the negotiations for Benny Kauff. 'E still 'as 'opes, 'owever.

COBB'S DOUBLE CLEARS BASES; DOWNS SOX, 9-4

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

Detroit, Mich., July 3.—[Special.]—Detroit's Tigers stampeded today and crushed the proud White Sox into a most humble defeat after the Chicagoans had started the combat with a flying start of four runs. The final count was 9 to 4, the Rowland troupe never scoring again after their first round rampage.

Reb. Russell was on the slab against "Pug" Cavet at the beginning of the contest. The Sox drove Cavet to cover before two men were out in the opening inning, and this brought young Bernie Boland into the scrap. The clever righthander got his team out of that mess, but not until four men had counted, and from then on Boland was the boss.

Cicotte Replaces Russell.

Russell stuck until the Tigers went on their stampede in the sixth. They had counted once in the second and twice in the fifth, so were only one run behind when the big row began. Russell was removed with two men on the bases and two out, Eddie Cicotte coming to his rescue. He pitched to two batters and the situation was thus: The score was tied, the bases were filled and Cobb was at bat.

In this crisis Jim Scott was summoned. Cobb hit one to the wall, scoring three men and the rest of the game was a joy party for Detroit. Crawford drove Ty home, giving the Tigers five runs in that round. Wolfgang went to the slab for the seventh and eighth, and the Tigers banged another man home just for good measure.

Crowd of 8,000 at Game.

Dark thunder clouds threatened to prevent the game, but in spite of the outlook more than 8,000 noisy fans assembled for the game. A heavy rain of the night before left the grounds a bit soggy, but there was some sunshine at the noon hour, which helped materially.

The Sox started in rampant style and drove Cavet off the slab in the first inning. Boland relieved him, but before the side was out four Chicagoans had scored. Felsch opened with a bounce to Cavet and reached first when the latter messed the ball. Weaver bunted and made a safe hit of it when Cavet slipped and fell. E. Collins advanced both with a sacrifice, and then Baker tried to pick Weaver off second. His throw went to center field and Felsch ran home from third. Fournier walked, then J. Collins pulled a single to left, sending Weaver home. Fournier stopped at second.

Cavet retired in favor of Boland and Roth opened on the new hurler with a two bagger against the left wall. Both Fournier and J. Collins scored. Schalk walked, but Boland snatched Blackburne's sharp smash and Roth was forced at third. Russell ended it with a roller to Burns.

The Tigers did nothing in the first, but Veach led off in the second with a double. Burns grounded out, putting Veach on third, from where he scored on Bush's single. Baker got an infield hit, but the next two popped up.

Tigers Get Two in Fourth.

Russell suppressed the Tigers in the third and fourth, but they got to him for two runs in the fifth, with the help of a decision that went against Chicago. One was out when Vitt started the fuss with a swell bunt, which he beat for a single. Kavanaugh poked a single to left, Vitt stopping at second.

Cobb then cut a sharp grounder straight to E. Collins, who ran in, scooped it, and apparently almost knocked Kavanaugh down in tagging him. Collins then shot to Fournier and it looked like a great double play, but Ump. Wallace called both men safe and the bases were filled. In this pinch Crawford bounced to Fournier and Vitt was forced out at the plate. Veach then singled to right, sending Kavanaugh and Cobb home and Crawford was nailed at third by J. Collins' perfect peg.

Tigers Score Five More.

In the sixth the Tigers stampeded for five runs, hitting everything in sight. The row began with one out, when Bush singled. Baker forced him at second, but Boland walked. Cicotte then replaced Russell and Vitt singled. Kavanaugh also singled, Baker scoring and tying the count and leaving the bases filled.

Scott replaced Cicotte, and Cobb doubled to left, sending three men home. Crawford singled, Cobb scoring, then Veach was hit by a pitched ball, but the stampede ended when Burns fanned.

In the eighth Vitt singled, went to second on Kavanaugh's sacrifice, stole third, and scored on Cobb's sacrifice fly.

CUBS WIN ONE; THEN LOSE OUT IN THE SECOND

BY I. E. SANBORN.

Cubs and Pirates broke even yesterday in a double header that was hard fought all the way. Chicago won the first game by the narrow margin of 6 to 5 and Pittsburgh copped the second, 4 to 2. In each game the losing team was outbatted and in each game victory hung on a close decision.

Klem had to make one decision and he declared out the Pirate who was trying to score the winning run in the ninth round of the first game. Emslie made the other close decision and it gave Pittsburgh the two runs in the eighth inning which won the second battle.

The Cubs won the first game by the narrow margin of 6 to 5 after a gruelling battle. They got the jump on the Pirates with three runs in two rounds off Cooper. The visitors came close to knotting the count in the third, but were stopped at two runs.

The Cubs pounded Conzelman for three more runs and needed them badly, because the Pirates drove Humphries out of the game with a rally that netted them two runs in the seventh. Standridge stopped them for a few minutes, but got his in the ninth, when the Cubs had to cut off the tying run at the plate. Lavender came in and saved the game.

Lavender Called to Rescue.

The Pirates batted Humphries and Standridge harder than that and Manager Bresnahan had to call Lavender to the rescue to stave off defeat at the finish.

Zabel's wildness lost the second game. He allowed only four hits, but gave nine passes, and these, with the help of an error by Fisher, proved fatal. Adams was touched for nine safeties in the second affair, but was much steadier than his opponent and kept the swats well scattered. Two of his passes were intentional.

Zimmerman's big stick was a feature of the day. The Great One swatted the pill for six safeties in the two games, making a triple and two singles in the first and three singles in the second.

The Cubs lost no time in proving their liking for left handers. They drove Cooper to shelter in two rounds. Schulte singled after two were out in the opener and scored on Zim's three base smash into the right field corner. Saier popped out. Cooper passed Phelan with one gone in the second and it paved the way to two runs. Archer followed with a double, driving Phelan to third, from where he scored on Humphries' grounder. Good hit slowly to Wagner and beat the throw to first, letting Archer score. Fisher skied.

Conzelman Replaces Cooper.

The Pirates did nothing to Humphries until the third; then they lumped three hits and almost tied the score. Gibson led with a single. Gerber batted for Cooper and popped out. Carey and Collins both singled to right, scoring Gibson and putting Carey on third. Baird bumped to Phelan, who fumbled and let Carey register. Hinchman flew out so far that Collins reached third after the catch and started a double steal, but was trapped and run to death.

Conzelman took Cooper's job in the home half and passed the first man without giving the Cubs anything. He repeated this in the fourth and again in the fifth, when it resulted in a run. Fisher drew the pass. Schulte sacrificed, and Zim smashed a single over second, scoring Fisher. Saier and Williams were easy.

Phelan paved the way to a pair of runs in the sixth with a rousing triple past Collins. He stuck there while Archer went out, then tried to score on Humphries' rap to Baird. They headed Artie off, but he got back to third alive because Wagner muffed the ball. Humphries reached second during the chase and Fisher scored both runs with a single to left.

Drive Humphries Off Mound.

The Pirates took Humphries' measure in the seventh. Singles by Conzelman and Carey and a double by Collins scored two runs after two were out and drove Humphries off the mound. Standridge came on and made Baird fly out. Collins kept the Cubs from counting in their half. Singles by Zim and Williams and Cy's steal put the Cubs on third and second with one out. Phelan flew to Collins, who made a brilliant throw home, doubling up Zim.

The Pirates almost tied in the ninth. Gibson opened with a single and Schang ran for him. Costello took Conzelman's bat and smashed a triple through Williams, scoring Schang. Costello tried to make four bases on his hit, but Good and Fisher got the ball to the plate ahead of him, staving off a tie. Lavender hustled to the slab and retired the next two.

Pirates Get Early Lead.

Pittsburgh took the lead in the second game with one run at the start. Carey walked. Collins struck out, but Baird doubled to center, scoring Max. Hinchman whiffed and Wagner fouled out. Good opened the home first with a single and was sacrificed to third by Fisher, but perished trying to go home on Schulte's rap to Viox.

Zabel kept right on passing the first man up each inning, and occasionally two in a round, but denied the hits that would have scored runs. The Cubs kept on wasting a hit an inning up to the fourth, then the Cubs tied the score amid great ruction. Zim led with a single and watched two pals fly out, then got caught off first, but made a dash for second. Johnston's relay throw hit Heine in the back and bounded off so far that the Great One completed the circuit on the break. The visitors claimed interference; then that Zim did not touch either second or home. The wrangle lasted until Klem chased Manager Clarke to the clubhouse and pulled his watch, threatening to forfeit the game.

Zabel missed passing anybody in the fifth, so gave two bases on balls in the sixth. Baird and Viox got them, with two popups in between. Johnston singled through short, scoring Baird. Schang stung a liner into Fisher's trap.

The Cubs tied it right up again in their half. Zim opened with a single and Saier drew a pass. Williams sacrificed them ahead, only to have Zim killed off in an attempt to score on Phelan's grounder to Viox. Saier reached third and Phelan got to first. Adams started to pass Bresnahan, but before he succeeded Saier scored on a double steal started by Phelan.

With one out in the home ninth, McLarry took Zabel's place and walked. Good beat out a roller to Viox. Fisher tried to beat out a bunt, but Baird threw him out, letting the runners advance to third and second. Schulte fouled out.

A wild throw by Fisher gave Pittsburgh an opening after one was out in the eighth. Hinchman gained a life on the bad peg and Wagner scored him with a terrific drive which almost hit the 25 cent stand on the fly. Schulte got it back in time to hold Honus on third. Viox walked, then Johnston worked a squeeze play, which let Wagner score while Zim was tossing out the batsman. Schang whiffed.

NEWFEDS RAISE FLAG, THEN WIN

Newark, N. J., July 3.—A single by Roush in the third inning with the bases filled was responsible for three runs after the side should have been retired, and Newark won, 3 to 2. Smith's fumble of Rariden's grounder started the trouble. Roush's drive was only a single, but it sent in two runners. By starting for second Roush drew a throw from Griggs, and while the Tip Tops were tossing the ball around Esmond sneaked all the way home from first.

President James A. Gilmore presented the local players with gold medals for winning the championship last year at Indianapolis, and the pennant was unfurled before the game. Score:

TIP TOPS DROP DAN MURPHY.

New York, July 3.—Danny Murphy, outfielder of the Brooklyn Federals and former captain of the Philadelphia Athletics, was unconditionally released today by the Tip Tops. Pitcher Marion of the same club has been suspended for ten days, it was announced.

Following a conference between President Gilmore of the Federal league and President Ward of the Brooklyn club, it was said that Manager Magee of Brooklyn was given permission to go after any player in organized baseball who is signed to a contract containing the ten days' release clause.

Magee made an offer to John Murray, the outfielder released yesterday by the New York Nationals. Murray, it is understood, also has received an offer from the Chicago Cubs.

Notre Dame, Ind., July 3.—[Special.]—One of the most unique baseball games on record was played at Notre Dame university today between the clergymen's team of the university faculty and clerical students of Holy Cross hall. Nearly every player of the faculty team writes a doctor's degree after his name. One of them, the Rev. John Farley, has more Notre Dame monograms than any student in the history of the school, excepting possibly Bergman. The score was 10 to 5 in favor of the faculty. Score:

Inquisitive Fans.

Choctaw, Ark.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Do the rules prohibit a pitcher from using slippery elm on a ball in order to throw a spitball? If so, what do the spitball pitchers use on the ball? J. F. ROGERS.

The use of slippery elm or anything else that does not injure or discolor the ball is permitted.

Galva, Ill.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—[1] A is on second base and B hits to the shortstop. A interferes with the shortstop and the umpire calls him out. B reaches first base ahead of the ball. Is B given a hit? [2] A runner on second starts to steal third. The pitcher makes a wild pitch and the catcher misses the ball and the runner scores. We have a ground rule giving a man one base on an overthrow at first, third, and home. Does the score count? E. L.

[1] No. It is just the same as if A had been put out in a regular way. [2] The umpire is best judge of that, as he interprets ground rules when managers disagree.

"Subscriber," Albuquerque, N. M.—"The Tribune" does not decide bets.

G. B. Novak, Chicago—Cheney pitched two one-hit games in 1914, one of them against Cincinnati and the other against Boston.

James Morely, Wahpeton, N. D.—"The Tribune" does not decide bets.

Chicago.—[Editor of The Tribune]—We had a runner on first base, with the batter up to bat. The pitcher makes a throw to first base to catch the runner, but does not throw it. He is facing the batter, but not in the pitching box. Is this a balk, or must the pitcher be in the box? SANDY.

There is no "box" for the pitcher, but if he was not on the slab the bluff throw to first base was not a balk.

Chicago.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—A is on third. B runs from third to home, but is not in the base line. Pitcher makes a balk. Is A out? If so, why? [2] Pitcher runs to field a ball toward first. First baseman, covering first, sees that pitcher lets ball go. First baseman goes to field it, touches it, runs to cover first and drops it. Is he charged with an error? [3] Ball hits fair, then rolls foul, then back into fair territory before it passes third. Is it fair or foul? [4] A is on first. B hits to left and makes home. A is called out for not touching second, making three out. Does B get credit for a home run or a single? H. F. M.

[1] A is not out, but B would be put out of the park in any major league. [2] Sounds like an error, but would have to see the play to decide. [3] Fair ball, provided it was not touched by a player while it was on foul ground. [4] B gets credit for nothing. It is just as if he had hit a grounder to shortstop and forced out A at second.

SIX BOATS SAIL ACROSS LAKE IN CRUISE FOR CUP

Yachts Due Back Today in the Stratford Trophy Run to St. Joe and Back.

BY JACK PROCTOR.

With a run of fifty-nine miles before them six yachts left last night on the first leg of the Columbia Yacht club's annual race for the Stratford cup. The start was made at 6 o'clock with St. Joe as the objective point and the race will not end until some time this afternoon, when the fleet returns to Chicago.

No stop is to be made along the Michigan shore and the boats will start on their return trip immediately upon rounding a buoy off St. Joe. The total distance to be covered during the race is 118 miles. The boats that started included C. H. Morgan's schooner Natant and W. Y. Perry's schooner Sallie, Columbia Yacht club; A. D. Sheridan's sloop Josephine and Ed Bennett's sloop Seboomook, Chicago Yacht club; D. W. MacDonald's sloop Larrikin, Lincoln Park Yacht club, and L. E. Holton's sloop Prairie, Jackson Park Yacht club.

The wind conditions could not have been much more favorable than they were at the start of the race. A fresh breeze of about twenty miles an hour was blowing from southeast, with indications that it would remain in the same quarter. All of the boats started off on the starboard tack and fast time across the lake was predicted, provided the favorable breeze held good throughout.

TWO MOTORCYCLE PILOTS HURT IN KOKOMO RACES.

Kokomo, Ind., July 3.—[Special.]—During the first speed events at the new motor speedway here today Chuck Morrison of Terre Haute, riding an Excelsior, was hurled fully fifty feet through the air over his handlebars when the machine skidded on the south turn. Immediately following him was Roy Jones, a local rider, who, blinded by the dust, crashed squarely into Morrison's machine. Morrison dragged himself from the track and was not struck by Jones, who also was hurled across the track and against the fence. Neither man sustained serious injuries. C. W. Voss of Logansport, riding an Excelsior, won the first elimination five mile and the twenty-five mile races.

SETS WORLD CYCLE RECORD.

Dodge City, Kas., July 3.—Otto Walker of Oakland, Cal., won the second annual 300 mile international motorcycle race today, clipping thirty minutes off the world's record for the distance. Walker's time was 3 hours 55 minutes 45 seconds. Walker's time for 150 miles was 1:54:55. He made 200 miles in 2:33:15.

TRIALS FOR BOYS WHO WANT TRIPS WITH BALL CLUBS

BY OTTO A. ENGEL.

Chief of Scouts Jimmy Ryan, with his staff of critical assistants, will give the ambitious amateur or semipro ball player the official "once over" on Saturday afternoon. Plans are under way to bring together in elimination tryouts at least fifty candidates for the final eastern trips of the season with the Cubs, Sox and Whales. The successful youngsters, none over 21 years of age, will travel as members of the three Chicago teams.

Another squad of fifty candidates will show their wares before the scout staff next Sunday morning. The third workout has been arranged for Sunday morning, July 18, while the final inspection will take place July 25, Sunday morning. Selections of the victors will not be made until each and every boy has had a fair chance to demonstrate his ability as a ball player.

Four Teams from Squad.

According to the plans outlined by Chief Ryan, the squad of fifty will be divided into four teams and then "sicced on" to one another in a double header. From time to time players will be withdrawn to permit others to show their caliber, particularly the battery men. There may be as many as five or six scouts at each performance, but the personnel of the staff, outside of Chief Ryan, will not be made known in advance.

Letters have been sent out asking leading umpires and men well versed in baseball to act as inspectors. Favorable replies have been received and each amateur or semipro is assured that the selections will be announced only after a fair test has been made. At these games the best umpires in the city will judge the play and give decisions.

Watch for Notices.

Every youngster, therefore, should watch THE TRIBUNE this week for formal notices of these tryouts, the locations, and other details which will prove interesting.

Manager Tinker and his Whales will be the first team to hit the eastern trail. The Federal leaguers will leave Chicago on the night of Aug. 3 and return Aug. 22, making the full swing of the eastern circuit. Brooklyn, Newark, Baltimore, and Buffalo will be the cities visited in the order named.

When THE TRIBUNE plan was first suggested Manager Joe was among those who heartily indorsed it. So before the amateur returns home there is a chance that he may be fortunate enough to be signed as a regular member of the Whales for their training trip next spring.

Long Trip with Cubs.

The Cubs will make their final eastern invasion shortly afterward, leaving here on the night of Aug. 12. This jaunt will cover three weeks, including all towns of the circuit except Cincinnati. The first stop will be St. Louis and the final one at Pittsburgh before coming to Chicago. Eighteen games are scheduled.

The third successful youngster will be a pal of Manager Rowland, Eddie and Jack Collins, Fournier, Weaver, and the rest of the white hosed athletes. The journey to Boston will start Sept. 9 and wind up on Oct. 1. All the eastern clubs will be visited, with a one day stopover at Cleveland.

Entries Close July 15.

Remember, entries close on Thursday, July 15, just eleven days away. Thus far 180 youngsters have filed their applications, and when the list closes it is expected that 200 or more will be seeking one of the three coveted prizes. Following are additional entries received during the week:

MIKE MASON TRAINING FOR MILE TRYOUT ON JULY 17.

Urbana, Ill., July 3.—[Special.]—"Mike" Mason, conference champion in the two mile run, is training on the Illinois field track for competition in the tryouts at Chicago July 17 for the Panama-Pacific exposition games. While Mason's specialty is the two mile and he holds the conference record of 9:33 2-5, made on Illinois field last month, he will enter the one mile in this tryout, as no two mile grind is carded.

Coach Harry Gill is handling his crack distance man carefully and will await his performance at Chicago with interest. So far Mason's work in the mile has been limited to one appearance. In the dual meet between the Illini and Maroons Mason won the mile in 4:29 and a fraction, and then annexed the two mile. It was a cold day on Stagg field and it was asserted by some observers that under more favorable weather conditions Mason could have run in 4:16.

Mason's showing in this tryout may determine what event will be his specialty next year, his final season of collegiate competition.

Richards took the fifty-six pound weight event, finished second in the shotput and running broad jump, and was third in the javelin and discus throws.

Crowd of 2,000 at Meet.

A gathering of 2,000 athletic fans saw one of the greatest meets ever held on the historic field. The ability of the contestants made new records certain, and the athletes ran true to form. As practically the same field will take part in the Central association tryouts on Stagg field on July 17 to select a team to represent the section in the national championships at San Francisco on Aug. 6 and 7, another record breaking meeting should result.

Burt Nippe of the Danish-American A. C. won the three mile walk after an interesting race with his teammate, Alexander Zellar. The pair alternated in taking the lead and Nippe won after an interesting race in the stretch. The time was 23:56 1-5. As this is the first time the event has been held in the championships the mark will stand as a record.

Loomis Victor in Century.

Joe Loomis, the versatile athlete of the C. A. A., won the 100 yard dash and defeated Smith, the University of Michigan flier, who won the century and furlong in the eastern intercollegiate. Smith competed for the Cherry Circle club, and he lost the verdict by inches.

Loomis stepped the distance in :09 4-5, equaling the record. The Cherry Circle pair raced stride for stride until within ten yards of the tape, when Loomis by a burst of speed breasted the line a few inches in advance of the Wolverine.

With a leap of 22 feet 10 inches Stiles of the University of Wisconsin, conference champion, won the running broad jump. Haskins of the C. A. A. was second and Ahearn of the I. A. C. was third.

McKeown of the University of Illinois, who competed for the C. A. A., won the 120 yard high hurdles after an interesting race with Lighter of the I. A. C. The Cherry Circle hurdler won the event by a sprint, after clearing the last barrier.

Notes of the Meet.

Director A. A. Stagg of the University of Chicago was an interested spectator. He said the meet was one of the best he ever saw.

Mucks of the University of Wisconsin was the only athlete to break two records. He shattered marks in the shotput and discus throw, both in clean cut fashion.

Members of the University of Wisconsin track team who competed in the meet presented Coach Jones with a handsome loving cup just before the games started.

Charley Wilson, who had charge of the championships, yesterday was appointed to take charge of the Central A. A. U. tryouts to be held at Stagg field on July 17.

Several athletes who had been entered by their respective clubs and universities withdrew at the last minute because they realized the competition would be too fast for them.

Uffendell's protest delayed the start of the meet half an hour, with the result the last event was not finished until after 6 o'clock. Despite the delay the officials ran off the nineteen events quickly.

Martin Delaney, coach of the victorious C. A. A. team, deserves a deal of credit for the victory of his aggregation. Any team which can score points in seventeen of nineteen events must be primed for such a meeting.

Because of the large field in the quarter mile the committee decided to run the event in two heats. The performance of Diamond of the University of Chicago, who won his heat in :51 1-5 and the final in the record breaking time of :49, was commendable.

William G. Uffendell, chairman of the athletic committee of the Illinois A. C., registered protests against several C. A. A. athletes before the meet. The championship committee held an impromptu meeting in midfield to consider the cases and finally decided the Cherry Circle performers were eligible.

The defeat of Smith, the University of Michigan flyer who won the 100 and 220 yard dashes in the eastern intercollegiate and who competed for the C. A. A., by Joe Loomis of the Cherry Circle club was one of the surprises of the meet. The victory of Marceau of the C. A. A. over Myers of the Illinois A. C. was another upset.

Sporting News Notes.

Trotting and pacing races will be held at Palatine, Ill., tomorrow and some of the fastest horses have been entered. There also will be a program of athletic events.

A seven mile canoe race will be held today at Wilson beach. Sixty-three entries have been received and prizes will be awarded to the first fifteen finishers.

A large entry list has been received for the athletic events to be held in connection with the Scotch picnic at Keize's park tomorrow. In addition several soccer games will be played and contests in dancing will be held.

WHIST PLAYERS COME TO TOWN FOR BIG EVENTS

A. W. L. Silver Anniversary Opens at the Chicago Beach Hotel Tomorrow.

BY A. R. METCALFE.

The silver anniversary of the American Whist league will be celebrated tomorrow and during the remainder of the week at the Chicago Beach hotel.

President Monat advises that the number of out-of-town players who are entered in the various contests is larger than any in recent years.

Pointers on the various contests follow:

HAMILTON CLUB TROPHY.

This contest and the championship for club fours for the year is open to one team of four men from each league club. Each member of the team must be a bona fide member of the club which he represents, and must have been a member at least five days before this congress. The pairs constituting a team are not required to change partners during the match, but have the privilege of doing so if they desire.

On Monday afternoon and on Monday evening the teams entered will play a match with every other team under a team of four progressive system. The deals played by one team against another in the two sessions will constitute one match, and each match resulting in a tie will count half a match won. The two teams having the highest aggregate match score will be entitled to enter the finals.

The final match will consist of forty-eight deals, played Wednesday morning and Thursday morning, under the rules governing the play for American Whist league trophy. The play in the finals will be recorded and published in the Whist Review.

The trophy will be awarded to the custody of the club represented by the winning team. Individual souvenirs will be given to each player on the winning team and also to the players on the runner-up team.

ASSOCIATE MEMBERS' TROPHY.

This is a pair contest for possession of the Associate Members' trophy for the year, open to associate members with league partners whom they may select. The play will be conducted in two sessions on the afternoon and evening of Thursday. The pairs entering will play a match with each other under a pair progressive system, and each match will be completed at one sitting, if practicable. Scores will be reckoned the same as in the Minneapolis trophy games.

COMBINATION TEAM AND PAIR TOURNEY.

The progressive two pair match for special prizes is open to all eligible to play in the progressive pairs. The play will be conducted in two sessions on Friday afternoon and evening, under a team of four progressive system, but without change of partners. The aggregate number of deals played by one team against another in the two sessions will constitute a match.

PROGRESSIVE PAIRS.

Every afternoon and every evening and on Wednesday, Thursday, and Saturday mornings there will be progressive pair matches, open to honorary and associate members of the American Whist league, members of the league and auxiliary associations, members of the Canadian Whist league, and members of the Woman's Whist league and partners whom they select. So far as practicable, one section will be reserved at each session for men's pairs.

MANHATTAN TROPHIES.

The match for the Manhattan trophies, presented by Mrs. H. W. Cannon, is open to players who have made the highest net trick score in any match or session, but confined to pairs of women and mixed pairs, to be played Saturday afternoon.

CONGRESS TROPHIES.

The match for the congress trophies is open to men who have made the highest net trick score in any match session. The match will be played Saturday evening under the rules governing the match for the Manhattan trophies.

Twenty-five silver dollars in a Japanese silver box will be awarded to the man making the highest aggregate score in the Hamilton and Minneapolis trophy events (exclusive of the finals in the Hamilton trophy).

A duplicate of the preceding to the man making the highest aggregate score in the progressive pair games, not playing more than twice with the same partner. In order to be eligible for this prize players must enter in at least six games.

A hand wrought silver coffee service to the woman making the best aggregate score, without making a top score, not playing more than twice with the same partner. In order to be eligible for this prize players must enter in at least six games.

Twelve special gold prizes have been donated by the New York Bridge Whist club, two of which are to be awarded daily to the pair making the best single session score on that day, in either open games or trophy events.

RAVISLOE LINKS MADE FINE WITH CARE AND BRAINS

BY FREDERICK DONAGHEY.

Bernard Darwin, the British writer about golf, was not able while in Chicago two years ago to make his itinerary include a round at Ravisloe, nor even an inspection of the links. However, he managed to get in an en passant mention of the course in one of his series of articles in THE TRIBUNE, recording a sort of the-course-from-the-car-end impression. He stepped to the back platform of the train taking him to the Flossmoor club, swept the east aspect of Ravisloe with his eye, and afterward expressed the opinion that it was all rather flat and uninteresting so far as he could see.

Ray and Vardon, soon afterward, gave a Sunday exhibition at Ravisloe; and the latter, writing of his American visit in one of the magazines, described the course as the best he had visited in Chicago. The quality of this compliment from the English crack may be realized when it is remembered that he and Ray took in most of the Chicago courses regarded as of championship grade.

Man-Made Links Is Ravisloe.

The Ray-Vardon matinée was played subsequently to the revision of the course by Watson, whose work here is at striking variance with his recent job at the Westmoreland links in Evanston. The gratuitous hazard, which abounds at the latter, is well nigh unknown on the pretty Homewood field. A pit placed in the precise middle of the fairway, about 125 yards from the tee of the fourteenth hole, is the single item to which exception may be taken by golfers who hold with the modern gospel against unnecessary penalizing.

Of course, there's a "way out" for the player not certain that he can carry to clear. The pit is far from fairway-wide; so he can try for the left or right, figuring in his calculation what Ring Lardner calls the "ruffles."

Big Investment of Money.

Ravisloe, in the beginning of things, was as "flat and uninteresting" as Darwin thought it was in 1913. It is a man-made course, with hardly a natural hazard. It is lovely and restful, suggesting in its vistas and landscaping a private park in rural England. It represents a big investment of money, and a bigger investment of brains and care and genuine club-spirit. It is "conditioned" for good golf—"conditioned" not as a result of two or three days of fine weather but as a result of the foresight and the golf-sense of those who have been in charge of the work of turning a flat field into a links which is forever beyond the stage of infantile reaction to every whim of weather.

What is meant by "conditioned" is, perhaps, explained when it is said that Ravisloe was less affected by, and that it recovered more quickly from, the cruel May-June deluge than any other course in the Chicago district, with the possible exception of Chicago Golf.

Kind Intent Missed Fire.

Seeking sincerely, in a recent article about Idlewild, to call the attention of unattached eligible golfers to the natural advantages of that course, I gave a measure of offense to some of its members by setting forth an explanation provided by one of their number as to why the club's present membership is below the 225 limit, while nearly all the other established organizations in the district possess lengthening waiting lists. I quoted what was told to me, thinking thereby to make of THE TRIBUNE a medium of helpful information for the countless Chicago golfers who complain of inability to find vacancies in accessible clubs.

The intimation was that, ever since the opening of the Lake Shore Country club, Idlewild has fed Ravisloe, and Ravisloe has fed the Lake Shore. It was not a theory of mine, but the narration of what was told to me. That I expressed ridicule of the alleged social grading which my informant said was the cause of the condition was seemingly not enough.

"And Still They Come!"

If there be wincing to be done, Ravisloe is not of a mind for it: its withers are unwrung. Numerous, eager, and impatient are those on its waiting list. The 300 regular members are bulwarked by an associate membership made up of their female kin, and by a junior auxiliary, whose members are from 16 to 21 years old. When a junior reaches his majority he automatically becomes No. 1 on the waiting list.

These are examples of how Ravisloe is managed that could, with great profit, be adopted by those clubs seeking a proper method of adding to their revenues without adding to their rosters. "Ladies' day" would, in such circumstances, be less of a weekly tax on the chivalry and good manners of their members.

6,200 Yards of Real Golf.

Nothing save real golf may be used to negotiate the 6,200 yards of Ravisloe in its 71 par. Nearly every hole is sheer in its par exactions, but logically and properly so. There isn't better sport on any Chicago course than that offered by the sixth, seventh, eleventh, twelfth, fifteenth, sixteenth, and eighteenth holes.

I know no more exacting 3-par in the district that Ravisloe's 143 yards sixth, with its well guarded green. The seventh is a water hole—220 yards across a long pond for three. The test of the fifteenth, although only 313 yards for a 4, is to stick on the green, a natural mound whose speed suggests intensive vitrification. A blind drive over a hill starts the sixteenth, a short but hazardous five for 435 yards; and the eighteenth, a 3 for 150, gives the impression that it was designed after a deep study of the Franco-German trench-making on either side of the Yser.

HODGES VICTOR IN FIRST MEET OVER OAK PARK

BY J. G. DAVIS.

Unwilling to wait until the troubled sea of labor grows calmer, the officials of the Oak Park Country club went ahead with their opening as planned, and the new course received its first baptism yesterday afternoon.

Despite the fact that the clubhouse is far from being finished and transportation facilities incomplete, about 100 members of the club turned out for the informal opening.

Fifty of these took part in a handicap event over the first nine holes, and all of them were cautioned to treat the new grass with respect. It was permissible to tee up anywhere and climbing upon cops was a heinous offense.

Hodges Gets Low Gross.

Gilbert T. Hodges, chairman of the sports and pastimes committee, won the low gross prize with a card of 89. Prizes were given for every fifth position, the winners being President Alonzo Burt, 105; C. Ward Seabury, 105; Gustav Dabson, 111; Carl Shonk, 118. J. R. Noel with 136 won last prize.

An all day tournament will be held tomorrow.

Westmoreland.

The blind bogey event at Westmoreland yesterday was won by T. W. Chasses, 107—21—86. A. L. Goodwillie finished second, 113—25—88. In the sweepstakes N. C. Naylor won with a card of 85—12—73. Second honors went to G. F. Davie, 94—22—72. Because of the difference in handicaps between Naylor and Davie, the latter had to be satisfied with second place, as he is rated as a class B player. The semi-final round for the Directors' trophy resulted as follows:

J. D. W. Archer defeated C. M. Haugen, 7 and 5.

F. C. Krittenden defeated F. B. Farnsworth, 1 up.

In the final for the Golf Shop trophy F. M. Gunn defeated C. W. Secord, 5 and 4. The qualifying round for the Tinan cup will be played tomorrow, also other events.

Onwentsia.

Golfers were scarce yesterday at the Onwentsia club, most of the members holding their efforts in abeyance for the big "doings" next Monday. The event was an eighteen hole handicap event against par. Charles Counselman took first honors when he finished 1 down. The leading scores follow: C. Counselman [87—6—81], 1 down; D. R. Forgan [85—7—78], 4 down; B. Walker [93—14—81], 6 down; T. J. Prindiville [93—8—85], 7 down.

C. L. Safford and F. B. Houston are scheduled to meet in the final for the J. Clark Dean trophy at Midlothian next week as a result of the semi-finals yesterday. Safford defeated A. W. Newton by 1 up, while Houston eliminated D. V. Colbert by 2 up.

Donald Edwards won low gross in the medal play handicap with a total of 72 from scratch. George Horton and J. C. Gray were tied for low net honors with totals of 68. The former had a gross of 98 and was aided by a handicap of 30, while Gray had 86 minus 18.

Fordham and R. E. Williams, as both these members won their matches in the semi-final round yesterday, Fordham defeating H. P. Piper by 5 and 4, while Williams won from E. A. Thornton by the same margin.

AFTER being tied with net scores of 73, L. A. Ferguson, president of the Glen View club, yesterday won the class "A" handicap event when he won the draw over W. A. Vilas, who had a gross of 86 minus 13. Ferguson played a better brand of golf, as was evident by his gross score of 81 and handicap of 8. Class "B" honors went to T. E. Cunningham, with 88—14—74. In class "C" S. D. and E. C. Rowe, brothers, were tied with net totals of 75. The former won the draw.

MISS C. B. NEELY WINS NET TITLE; ALSO IN DOUBLES

Beats Mrs. Adams, Then Helps Miss Pound in Other Beach Hotel Contest.

BY KEENE GARDINER.

Miss Carrie B. Neely, formerly city champion in tennis, proved herself the star of the women's play in the Chicago Beach hotel tournament, winning the finals in singles and breaking down the offense in the finals of the doubles, which she won with Miss Pound. In the singles contest, Miss Neely, who on Friday eliminated Mrs. Malcolm McNeill Jr., the city title holder, won in straight sets from Mrs. C. W. Adams, who was runner up in the Philadelphia city championships several times in previous years. The scores were 6—1, 10—8.

The games in the women's finals were remarkably well contested, the last set being as protracted as any in the tournament. Miss Neely had things her own way by superior steadiness in the first frame, but was pushed hard in the second set, when Mrs. Adams played with more accuracy.

Doubles Hard Fought.

Miss Neely and Miss Pound had two difficult matches in the concluding rounds of the doubles, sweeping through the semi-finals and the finals in five sets, giving an exhibition of endurance and consistency. The total of Miss Neely's sets for the day was seven, all of them in play for the two titles.

The doubles winners beat Mrs. Malcolm McNeill, one of the pair at present holding the city honors, and Mrs. W. S. Miller, 6—4 and 6—1, in the finals. Mrs. Adams and Miss Mary K. Voorhees fell in the finals, forcing Miss Neely and Miss Pound to three sets, 6—1, 4—6, 6—2. Except for a subsidence of their spirited game in the second set the margin always was in favor of the winning partners.

Gifford and Ketchum Win.

Gifford and Ketchum took a four set semi-final match in the men's doubles from Cyrus Hill and John R. Neely, a brother of the women's champion, 7—5, 6—3, 1—6, 6—3. In this match the most spectacular work for the losers was that of Neely, who won points on his generalship. Walter Hayes and Ralph Burdick, the present Chicago champions, outclassed Alex Squair, 1914 state champion, and Heath Byford in the other semi-final by 6—0, 6—3, and 6—4 scores.

The men's singles final sets will be played today between Hayes and Byford with Hayes as a strong favorite. The doubles finals will be played tomorrow between the winners of today's matches. One mixed doubles match was played, resulting in a victory for Miss Pound and Hayes over Miss Steever and Forstall. Play up to and through the semi-finals in the mixed doubles will take place tomorrow.

The opening of the new concrete pavement in Dewey avenue, Evanston, supplies a connecting link between Evanston and the suburbs north. Heretofore there has been no automobile route east of the Northwestern railroad between Evanston and the towns north. Now it is possible to go on good roads all the way from Evanston to Wilmette and Kenilworth without crossing the railroad tracks. The accompanying map shows how to do this, and it is suggested that it be cut out and saved for future reference.

Dewey avenue from Central street north is paved with concrete and was opened to traffic recently. This undoubtedly will attract many motorists who prefer to enter or leave Evanston this way rather than drive for several miles close to the railroad tracks.

Bill to Steve.

CHICAGO, July 3.—Steve. Well Steve before a man gets marred you ought to try and fine out what kind of a girl you are marring and if she aint got no more sence a bout money than the most of them your better off if you dont get marred unlest you want to land out to the county Farm.

Gussy landed an other higher girl last Mon. 1 that will cook and wash up the dishs and clean a round the house and so 4th. and all as she gets is $8.00 per wk. and yet they stick pick pockets in jale Well I told Gussy to go a head and get a good 1 so I couldent say nothing when she told me how much was she going to pay this 1 but Gussy got a letter Thurs. from a frend of hers thats got a cottage down to S. Haven Michigan and this here frend wanted Gussy should come up and spend the hole of july with she and her family. So Gussy come to me a bout it and ast me what I thot and I says sure go a head and you will have a good time besides saveing me a little money because I will be on the rode all threw July and if your a way to we wont half no expences accept the rent for the flat. You see Steve I had forgot all a bout this here new higher girl.

So Gussy wired a telegram back to S. Haven sane she would leave here yest. and then after she wired the telegram I thot a bout the higher girl so I says to Gussy what was we going to do a bout it. So Gussy says we dident half to do nothing but just leave the girl stay in the flat and take care of it and I says yes but how much will she do it for. Will she do it for just her bord and Gussy says of coarse not we will half to pay her $8.00 per wk. just like as if we was home. Well, I says will she buy her own groserys out of that and Gussy says no of coarse not but we would half to pay for what ever grosery bill she run up.

So then I says you must take me for a sucker pain a girl $8.00 per wk. to make her self at home in our flat that wear pain $25.00 per mo. rent for it and besides that pain her grosery bill for what ever she takes it in her head to eat and for all as we know she may buy lobsters and quale and sqabs and so 4th. like we was million heirs. So Gussy says she would tell the girl to not spend more than she had to so Gussy left Fri. P. M. and when I got home Fri. night I got thinking a bout what a sucker play it was for me to be pain this here girl $8.00 per wk. for cooking her own meals besides a grate big grosery bill and pain $25.00 per mo. for a place for this here girl to live by her self a lone and pain Gussys fair to and from S. Haven and back and me tiping the walters and going to a show onct in a wile on the rode. So I made it up in my mine that I wouldent be no sucker like that but would talk to the girl and see what could I do with her.

Well Steve I been calling her a girl but shes old enough to be hans Wagners mother or ant only not no dutch man but grate big irish womman that looks like she had lerned to cook in a black Smiths shop. So after I ett supper and she was washing the dishs and I went out in the kichen and I dident know exxactly how to open up so I stalled a round a wile and says how much rain we been haveing and so 4th. and finely I says well it looks like we should ought to have some good wether this mo. because it must of rained it self out by this time and she dident say nothing back so I says how would you like to have a vacation all threw July so she says what do you mean vacation so I says I should think you would get lone some and blew all cooped up here by your self and why dont you go home and stay all this mo. and then come back to work when I and the Mrs. gets back. So she says she couldent a ford to not do nothing so I says all right I dont want you to starve to deth so you can stay here and I will pay for your grosery bill or else I will give you $8.00 per wk. and you can buy your own groserys. Then she swelled up like a posoned pup and says you wont do nothing of the kind because your wife says I was to get my regiar pay wile your gone and you will half to pay for my bill down to the grosery store besides and if you dont like it you can pay me what I got comeing and I will quit. Well Steve if I had of had any sence I would have left her quit but in sted of leting her quit I was to pollite and dident want to hurt her feelings so I says for her to not get sore because I didnt mean nothing but she could stay and I would pay for her grosery bills and all so give her $4.00 per wk. and she says I wouldent do nothing of the kind but I would give her the regiar $8.00 and pay her bills to. Hows that for a grafter Steve and talk a bout Sherlocks but there good spenders compaired to a womman unlest shes spending some body else money. So I says all right then if you want to hold me up go a head and she dident say nothing and shes pretty lucky I dident fire her then and there and the only reason why I dident is on acct. of hurting her feelings and I guess Im to soft harted. So I come a way out of the kichen and left her and I went out and had a few and I told a frend of mine a bout it and he says I was a sucker and why dident I fire her and I says I couldent bare to hurt no bodys feelings even a irish womman so he says well then wait till you go on to the rode and then write her a letter and can her so that sounded like a pretty good ideal and I made it up in my mine to write to her from Pittsburgh.

But this A. M. I was looking for the paper and couldent find it so I went out in the kichen to see did she have it and I ast her if she had the paper and she says no she dident have no use for no paper because she hadent never lerned to read. Hows that for a fine mess for a man to be in and here Im going on the rode Tues. night to be a way a hole mo. and Gussys running up expences down to S. Haven and me pain rent and all so pain a higher girl and her grosery bills and cant fire her because if I wrote her a letter telling her she was fired she wouldent know was it a letter or a packige of seeds from some Congrass man in Wash. A fine mess hey Steve and dont be supprised if you hear a bout me winding up in the poor mans house.

MAXWELL PILOT TAKES 300 MILE MOTOR CONTEST

BY REED L. PARKER.

Sioux City, Ia., July 3.—[Special.]—Edward Rickenbacher, driving a Maxwell special, dashed across the finish line with first honors for the second time in Sioux City's second annual 300 mile race today. Despite a two mile dirt track, damaged seriously by heavy rains of the last two weeks, the Maxwell pilot covered the distance in 4:00:56, an average of 74.7 miles an hour.

Following closely, less than two laps behind, was Eddie O'Donnell in a Duesenberg, the same car piloted by Rickenbacher in his initial success July 4 last. Tom Alley, O'Donnell's teammate, flashed across in third place.

Victor Leads Throughout.

Rickenbacher went into the lead almost at the start and gave up his advantage only twice, when O'Donnell forged to the front. The latter was unable to hold to his margin, tire trouble forcing him to stop several times. Behind Rick's success was his ability to overcome handicaps. He drove a cautious race throughout and most of his laps were reeled off at consistent time.

Dario Resta, winner of Chicago's record breaking contest a week ago, was not a factor for any length of time. During his twelfth mile he quit in the backstretch with a broken oil line. Resta had never before driven in a dirt track contest and wasn't particularly crazy about driving. Warnings from his bride, who remained in the pits, also may have had something to do with Resta's "broken oil line."

Cox Badly Hurt in Crash.

C. C. Cox of Cincinnati, O., was seriously injured and his mechanician, V. L. McGraw, was badly hurt when the Ogren crushed through an iron fence on the north turn. The car turned turtle and rolled down a ten foot embankment, pinning the men beneath it. The accident resuted in a collision with Rickenbacher. Rickenbacher also went through the railing, but was able to keep his Maxwell upright.

Cox suffered a broken right leg and two fractured ribs, one of which punctured his lungs. McGraw escaped with a broken shoulder and lacerated arm.

Accident at Crisis of Race.

The accident happened during the crisis of the race, when Rickenbacher was making desperate efforts to lose O'Donnell. He attempted to pass the Ogren. Both the Maxwell and the Ogren were running in deep ruts. The right front wheel of Cox's car struck the left rear hub of the Maxwell.

The force of the blow carried the Ogren through the retaining wall, with the Maxwell in its wake. Rickenbacher backed his car on the track without losing more than a few seconds. He rushed past his pit, but was called in on his next lap because spokes had been ripped from his wire wheels. He quickly returned to the race, completing the remainder with only two stops.

Crowd Numbers 15,000.

Few more than 15,000 persons saw the race. Overhead conditions were ideal. Although the start was scheduled for 12:30 o'clock, over half the total attendance occupied their seats long before that hour. None realized the true condition of the track better than the spectators. Every swirl of a car on the home stretch, every skid on the turns visible from the grand stand brought the crowd to its feet. When Resta failed to appear on his sixth lap the constabulary had difficulty restraining their rush to the back stretch, where the Peugeot lay.

Rickenbacher, being an Iowan by birth, was as popular as is Barney Oldfield in California, and his early lead was welcomed and acknowledged every time he passed the stands.

Rickenbacher Holds Lead.

Rickenbacher, his Maxwell unchallenged by any of its competitors, took the lead at the start and maintained it for 196 miles despite a tire change at his fifty-second lap. O'Donnell was his closest pursuer. Both men were taking desperate chances. Rickenbacher especially throwing discretion to the winds. O'Donnell was unfortunate in being drawn into some nasty pockets.

In his fifty-seventh lap Rickenbacher lost the lead when his car collided with the Ogren. His greatest burst of speed followed the accident. His courage was unshaken, for he increased his average speed rapidly. O'Donnell after falling into pockets found it difficult for him to pass the slow cars. Chafing at the delay he began passing cars on the inside. He was called to the pits by Referee Kneeler and warned.

GOTCH THROWS ORDEMAN

Humboldt, Ia., July 3.—Before a crowd of 7,000, most of them farmers, Frank Gotch threw Harry Ordeman of Minneapolis in straight falls, the first on arm and scissors in 21 minutes, the second a crotch in 17 minutes. Gotch did not "come back"; he demonstrated that the world's champion had never been a way in spite of short wind in the first bout.

Over 3,000 persons crowded the grand stand, which the proceeds of the match will pay for, and 4,000 stood about the rail in the stretch. Over 15,000 strangers and 2,000 automobiles journeyed here for the celebration.

This map, another example of German efficiency, lays open to the eyes of all Germany the economic and industrial strongholds of the United States. In effective detail it discloses the points which, if struck by an enemy, would paralyze the greatest manufacturing nation of the world. Put forth by a German publisher, it occupies a place in official cabinets and may be purchased for a few pfennigs anywhere throughout the German fatherland.

By PROF. LAWRENCE MARTIN.
(UNIVERSITY OF WISCONSIN.)

THE United States of America has reached its 139th birthday. During this time it has developed a wonderful birthright of natural resources. These resources and the resulting manufactured products are largely consumed at home. Nevertheless we do export vast amounts. In connection with this exportation and the related importation from foreign countries we have made use of our seaports. For the inland traffic we have developed an unsurpassed system of railways. We have also inland waterways, but these we have made less use of. The map on this page, by a German publisher, George Westermann of Brunswick, Germany, shows the relation of water transportation to the resources of the United States.

It will be noted, first of all, that New York far surpasses any other American seaport in the tonnage and value of its commerce. This is shown by the sizes of the pairs of triangles at New York, compared with those at Philadelphia, Boston, Baltimore, New Orleans, Galveston, San Francisco, or Seattle-Tacoma on Puget sound. The rank of various cities as industrial centers is indicated by the sizes of the circles, so that the large circles at New York and Chicago indicate their commanding positions in manufacturing and shipping as well as in population.

Now look at the broad ribbon of brown color, extending westward from New York through Pennsylvania and Ohio to Chicago and Milwaukee. This is the seat of our great iron and steel industry. Next see the oval green area extending from Portland, Me., to Durham, S. C. That is the greatest area of our textile industry. A third striking feature of geographical distribution is the presence of coal fields in the Appalachians and in Illinois and the intermediate states. Now we are ready for the explanation of the supremacy of New York as a seaport. It has a good harbor in the midst of a great manufacturing district and directly connected by rail with the greatest agricultural and industrial district of the United States near Chicago, St. Louis, and Pittsburgh.

To what extent are inland waterways used in the transportation of these commodities? The map summarizes the existing conditions. A broad blue band extends down the Ohio river, our only respectably developed American river. It represents the shipment of coal downstream from Pittsburgh to Cincinnati, to St. Louis, and a few other cities. Some lumber, building material, and a few other commodities include all the Ohio river traffic. Steamboat traffic on the Ohio commenced nearly 100 years ago, growing so rapidly that the number of Ohio river steamers increased from 200 in 1830 to 1,200 in 1848. The traffic of the Ohio, Mississippi, and Missouri increased by leaps and bounds up to 1879, and has subsequently declined even more rapidly. The total tonnage shipped on the whole Mississippi system in 1906 was less than 1-42 as much as went in and out of the river port of St. Louis in 1879.

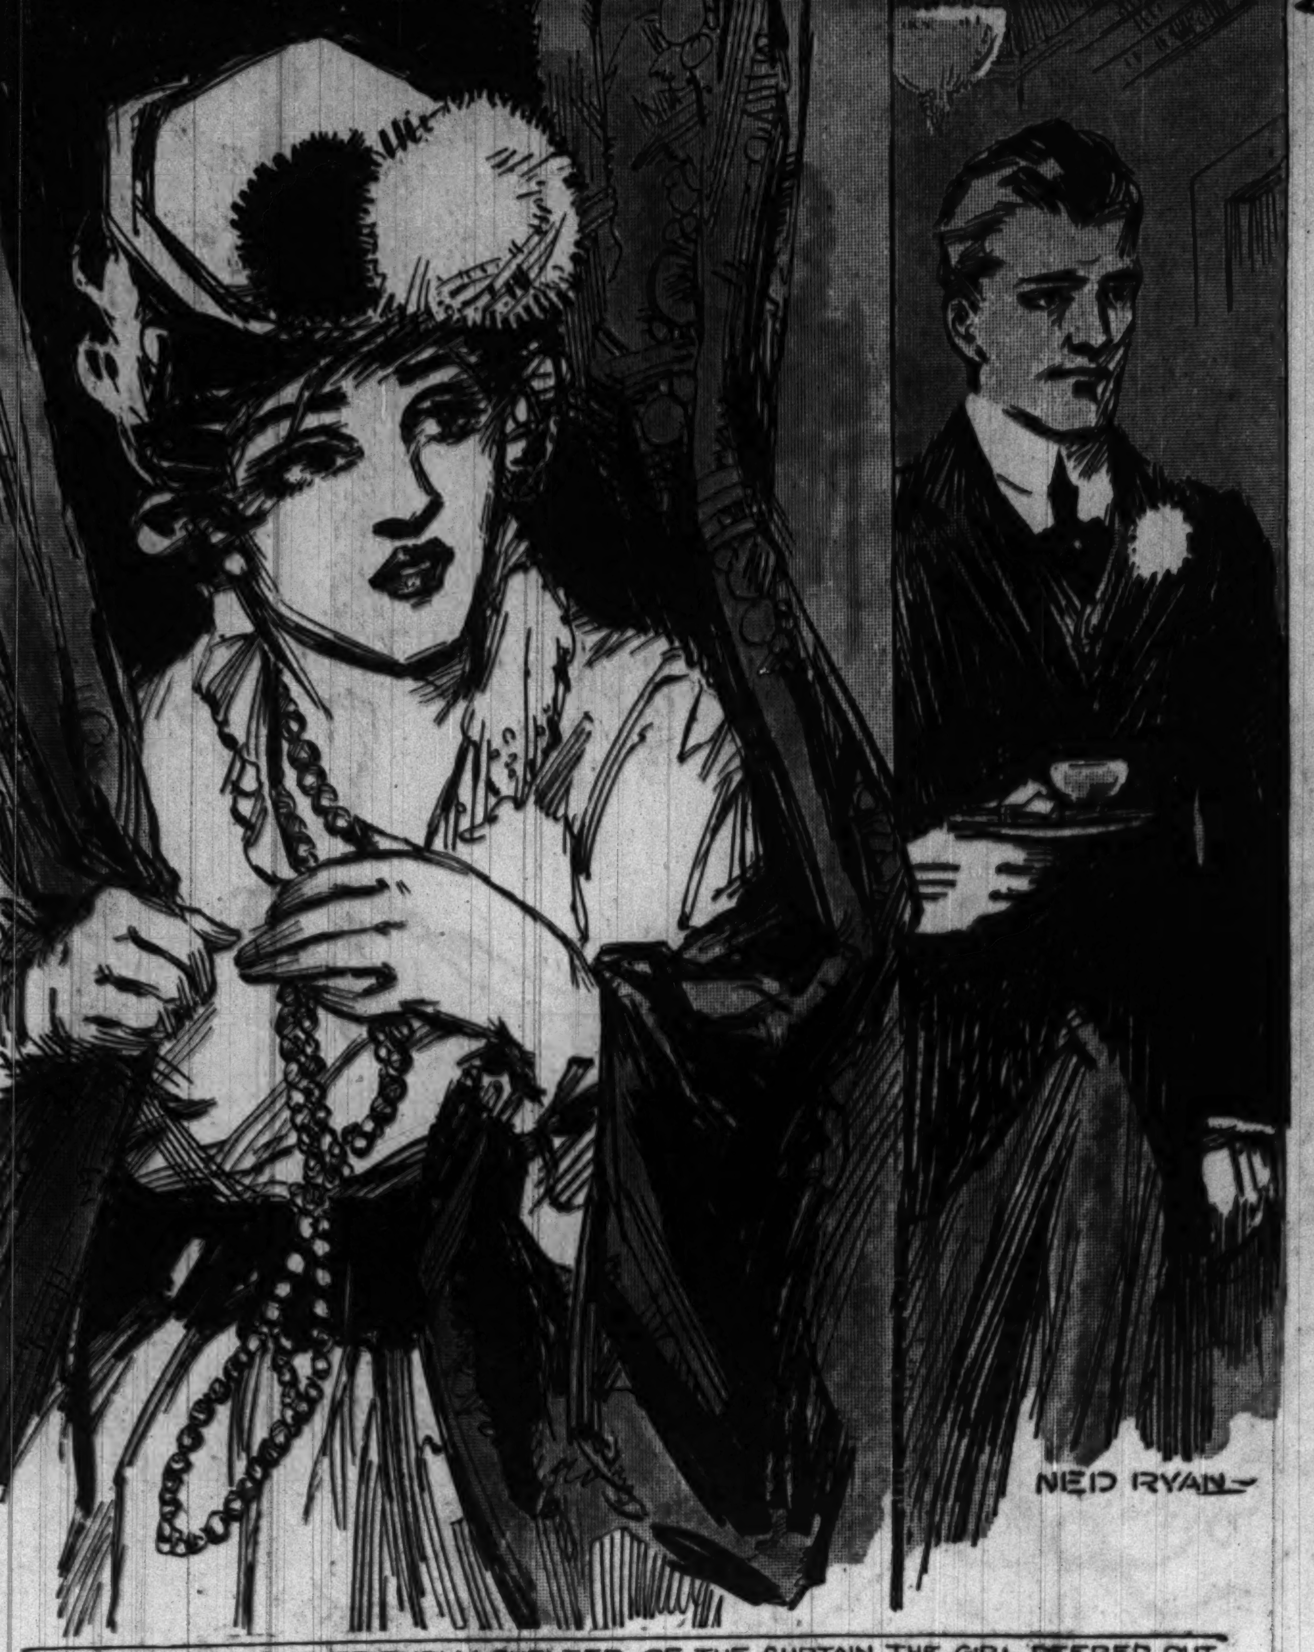
In striking contrast with this waning river commerce of the Mississippi system we have the handsome commerce of the great lakes. Not all Americans realize that Chicago and Milwaukee, Cleveland and Buffalo are greater ports than Philadelphia and New Orleans. Few know that the port of Duluth-Superior has greater commerce than any one of these cities, and, indeed, greater than any American port except New York. The size of the triangles on the map shows this clearly. The great lakes navigation is stopped during five months in the year because of winter ice and storms, yet the tonnage carried through the canals at the Soo, the outlet of Lake Superior, in seven months is nearly five times as great as that of the Suez canal. This great shipping on the great lakes is related to two natural resources—iron ore near Lake Superior and wheat to the west. The iron ore is made into steel in Pennsylvania, Ohio, and to a smaller extent in Indiana and Illinois. This is because iron ore is carried to coal fields for manufacture, resulting in great lake ports at Cleveland, Ashtabula, and vicinity.

Finally, the waterways situation, as displayed on this map, brings up the consideration of canals and canalized rivers. We have constructed 4,500 miles of canals, in comparison with Germany's 6,000 miles of canals, navigable rivers, and canalized rivers, but the United States also has 25,000 miles of navigable rivers. Nearly 2,500 miles of canals in the United States, costing about $80,000,000, have been abandoned. One great canal in America is a commercial factor today, and this is the Erie canal, leading from Buffalo to New York. Recently New York has expended $101,000,000 improving the Erie canal.

The Amiable Pretenders

by Eleanor Hoyt Brainerd

Priscilla's Craving for Adventure Leads Her to Become an Interloper at a Wedding in the Nobility. There She Appropriates a Nice Man, Who Has No Objections to Being by Her Appropriated. What Follows Is Argument That Truth Often Will Out Pleasingly as Well as Unpleasantly.



FROM BEHIND THE FRIENDLY SHELTER OF THE CURTAIN THE GIRL PEERED OUT

"I'D rather meet a nice man than see the abbey," Priscilla Warrington admitted to herself as she whirled down Piccadilly in a hansom and eyed the passersby. The sentiment may have indicated low tastes, but it must be urged in extenuation that during two months on the continent Priscilla had met many beautiful cathedrals and no nice men. Not that the men had been unappreciative. From Naples to Berlin, from Budapest to Paris, resplendent officers, roystering students, gallant citizens of many types had invited her smiles; but she had not dared to smile.

"In our country," she explained, when writing to a home friend, "one knows that a man will stop when one crosses one's fingers and says 'King's X,' but I doubt, I seriously doubt whether these heavenly angels in comic opera clothes understand the rules of the game."

And so, being a wise young woman, with a wholesome respect for unknown explosives, as well as a mighty curiosity concerning them, Miss Warrington had, while traveling, restricted her smiles to the ranks of bell boys, waiters, and porters and had eliminated from her calculations all men who could not be tipped. The small coin of the realm, so she found, furnished an excellent line of demarcation. Now, at the end of June, Priscilla was established in England and was finding difficulty in keeping her smiles from becoming catholic. As she looked from her cab she reflected that there was something very satisfying about tweeds and bowlers after a surfeit of uniforms and caps. These [illegible] sturdy men, with the strong mouths and the boyish eyes, reminded her of the dear, safe, comfortable men at home. They looked as though they might know the rules of the game and abide by them.

"But I don't know any of the creatures," sighed Priscilla; then she brightened. Weren't the rest of her party well under way for Windsor? Hadn't she a whole, smiling June day all to herself? Wasn't she wearing her smartest frock and hat in honor of the Clarksons, with whom she was going to have tea after seeing the abbey and St. Margaret's?

"Stop at St. Margaret's first," she said blithely to the cabby as he turned into Westminster; and when he drew up before the church and she stepped out with a frou-frou of chiffons she signed to him to wait. Extravagance, of course, but this was a day for extravagance.

The slender figure was swallowed by the old gray doorway. Inside the church there was a shadowy quiet, rose perfumed. A few tourists buzzed about under the eye of a dignified verger, but Priscilla did not join them. She was a mercurial young woman, prone to shifting moods; and now, all of a sudden, she felt distinctly "churchy." The word is her own, but it describes well enough the vague yearning emotionalism which prompted her to slip into an out of the way pew and drop upon her knees. When she rose the tourists had vanished, but a group of fashionably dressed folk had replaced them and others were drifting in.

"There's going to be a service," thought Priscilla, still in soulful mood. "I believe I'll stay for it."

She settled back in her seat; but gradually she realized that the character of the gathering was scarcely devout. Everybody seemed to know everybody else, and conversation, though subdued, flowed freely. The girl's brain searched and found the answer to the riddle. A wedding! A very swell wedding! All outsiders save her had been shooed out of the church, but she had been overlooked. Of course she was an intruder, but leaving now would be in the nature of looking a gift horse in the mouth, so she stayed until the ceremony had been performed, the bridal party had trailed down the aisle, and the crowd was preening itself for flight. Then she passed out into the sunlight, through the ranks to which she did not belong.

Motors and carriages galore were in waiting. One by one they received their aristocratic freight and rolled away; and as Priscilla stood watching a hansom forced its way in between a big limousine and a luxurious victoria and a smiling Jehu beckoned to her. She stepped into the cab, the driver cracked his whip, and they were off in the wake of the coroneted carriages and the gorgeous cars. The cabman waited for no order, and in her excitement she overlooked the fact that the abbey was still unseen and that she had not given the Clarksons' address.

Not until the procession turned off from Pall Mall and was bowling along past Green park did it dawn upon her that she was still attending the wedding. The guests were all going on to the reception, and the driver had taken it for granted that she was one of the elect. Her hand went hastily up toward the little window in the top of the cab, hesitated, stopped short, dropped back into her lap. It would be fun to see where the bride lived.

The procession halted. Far down the line guests were leaving their carriages and mounting the steps of a big imposing house. Now was the time for escape—but no; the street was blocked. It would be necessary to stay in line and follow the empty vehicles to the first corner beyond the house. Little by little the cab jerked its way toward the spot where the awning and carpet ran down to the curb.

Why not? A flush came into Priscilla's cheeks, a sparkle into her eyes. Why not? All her traditions, inherited and acquired, rose to offer conclusive answers to the question, but she put them aside. Even the veriest puritan may have his moment of madness. Priscilla's was upon her. The spirit of adventure had her in its grip, and she flung the proprieties, the decencies to the wind. In so large a crowd who would ever know? She had always wanted to do something really shocking. Here was her golden opportunity. The fates had cast it at her feet.

The cab was stopping, a magnificent being in livery was opening the doors, the time for hesitation was past. A young person with the air of a Vere de Vere paid and dismissed a mildly intoxicated cabman, trailed an unmistakably Parisian frock along the crimson carpet, and ran the gantlet of more magnificent beings in livery.

A moment later she found herself alone in a crowd and awake to her iniquity. Now that she stopped to think, the thing was horrible, an offense against every law of good breeding. She must escape. Panic descended upon her, she started toward the door, and at that moment a pleasant masculine voice drawled into her ear, "Awful crush, isn't it?"

Priscilla gave a little gasp of terror. Guilt was written upon every line of her face, but the man with the admiring eyes did not seem to notice her dismay.

"Lady Mary makes an attractive bride," he was saying when the culprit regained her self-possession sufficiently to listen. "They say the old duke has been very keen about this match. He does look pleased, doesn't he? Do you know, you are looking a bit fagged. Can I get you anything?"

"Fagged!" Prostrated was the adequate word; and yet—and yet—a returning joy of life was making itself felt in Priscilla's heart. Had she not said she would rather meet a nice man than see the abbey? Well, she had not seen the abbey, but here was a man, and indications pointed to his being "nice." Priscilla's spirits rose. He seemed like a direct answer to prayer, and, though undeserving, one need not be unappreciative. And so she smiled at him, deliberately, radiantly, fully realizing that he was not bell boy nor waiter nor porter, quite convinced that she would not be allowed to tip him for service rendered. He caught the smile and exchanged another for it.

"So hungry as that?" he asked.

"Famished."

He took possession of her, steered her through the crowd, found a seat for her in a little morning room out of the confusion, and left her there while he went on forage. She nestled back comfortably among the cushions and watched him hurrying down the hall. Even his back was likable, such a fine, straight, broad shouldered, capable sort of a back. There was a man who would get the best of whatever lay beyond the dining room doors. And yet there was a theory that the way of the transgressor was hard. Priscilla shook her head. The way of the transgressor, like the descent to Avernus, was easy, and, so it seemed, joyous withal.

The Nice Man was back in a few moments, bearing plunder that justified belief in him.

"The best I could do, short of felling scores of England's noblest and reaching the buffet over their bodies," he said gayly.

"It looks delicious," Priscilla murmured, but unexpectedly a scruple had come out from under the anæsthetic which had overwhelmed it, with all of its kind, and was assuring the hungry young woman that she couldn't possibly eat the food of hosts who did not even know her. When it came to the breaking of bread—well, having swallowed a camel, one ought not to strain at a gnat; but every wrongdoer draws a line somewhere. Now, the Nice Man was different. He hadn't actually been provided by the duke. There would be no mortal sin against the laws of hospitality in appropriating him so long as he himself was willing.

Apparently the Nice Man had no curiosity in regard to the girl's name or home or friends. That she had brown eyes, with golden lights in them, and brown hair with distracting ripples through it, and a piquant, provocative face and a sudden, illuminating smile that brought lurking dimples into view seemed to content him; and, though he talked of himself, manwise, the talk was only of his tastes, his beliefs, his dreams, and held no hint of his name or occupations or rank.

"Funny how little one knows what an hour will bring!" said the Nice Man, quite as earnestly as though he had not been evolving a hopeless commonplace. He was apparently addressing a paper cutter which he had taken from the writing desk and was fingering.

"A man goes along doing stupid things, and then some day he starts out to do what promises to be more than ordinarily stupid—and finds the meaning of life waiting for him just around the corner."

It wasn't profound and the paper cutter was not impressed; but the man's voice was earnest and there was a seriousness about his mouth and the eyes he lifted suddenly to Priscilla had a look in them that was not prescribed by the manual of polite flirtation. The girl beside him felt a sensation that was novel even in a day prodigal of sensations. He was nice. O, he was very nice; and if she were a real guest—but she wasn't. She was an impostor! If he knew how she happened to be there he would despise her. Englishmen were such sticklers for the proprieties—in their women folk—and he was probably a lord or something else just as stickierish. Not for worlds would she have him know—but if he didn't know she would never see him again.

He was looking at her again, and his eyes—well, they really were remarkable eyes. She wasn't used to men with eyes like those—such terribly serious eyes, full of all sorts of disconcerning questions. They made her feel dreadfully all-overish, happy and unhappy and cold and hot and wishful and afraid.

She wondered, too; but she did not dare satisfy her wonder by waiting to hear what he was wondering about. Once again panic swooped down upon her.

"Are there any ices?" she asked, leaving his problem helplessly adrift.

The matter of fact tone and question jarred him rudely out of dreams into reality.

"I—I fancy so," he stammered. There was reproach in his face, but Priscilla was ruthless and the instinct of self-preservation was strong within her.

"Would it bother you too much to get me one?" she asked, sweetly polite, but wrapped in conventionality as in a garment. "Strawberry, if they have it. The rooms are so hot, aren't they? It's a shame to send you into that mêlée again."

"Not at all. I'm delighted."

He was civil, but perplexed. The change had come so suddenly. She had seemed so kind. What had he said? What had he done? Nothing; but perhaps in another moment he would have—and what right had he? A sudden thankfulness illumined his face, and as he turned away it was Priscilla who was puzzled.

Why should he look so relieved? It was odious of him. She almost wished she had allowed him to go on. She was half tempted to stay and see what he could be induced to say, but—a vision of confession and its consequences rose before her. No; she must escape while she could. She sprang to her feet and moved swiftly toward the door, but stopped suddenly. A pretty, elaborately gowned woman with a gray haired, distinguished looking man by her side was coming slowly along the hall, absorbed in her companion, talking volubly, vivaciously in a voice unmistakably American. Priscilla stared at her compatriot for an infinitesimal fraction of a second, recognition flooding her eyes and consternation following close behind. Then, turning, she sought refuge in a window alcove, partly drawing the heavy curtain behind her.

That Betty Allison should arise out of her past to block the road to safety! Betty Allison, who would know her at a glance and whose curiosity was sure to have outlived her marriage into the British nobility. There would be no escaping Betty without giving a detailed explanation of her presence in London and at the wedding. Priscilla could actually hear the rapid fire of questions. Where are you staying? With whom are you traveling? Who brought you here.

From behind the friendly shelter of the curtain the girl peered out, waiting nervously for the propitious moment. At any time the Nice Man might come back with the strawberry ices, and then it would be too late to run away.

The high American voice sounded more and more clearly, the figures of the woman and man appeared outside the wide open doors of the morning room. In another moment they would have passed, but during that moment Lady Betty perceived a low divan ranged against the wall directly opposite the open doors and paused before it, with a laughing word to her companion, who, nothing loath, sank upon the low seat beside her.

Lady Betty's voice had sunk to a murmur. It gave place now to the lower, deeper murmur of a man's voice, a voice much too fervent for mere society nothings. Really, Lord Kilrose should look after Betty. The voice suddenly achieved nonchalant lightness. Some one must be coming down the hall. Priscilla's prophetic soul announced the Nice Man; and when she looked out cautiously there he stood in the doorway, his eyes searching the empty room, his face an eloquent study in disappointment.

The couple on the divan were watching him idly.

Priscilla debated the situation. She could not stay there in the alcove indefinitely. She certainly could not go out and meet Betty. Perhaps if they grasped the idea that there was a tête-à-tête scheduled for the morning room a fellow feeling or a desire for privacy might make the intruder move on. The Nice Man had come into the room and was standing beside the chair in which Priscilla had been sitting when he left her, his expression still one of surprise, tinged deeply with annoyance and regret.

Priscilla moved so that he could see her, though her face was hidden from the woman on the divan.

"I'm here," she said in a nervous little voice. "It was so warm. There is a little more air here by the window."

The man's face cleared miraculously and he joined her.

"I was in a beastly funk, you know—afraid you had gone. You're not feeling faint, are you? I'll open the window."

He suited the action to the words, and as she looked out into the garden Priscilla's longing for flight swelled to monumental proportions.

"I wonder whether one could get out that way," she said.

"Out where?"

"To the street."

"I suppose so; but who wants to get out to the street?"

Truth rushed to her lips.

"I do," she said with fervor.

He stared blankly at her.

"But if you want to go away——" he began, somewhat stiffly.

An overwhelming desire to cry came upon her. If anything could make the situation worse tears would do it, but she felt them coming. The lump in her throat was swelling, swelling, her self-control crumpling up little by little.

"O, I do, I do!" she urged. The quiver in her voice caught his ear; and as he looked down at her he saw something glistening on her eyelashes. His bewilderment deepened. She was not snubbing him. She was appealing to him. He did not understand, but his manhood rose to meet the appeal.

"There's some one I want to avoid," she explained. "Some one it would be dreadfully embarrassing for me to meet; and if I could go out quietly through the garden—— Do you think it is possible? Do you truly?"

Her voice was tremulously eager. The man stepped out through the long French window and looked about him.

"The area entrance is around the other side, but we couldn't go out there anyway. That would look jolly queer. There must be a garden door somewhere in the wall. I've an idea it's around the corner of the shrubbery down there. Shall we try for it?"

"If any one should see us?"

"We are passionately fond of gardens. There's probably a door somewhere through which one could walk out into this particular garden without exciting comment. Even if the balcony scene has an audience it will probably be credited to whim—or sentiment; and I don't imagine any one will see us."

He was using the first person plural freely and Priscilla found it comforting. She was no longer alone in her adventure. Gathering her trailing skirts around her, she stepped out through the window.

"There are some steps here, but they are rickety. Be careful." The man turned to lend the girl a hand. For a moment their eyes were on a level, his face was close to hers, and something in the eyes, in the whole face, made her step carelessly, stumble, fall. He caught her, held her in his arms only a second longer than necessity demanded, and set her on her feet on the brick wall with a scrupulously formal "You're not hurt, I hope?"

"O, no, thank you. It was no fall at all." The girl replied with a conventional civility even more pronounced than the man's; but in her fast thumping heart she felt she had fallen far, fallen fathoms deep into something—a something to which she refused to give a name. For the time being they had forgotten they were trespassers; but, rounding the shrubbery corner, they came upon a gardener busy with rose cuttings. Priscilla stopped short with a little exclamation of dismay, but the Nice Man demonstrated the superiority of his sex by a cheerful serenity. He even stood watching the gardener nonchalantly for a few moments before he said in a matter of course tone:

"My man, there's a street door somewhere along here, isn't there? We'll go out that way to our cab and avoid the crowd."

"Yes, sir. Just beyond the pear trees. I'll unlock it for you, sir."

He led the way, unlocked the door, and stood respectfully aside. A coin changed hands.

"Thank you, sir. You'll be coming back. I'll leave the door unlocked, sir."

Priscilla drew a long, exultant breath. She had escaped. The worst was over—but was it? She looked dubiously at the Nice Man and her exultation ebbed. They would have to say good-by now. He was signaling for a hansom, but there was a puzzled expression on his face.

"Now, why was he so sure I'd be coming back that way?" he said reflectively. Priscilla's glance traveled up past the handsome, honest face with its boyish eyes to the mop of blond hair which the wind had ruffled untidily.

"Your hat," she suggested.

"O, I say!"

A cloud of distress swept over his face, accenting the boyishness.

"What's the matter?" she asked. "Don't you want to go back?"

"Well, hardly—hardly. Stupid ass to forget that hat!"

"Why not go and get it?"

"It won't look well, you know—if any one should see me—climbing in a side window."

"But even if some one should see you and stop you you'd only have to tell who you are and send word to one of the family."

"That's just it," the man began—and stopped. "That's the last thing I could do."

Once more he checked himself and stood looking down miserably into the questioning eyes. At last he squared his shoulders resolutely.

"There's no use in dodging it. I may as well explain that I don't want to be dragged into the limelight. It wouldn't do me any good to send my name to the family. They wouldn't know it. They've never heard of me. I don't belong in there. I wasn't invited."

"What!"

Priscilla's exclamation was a subdued shriek, pregnant with feeling. The man read the feeling as horror.

"Yes, I know," he said wretchedly. "I ought to have told you. It's rather a dirty business, breaking into a man's home, but we can't always choose, and I never thought much about it before. It was all off color to speak to you—caddish trick; but you looked so—you were so—you know one does things without stopping to think sometimes."

"One does," admitted Priscilla with conviction. Her brain was in a whirl. What was the man? He talked like a burglar, and yet surely no burglar ever had eyes like the honest, unhappy pair looking into hers.

"And I hated to have it all come to an end."

There was no antecedent for the "it," but Priscilla seemed to understand.

"Why did you go?" she asked. "It wasn't your cabman?"

He looked surprised.

"Cabman! O, no. I walked. The old man sent me, you see."

"The old man?"

"Yes; our editor. He got word that Z—— was coming over from Paris for the wedding and going back on the 2 o'clock train—incog and all that sort of thing, you know. So he sent me up to see if I could squeeze a word out of the old chap on his latest eastern entanglement. The duke's down on newspaper men—froths at the mouth if he meets one; so there was no use asking for the interview. Had to break in as one of the guests and watch for my chance. Beastly business. Don't know why any decent fellow does it; but some way or other the thing seems different when it's for your paper. I managed to duck the receiving line and was looking around for Z—— when I saw you and—O, well, I fell down on the story, but I knew there was another man waiting at the train and he'd get the interview some way or other. I meant to look up my man, but it didn't seem worth while. Nothing seemed worth while except—— There weren't any strawberry ices, all apricot," he ended lamely.

"You're a newspaper man?" Priscilla asked breathlessly.

"Yes."

"Not a lord or an earl or anything?"

He gloomily disowned the whole British peerage.

The girl laughed—a hysterical little laugh, full of smiles and tears and relief and nerves—a laugh so complex that the man altogether failed to analyze it.

"O, it's too absurd! It's too perfectly absurd!" she said as she turned and climbed into the waiting hansom. The man stood staring after her, his eyes stormy, his jaw set in an ugly fashion.

She leaned forward, entreaty in her eyes.

"You'll have to get in. I can't tell you with the cabman watching us."

"Into the cab?" He was amazed, incredulous.

"O, yes; do, please. I'm like the Ancient Mariner. I simply have to tell my story—but if I don't do it soon I won't have the courage to do it at all. Do get in."

He sprang into the cab. An interested eye peered through the aperture in the top and a beery voice asked, "Where to?"

The man looked at Priscilla.

"Anywhere," she murmured recklessly. Here was kidnaping added to her earlier crimes. It had seemed easy to explain to the Nice Man when she first heard that he, too, was a rank outsider; but now a realization that men have one set of proprieties for themselves and another for their women folk had come to her, and once more she was afraid, desperately afraid, that the eternal masculine would be scandalized, uncharitable, when her story was told.

"Round Hyde park," the man said to the driver, and as he turned to the girl beside him she took her courage in both hands and plunged into her confession.

"I was so ashamed. I couldn't tell you. It was mostly the cabman's fault. I'd never have thought of it if he hadn't taken it for granted."

No prelude; no context. The man was altogether befogged.

"B-but——" he stammered. She snatched the words from his lips.

"But it was horrid. Of course it was. I don't see how I could do it. The moment I was in I would have given the world to be out. But I couldn't tell you. I knew you would be shocked, and I—you—well, I didn't want you to know. I kept feeling worse and worse." She turned to face her companion. It was out now. He knew the worst about her. She would be able to read his opinion of her in his face.

"The wedding," she explained impatiently.

"O, the wedding!" His brain was laboring. "You weren't invited to it?"

She shook her head.

"I just happened to be in the church."

"And you don't know the duchess or Lady Mary or any of that crowd?"

Another dismal shake of the head.

A singularly cheerful alertness had succeeded the man's state of stupefaction. He was leaning forward now to look into her face, but she did not dare to meet his eyes.

"Perhaps you aren't an American heiress?" he hazarded with a certain subdued hopefulness.

She was done with masquerading and concealment.

"I'm nobody. I'm nothing. I'm traveling with a Cook's party and we are staying at a cheap boarding house, No. 9 Bedford square. Will you please tell the driver to take me there?"

She hurled out the damning details with reckless defiance, and as defiantly lifted her head and looked at him—only to drop the long lashes swiftly over her eyes again after one glimpse of the face so near her own.

"It really was the cabman's fault," she quavered in a queer, uncertain little voice.

"God bless him! I wish I knew the name of that cabman. I'd like to mention it in my prayers," said the Nice Man as his hand closed gently over hers.

Doc Yak Submits to Interview.

THE powers that be assigned me to interview that famous comedian, Doc Yak, who recently, as has become the habit with celebrities, allowed himself to be annexed by a motion picture company. So I rang up his press agent, Mr. Sydney Smith, and asked him if he would make an appointment for me.

"Sure thing," Mr. Smith answered. "What? O, no, no! He does not shun publicity! Any time you say—right here in my studio."

"Vurr' well," I answered, "make it now!"

"Right you are," the Yak publicity man agreed, and shortly afterward he greeted me, seated me, and went to call his charge.

As I sat waiting I let my eyes rove around the studio. It was an interesting place, with its easels and drawing boards; its tobacco jars and ash trays. A life sized portrait of the doc himself beamed at me from a corner and a frieze of his little son Ring Lardner Yak, ran around the room, thus imparting a mischievous atmosphere to the place. On the drawing board, well fastened down by thumb tacks, was the beginning of an illustration. The beginning was merely a pair of horns, but it took no Sherlock Holmes to deduct thereby that the illustration had been or was being posed for by a member of the illustrious Yak family.

"Ah, fame; there art thou!" I murmured to myself. Just then the door opened and Mr Smith reappeared, bearing in tow by a reluctant coat tail no other than Doc Yak himself—a perturbed and grimy Doc Yak! A greasy and gasoline scented Doc Yak! Forced to it, however, he bowed with courtly grace and motioned me back to the chair from which I had risen on his protesting entrance. He spoke huskily:

"You must excuse my appearance. No. 348 has been acting up badly and I set aside today to look it over, this being the first chance I have had to attend to anything of the kind since I busted into moving pictures. That and my Comic Section work keep me humping!"

"They must!" I murmured sympathetically. "Tell me, doctor, how do you like the 'movies'?"

He rubbed a horn ruminatively. "Pretty well—now," he said. "But I must confess, Miss Tinee, a short time ago I never expected to be alive to say them words."

"Those words, doc," softly corrected the p. a. The doctor flushed a painful red.

"Pardong," he muttered, "I am not accustomed to interviews and forget my grammar, which was always my worst study."

I turned severely to Mr. Smith.

"Interruptions," I told him, "are not in order. Some day I may interview you—then you may speak your little speak. At present ——" Whereas Mr. Smith shrugged his shoulders, thereby apparently ridding himself of all responsibility regarding his protégé, and went energetically at his drawing. Doc Yak smiled relievedly and continued:

"Folks ask," he said, "if we fellers really take the risks we seem to do in pictures. I'm here to tell 'em we do. And I'm also here to say that moving picture people are not ordinary mortals in the least. Quite far from it! They are beings gifted by the gods with the lives of a cat and all her kittens. Otherwise how could they do as I have done, for example?"

He looked defiantly at me. I was unable to offer the information he apparently craved. Whereupon he continued:

"Since entering picters—picked yours—Miss Tinee, I have been swallowed by sharks, blown up by bombs, trampled by steeds, and strangled by octopuses—octopi—octopii—how do you pronounce more than one octopus, Smith?"

"Don't ask me," returned the p. a. sulkily. "When I'm interviewed I'll pronounce it—not till."

Doc Yak looked unhappy. But I smiled consolingly.

"Never mind," I said. "He's only jealous. Yushkaworry! What effect have your various adventures had on you, doctor? Have they made you timid—or, well, what effect have they had on your nature and disposition?"

From the corner where the p. a. sat came a low and ominous rumble. Doc Yak looked deprecatingly in that direction.

"Mr. Smith complains that I am not sweet tempered as of yore," he admitted. "But, well—what effect? Why, moving picters—picked yours—have—enlarged my mind, thereby proving their educational value—they have taught me the courage of my convictions—they have showed—shown—me that nothing is impossible to the—the—the—whatwasityoutoldmetosaytoherSmith?"

With wrath in his eye, Mr. Smith arose. Doc Yak backed away. I rose to rescue, when the door was flung violently open and little Ring Lardner Yak burst into the room without ceremony:

"Hey, dad!" he shrieked, "348 is shaking all over and making a noise all of a sudden. What'll I do?"

Doc Yak turned to me with a pallid smile. He said: "They have shown me that there is nothing on earth, no matter what it may be, more nerve racking, more peace destroying, more bother than to be the sole nurse and guardian of an automobile! Forgive me—I must leave you."

He was gone—with little Ring galloping at his heels. Mr. Smith looked after him and shook his head.

"Funny cuss!" he said.

And I could not but agree!

THOUGH perhaps not as widely press agented as are some of his screen brethren, it is doubtful if there is in pictures today a much more popular star than William E. Shay of the William Fox Features Company. Mr. Shay, before adopting the motion picture profession, starred at the head of his own companies and has appeared in support of many noted actors and actresses. His exceptional ability as a leading man led to several flattering offers being made him by picture producers and he was at length induced to join the Universal, appearing as the star in several of the biggest productions of that firm. "In working for the screen," says Mr. Shay, "an actor finds himself called upon to exercise points of his art that the stage never calls for. The motion picture actor is, as a matter of fact, a far more polished artist than his brother of the spoken stage. He has to be. Fine points that would be overlooked on the stage show up glaringly on the screen. I never knew how many faults I had till I first saw myself in the pictures. It is no exaggeration to say that the motion picture has created a new and finer type of actor. The camera is relentless in displaying every defect and therefore those working for it have to take unceasing pains to perfect themselves. Every day one learns something new, too. It is not like the spoken stage, where in a successful play an actor may play the same part for a year or longer; which has a grievous tendency to breed mechanical habits."

ANSWERS TO MOVIE FANS.

TWO FANS: O, too bad um is feelin' blue! Cheer up, though, Miss Snow and James Cruze are not divorced, nor do they intend to be. A letter addressed to Miss Snow in care of the Metro company, 1465 Broadway, New York, will reach her. They go by their right names, I think. You're going to be actresses some day? How do you know, girls?

E. T.: You want to know "just where" and on what days you will be able to view Mabel Normand on the screen? Well, that's something I can't just exactly tell you. However, most theaters have a penchant for occasional Keystone comedies and if you keep your eyes open as you go to and from work, they're quite likely to be delighted with the sight of an announcement bearing Miss Normand's name on the billboards of any one of the moving picture theaters you may pass. Two productions in which she is said to be particularly delectable are "Mabel's Willful Way" and "Fatty and Mabel Viewing the World's Fair at San Francisco." Keystone release day is Saturday. Wishing you success in your quest, etc.

JACK: Stamped and self-addressed envelope, please.

T. H.: Earle Williams lives in New York. He's about 30, I judge.

LUCILE C.: I'm sorry, but I have no information at all regarding the two companies you mention.

MOVIE FAN OF 70: Your letter delighted me more than I can tell you! You call yourself "old," but something tells me you're one of those fortunate, blessed of the gods people who never grow old. Thank you for your words of kindly appreciation. Mr. Delaney's picture has not been in the "Frame." He is, so far as I know, still with the Vitagraph company. Why don't you write to him? I know he'd love to hear from you.

HENRY H.: Such a levity!

CORA G.: Baby Cruze is the daughter of James Cruze and Marguerite Snow. Florence La Badie is not married. No wonder you're interested in the three. They're an interesting trin-i-tee. (I just can't help making poetry!)

H. G. R.: Blanche Sweet and Mae Marsh played opposite Owen Moore in "The Escape." You're welcome.

ELOISE: Please send a stamped and self-addressed envelope for the information you wish on scenario writing. I'll be only too glad to send it to you.

VIRGINIA: In the Thanhouser production "The Cripple" Nolan Gane took the part of Will Jameson, Lydia Mead was Ruth Stevens, Arthur Bauer was her father, Mrs. Fairbanks, Mrs. Stevens; Ernest C. Ward, Mr. Jameson, and Virginia Waite, his wife. No, I never get tired when people write as nicely as you have. I'm delighted to know that the page interests you. Harry Myers has left the Lubin company. He's with the Universal. Surely I'll correspond with you, Virginia—but I must have your whole name and your address, you know.

A REEL GUY: Thanks for calling my attention to my error. Being human, I do make mistakes sometimes, I admit. But I try awfully hard not to. Thank you for writing. Write again some time, won't you?

MARJORIE D. S.: A letter addressed to Francis Bushman in care of the Metro company, Los Angeles, Cal., will reach him. He's left the Essanay, you know.

MERE MAN: I don't blame you for wanting to be the hero in your own family. But I don't think it's necessary for you to resort to anything as desperate as becoming a moving picture actor. Go with your wife to see the idol she especially fancies. Watch him carefully. Also watch your wife. When you've discovered the particular young charm that has enchanted her, go thou and cultivate likewise. You are entirely welcome.

POLLY: On Sept. 27 Cleo Madison appeared in the "Frame." On Oct. 4 Bryant Washburn had the place of honor, and on Oct. 11 Ruth Stonehouse was featured. You're welcome.

PAM: No, my dear, I don't suppose Mr. Kerrigan's barber saves his hair when he gives him a haircut. I don't know of any revenue law or postoffice regulation that will prevent your writing to Mr. Kerrigan and requesting a curl for your locket, but I do hope there's a something within you that will stay your hand.

JOLIET MOVIES: Mr. Bushman says he is not married. In his thirties. Owen Moore is Mary Pickford's husband. No, she is not suing for divorce. The children you saw are not hers. You're vurr' welcome.

HARRIET: It was dear of you to write me that cordial letter. Thank you. I'm so glad you like the page. Norma Phillips was "Our Mutual Girl."

ADA: If you have, as you say, received twelve letters and one telegram from Mr. Bushman, you know him far, far better than do I, and I would not venture to give you information regarding him.

"His Letters," which are the epistles from a moving picture actor in California to his lawyer friend in Chicago, will appear from time to time on this page. In the intervals will appear various articles of timely interest.

VOICE of the FAN

Dear Miss Tinee: I am sending you a poem which I made up about my favorite actress. I would appreciate it very much if you would publish it in the "Right Off the Reel" page. That is the best page in the paper, I think, and so do many others. I am only 13 years old and would love to see my poem published. I will see it Sunday if it is published.

TO MISS ELLA HALL.

Upon the screen a face is seen
Which hundreds have assembled
To see this maid of beauty true
And eyes like violets blue.
The golden sun shines like her hair
She is just as famous as Alice Joyce
Or Mary Pickford, the people's choice,
But in my heart takes more than famous parts.
In my heart her name will stay
Until the end of all my days—
No other can replace it.

O, Ella dear, and do you hear
The affections I am showing?
And, people dear, and do you hear
My talk about this maid of cheer?
She, Ella Hall, has won my heart and many others.
By her sweet ways she is always gay,
And I hope some day men will rise and say
Ella Hall is in their favorite play.

Note: Anything to make you happy, Ruth!

Dear Miss Tinee: I read with much indignation the letter about the superiority of Marguerite Clark over Mary Pickford. Of course, everybody is entitled to his own opinion, but as the letter seems to call for a response in defense of Mary from her admirers, I am writing to express my views on the subject.

I heartily agree with the writer when he states that there is no comparison between the two. My opinion differs, however, when the writer says that Marguerite Clark is the better actress. While Marguerite Clark is charming and pretty, her acting is far less original and expressive than Mary Pickford's. I have yet to see an actress in the "movies" who puts so much expression into her face and uses her hands so little in emotional parts as Mary Pickford.

In conclusion let me say that the insult is to Mary Pickford and not to Marguerite Clark to have her called a "second Mary Pickford."

If you choose the world's one beauty,
Do not pass this lady by.
She's starring in that great drama,
"The Diamond From the Sky."

Lottie Pickford. We must call her.
She's a movie queen by fame.
We hope to see her next Sunday
In the "Public Favor's" frame.

If I was called upon to describe her
Only a few words would do.
I'm sure she is 100 per cent beauty.
She is admired by not a few.

None has yet followed her example;
As an actress she's unsurpassed.
All movie fans join in and say
That she cannot be outclassed.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

A bitter feud, engendered over an heirloom, "the diamond from the sky," found in a meteor by an ancestor, has existed between Col. Arthur Stanley and his cousin, Judge Lamar Stanley. The feud is augmented by the fact that the succession to the Stanley earldom in England may come to an American family. When his wife dies after having given birth to a daughter Col. Stanley buys and substitutes as heir a new born gypsy boy. Three years later the gypsy mother steals the colonel's daughter, who is being reared in secret, and obtains possession of the "diamond from the sky" and a document that holds the secret of the false heir.

When the daughter, Esther Stanley, whom Hagar has grown to love, grows up Hagar returns to Virginia with her, hoping to right the wrong done her and that she has done. She obtains the consent of Dr. Lee, Col. Stanley's old friend, to adopt Esther as his daughter in the hope that Hagar's son, the supposed Arthur Stanley II., will fall in love with Esther and so she will become mistress of Stanley hall, which is her right. Dr. Lee exacts as his condition that he keep in custody the fateful diamond. Dr. Lee warns Hagar that her son is a profligate, unfit for Esther, but she hopes for the best. Arthur falls in love with Esther, as does his boon companion, Blair Stanley, the cousin, who would be the rightful heir to the earldom were the secret known.

In endeavoring to steal the diamond from Dr. Lee, Blair causes the death of the old doctor. Arthur Stanley assumes the onus of the murder, in the hope that he will himself escape and that Blair will live a straighter life. At a tournament Arthur, who has left a farmhouse where he has been working incognito, unseats Blair and crowns Esther Queen of Love and Beauty. Blair, jealous of the honor which he wished to confer upon Vivian Marsten, an adventuress, betrays Arthur. While the sheriffs is being informed Quabba, an organ grinder, handcuffs the sheriff to Blair and thus enables Arthur to escape.

Arthur, finding that a clubman who has been hunting at the hounds has been killed by the limb of a tree, changes apparel with him, and when the posse rides up the dead body is taken to Stanley hall before it is recognized that it is not Arthur's. Arthur thus eludes the posse. In the meantime Hagar, through a detective, has secured finger prints which establish Blair's guilt and Arthur's innocence of the murder. She proposes to Blair's mother not to divulge her secret on condition that Hagar and Esther are established in Richmond society and are received in Stanley hall.

A negro boy hunting owls finds in a nest in the top of a tree the Diamond from the Sky, which Quabba's monkey had taken up there and deposited for an egg which he had stolen.

Blair Stanley beats Hagar over the head with a poker, takes from her the finger print photographs that establish his guilt, and flees, leaving Hagar unbalanced in mind. At Stanley hall Hagar, still mentally unbalanced, cries out for her child, but nobody gives any credence to what she says. In the meanwhile Marmaduke Smythe comes to inform young Arthur Stanley that he is heir to the Stanley earldom and the Warwickshire estate. Learning of the accusations against Arthur, Smythe says that the estate will fall to the next of kin, Blair Stanley, and sets out to find him at the home of Mrs. Burton Randolph in Richmond. Esther and Hagar leave Stanley hall, accompanied by Quabba, who drives off the sinister Luke Lovell. Blair, taking great chances of detection, turns up in Richmond, lured by the adventuress, Vivian Marston, for whom he promises to get the diamond from the sky if she will be his wife. Vivian also enlists the Bloom brothers, gamblers, and Blake, a detective, to get the jewel. The jewel itself, in Arthur's old dress suit, is found by the tramp Strap McGee, who is later murdered and robbed of the gem in the Chinese den of Lung Hi. Later, in Lung Hi's place, a thief steals the jewel from the eye of a Chinese idol.

CHAPTER IX.

"A RUNAWAY MATCH."

MRS. BURTON RANDOLPH, society leader, sank back in the taxicab petulantly resolved to have a real good cry and a thoroughly enjoyable "crise des nerves" as soon as she reached her residence and could give way to her "poor nerves," with all the comforts of home.

"I don't believe you have any nerves at all, Vivian!" she whimpered to her guest. "I think you have the fortitude of a cowboy or something of that sort, and I shall never forgive Blair Stanley for deserting us and sending us home alone! As for that Detective Blake, I am sure if it were me he was depending upon for any pay for taking us to such dreadful places as that Chinese den he would never get his money. He at least should have seen us home if Blair Stanley was not gentleman enough to do so."

But Vivian Marston, engrossed in the intense and desperate desire for the great jewel that had obsessed her since the day she had first beheld it, said nothing, but bit her lip and clenched her hands until the nails marked her palms. She was impatient to reach Mrs. Randolph's house and be alone with her desire for the diamond.

Arriving there, she turned her tottering friend over to the ministrations of her maid and flew to her bedroom. She donned a peignoir, stood by the window, and looked out across the sleeping city. It was after midnight now. Who would get the diamond?

There had been no use to further discuss the diamond with her silly hostess. The Diamond from the Sky was a jewel to be worn by women who dared aspire to it, a gem to be wrested from the weak by men who cared for no consequence except to gain it! Who would gain it now? If Blake got it as agent of Abe Bloom and his brother, the pawnbroker, would she be able to cajole it from these astute Hebrews? She doubted this. But if Blair Stanley got it, Vivian knew it would be hers without dispute.

The Diamond from the Sky, crime stained as it was, had never been sullied by the hands of traders. Since the day, according to its legend, it had fallen to earth in a meteor and had been gained by the first Arthur Stanley, gentleman adventurer of colonial Virginia, three hundred years agone, it had never been cheapened or debased by being in the hands of little men who bought and sold its gleaming glory and appraised it at a price.

After Blake and he had sent Mrs. Randolph and Vivian Marston home, Blake had sought a telephone and notified Abe Bloom that the Diamond from the Sky was on the neck of the Chinese idol. Then it was that Blair Stanley had stolen away and had seized the diamond by swift and daring action in climbing the fire escape at the back of the den, smashing the window, and snatching the diamond.

We have seen how the frenzied Chinese tong leader, Hung Li, had, in attempting to maim the despoiler, severed the neck of the idol and cut down the swinging lamp before the idol just when the detective, Abe and Ike Bloom, supplemented by the English lawyer, Smythe, had arrived on the scene.

In a shed by the Chinese den Blair, in his quick exploration and approach, had stumbled upon a motorcycle. In the excitement that followed the fire he had dropped from the last iron ladder at the back of the den and had whirled away through back alleys and streets to where he knew Vivian Marston would wait awake for him and the diamond.

Arriving beside the Randolph mansion long after midnight, he saw the light gleaming from Vivian's window, towards which a wistaria clambered. He drew himself up the gnarled and tenacious vine. Vivian came to the window at the first swaying of the vine. Blair showed her the diamond.

"Give it to me," she whispered. But Blair was resolved upon the only price his forbearers or himself would accept for this proud possession—the favor of a woman he loved.

"I will wait for you!" Blair replied tensely. "We must marry and leave Richmond tonight. Blake will be hot after us!"

Vivian nodded, and Blair slid down the wistaria and hid the stolen motorcycle in the thick vines at the side of the house. In a few minutes Vivian had joined him. A few blocks from the Randolph house they hailed a belated taxi and were driven to the home of the Rev. John Gray, noted in conservative Richmond as "the marrying minister."

After leaving the collapsed Ike Bloom in the haven of his pawnshop, Detective Blake and Abe Bloom were driven to the latter's gambling house, and from here to the residence of Mrs. Burton Randolph, society leader.

"As you say there is $5,000 in it for me if I get the diamond for you, I will tell you my theory," said the detective to his gambler client. "Blair Stanley, who passed the bad check on you, with his thumb print from the leaky fountain pen on it, has got the diamond. It belongs to his family, you know. If this Arthur Stanley, who has also fled (but I can tell you now he is guilty of no crime that I know of), dies the diamond belongs to Blair Stanley. But Blair does not want it for himself; he wants it for that fair friend of yours from New York, Miss Vivian Marston. Blair is crazy about that dame and she is crazy to get the diamond. We'll find them at Mrs. Randolph's if we are not too late."

But they were too late. Their insistence forced the presence of Mrs. Randolph herself, and just when she was dropping off in a sweet sleep after having enjoyed her crises nerves with all the comforts of home. Thus aroused, Mrs. Randolph was quite indignant at the detective and also at the presence of Mr. Abe Bloom, Richmond's notorious gambling house keeper.

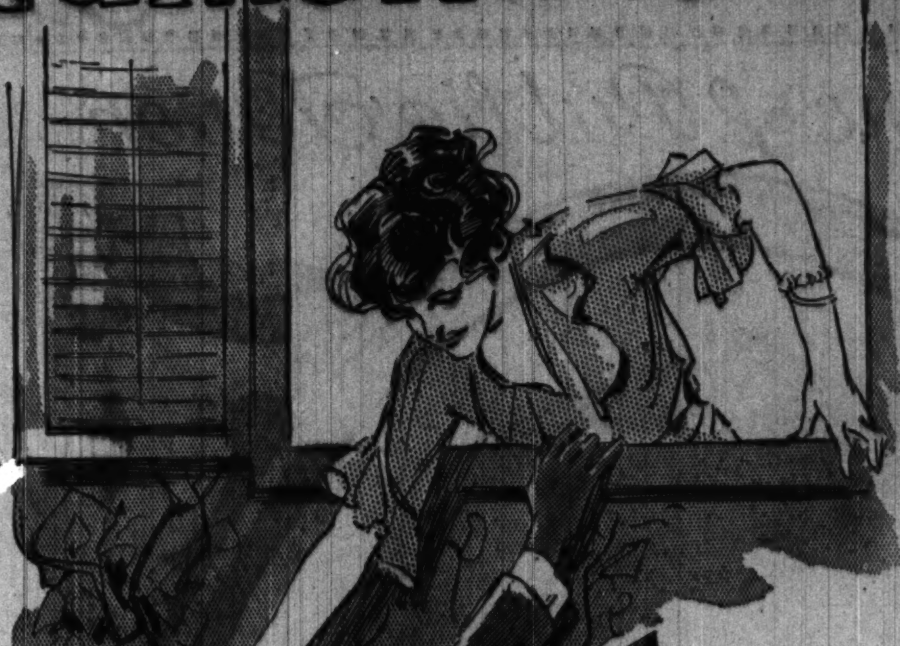
While Mrs. Randolph was indulging in another luxurious nervous collapse at this crowning contretemps the detective and gambler were on their way to the railroad station to head off the fugitives. Half way to the depot the front tire on the taxicab blew out. Tom Blake looked at his watch. "Blair Stanley and the lady and the diamond can't get a train out of Richmond for over an hour yet," said the detective. "I have a hunch that they know this and I bet two to one they have improved the shining hour by waking up Parson Gray, 'the marrying minister,' and getting spliced. I have a wedding present, a pair of bracelets—for the groom."

At the preacher's house, which was near by, neither Blake nor Bloom was surprised to see a waiting taxicab. Blake questioned the driver briefly and mounted the steps of the parsonage. The front door was unfastened and he and Bloom glided silently into the lighted hallway. They could hear the voice of the Rev. John Gray droning, "I now pronounce you man and wife!"

Blake stepped forward and with a deftness acquired by long practice snapped his handcuffs on the wrists of Blair, exclaiming, "We want the diamond, and I arrest you for the murder of Dr. Lee!"

Vivian did not scream; she clutched the diamond and drew it to her breast. Blair, roused to a frenzy of fright and rage at the thought of losing Vivian and of being haled off as a murderer, swung his manacled hands with all his strength. For once Tom Blake was caught napping. He was knocked back over a chair and lay a moment stunned. Abe Bloom was next to feel the swinging double blow of the infuriated Blair. Vivian, quick as thought, pressed the button of the electric light switch near the door, and she and Blair rushed from the room, Blair pausing just inside the hall to draw back the sliding door.

They dashed from the place and were in their taxicab and away before the excited and irresolute minister had thought to turn on the light. The detective, still dizzy from his stunning fall, roused himself and hurried after the fugitives from the house, followed by the astounded Mr. Bloom.



BLAIR AND VIVIAN DISGUISE THEMSELVES FOR THEIR ESCAPE

The taxicab of the newly married pair was gone. The detective and the gambler ran to their vehicle in the next street and, finding the bursted tire had been replaced, ordered the driver to make for the depot.

On their part, the fugitives had not proceeded to the depot. It was the more subtle Vivian who suggested a daring scheme of escape from the city.

Dismissing their taxi near Mr. Ike Bloom's pawnshop, they roused that nervously dozing lender of money on portable property. He was not loath to admit the fair Vivian for, awakened now, he was horribly frightened at the idea of being alone. But while chattering some excuse, the fair Vivian lavished her smiles upon the pawnbroker, Blair stepped behind the unsuspecting Ike Bloom and throttled him with the chain of the handcuffs.

Then they bound, gagged, and blindfolded the unfortunate and fright enfeebled Ike Bloom. From his varied and wonderful stock of goods in pawn the two adventurers were not long in selecting complete disguises. Vivian attired herself as a natty youth, crowning her disguise with a curly boy's wig, "hocked" but this same day by a stranded vaudeville actress. Blair arrayed himself in a somber frock coat, a silk hat, and a black cravat. With cosmetic from Vivian's vanity case he darkened his visage, and the two, taking dress suit cases, with their own and such other attire as struck their fancy, shut the spring lock door on the bound pawnbroker.

With the passengers that took the 3:10 a. m. train north was a natty college boy and a bent gentleman of middle age of clerical aspect, evidently the collegian's father.

Blake had stepped a few yards away to get a view in the light of the faces of a young married couple, leaving Abe Bloom to scan the other passengers.

"That young fellow" was Vivian Marston!

In the gypsy camp the proximity of the Romany people brought no return of mental health to the afflicted Hagar. In the trying days that followed the devoted Esther would have given way to despair but for the cheering presence and loyalty of her new and faithful friend and servant, Quabba, the hunchback organ grinder. Sedition was at work among Hagar's tribe. Everywhere Luke Lovell was whispering evil counsel. He had determined to wrest the reins of power falling from the hands of Hagar. Once leader of the gypsies, he felt it would be an easy thing to coerce Esther into marriage and thus be assured of his Romany kingship.

SEDITION WAS AT WORK AMONG HAGAR'S TRIBE

Quabba sought in every way to cheer Esther. While Hagar sat in her van moaning and muttering for a child, a son that none had ever heard had been born to her, Quabba would take Esther for walks upon the mountains, knowing Hagar was safe among the gypsies, attended by the elder women waiting and watching near by at such times.

The favorite spot where Esther and Quabba daily climbed to talk of Arthur and to wonder where he was and when they would hear from him was to the mountain's top, where a great balancing rock swayed to the lightest touch and had menaced the valley below for centuries.

Upon one such occasion Quabba turned the glasses upon the gypsy village in the hollow at the mountain's foot. There was some excitement in the camp, it was evident. The figure of Luke Lovell on an eminence in the center of the camp could be plainly seen. The gypsies had gathered around him and it was evident Luke Lovell was haranguing them to some evil purpose of his own.

Esther and Quabba ran down the mountain, arriving breathlessly at the camp just in time to find Luke Lovell leading the gypsies to Hagar's van to despoil it of Hagar's supposed wealth and divide it. For this Luke was to be made chief of the gypsies, king where Hagar had been queen and Esther princess.

When Esther and Quabba pushed themselves through the circle of gypsies, Luke had brought out the supposed treasure chest from the van without protest from the crazed Hagar. It was a brass bound box of which Esther had lately carried the key. Esther had seen the box open and had noted it contained only some papers, yellow with age. These she had not deemed it her province to examine until Arthur returned.

But now she stepped forward, backed by the active and determined Quabba, and defied Lovell to open the box. "I have the key!" she cried, producing it from her bosom. "And you!" and she turned an indignant glance upon the gypsies, "if you have no respect for your queen or for me, and listen to the words of Luke Lovell, I will open the box!"

She did so, and as she did Luke thrust his knotted hand in among the documents as if searching for coins or gems. He brought out a bulky, time stained document, the seals broken. It was superscribed, "To be opened at my death, in case my son, Arthur Stanley II., should prove unworthy of the Stanley name."

Esther snatched at the paper, but it was open in Luke Lovell's hand, and at a glance Esther and the sinister gypsy both knew the Stanley secret!

Quabba struck with his dagger menacingly and Luke surrendered the paper to Esther's eager grasp. But he grinned, secure in a knowledge that was power and should be (he was resolved upon this) wealth to him as it had been to his long dead chief, the greedy Matt Harding.

Esther covered her eyes with her hands, clutching the document all the tighter as she did so. Arthur was her brother—he was not the heir of Stanley. She tottered and would have fallen.

A hoarse murmur of rage rose from the emotional gypsies. They loved Esther and they loved the crazed Hagar, who now came feebly from the van and asked in a weak voice, "What is it, my children?"

Led by the enraged Quabba, the now enfuriated gypsies stoned Luke Lovell from the camp, and by this act banished him from the tribe forever.

On the far western plains the young fortune seeker who called himself John Powell, but who had been known in proud Fairfax as the heir of Stanley, found fortune hard to find. The hard and lonely work of a herder was his. On the very day that the Stanley secret was revealed to Esther and Luke Lovell, Arthur, or, as he is now known, John Powell, tastes new adventure.

A camp fire's smoke behind a great rock on his desert range has lured him near. Four plotting "long riders" are behind the rock, and he hears them plan the robbery of the Overland Limited. He mounts his horse and rides away. The marauders rouse up and fire after him, but they deem him to be a passing inquisitive herder, who has not been near enough to overhear them, and they depart upon their way to consummate their robbery.

It is a congress of tramps, in far away Virginia, that plays a part in the next phase of our strange story. Luke Lovell, the banished gypsy, has fallen in with this convention of seasoned ne'er-do-wells. He arouses their criminal cupidity with his tale of gypsy wealth easy to secure if they let him lead them in a raid on a nearby gypsy camp, defended only by a dozen timid gypsy men.

After the incident of Luke's perfidy Esther resolved never to leave Hagar or the documents again unguarded. Esther had not nerved herself to delve further into Hagar's secrets. She waited for Arthur's return with impatient longing. Every day she sent Quabba to the mountain top by the great rocking stone to watch for Arthur's coming.

It was on sentinel duty here that Quabba saw the desperate tramps, a ragged and brutal horde, fired by Luke Lovell's tales of treasure, raid the gypsy camp. Quabba saw through the glasses the outnumbered gypsy men fight valiantly only to be overcome. Through the field glasses he could descry the bulky form of Luke Lovell drag Esther from the van, with Hagar clinging feebly to her.

Quabba resolved upon a desperate thing. Better death to Esther, he thought, than she should be in the power of Lovell and his brute horde even for an hour!

Seizing a heavy pine branch lying near by and applying it as a lever, the half delirious Quabba pries at the rocking stone. It poises a moment on its pivot, then slowly sways and falls roaring down the mountainside. Gathering impetus with every foot of fall, it starts an avalanche of rocks and dirt and stumps. Mightier, greater, vaster, heavier grows the landslide started by the ponderous rocking stone, now whirling down the mountainside in a great mass of dirt and rubble, until it seems the very mountain is falling!

A roar from the valley below, and then a cloud of dust that rises like a fog shrouding the scene. The gypsy camp is wiped out, overwhelmed and annihilated!

In the far west, the Overland Limited gasps up a steep grade in the desert. Beside it gallops a wild horseman. He grasps the platform rails of a car that lumbers by him, and his horse gallops on, passed and distanced by the train, while the daring rider clings and pants in his perilous place. The door of the vestibule opens and the trainmen refuse to heed the warning of the spent, hysterical man clinging perilously to the handrail.

It is Arthur, and he is desperate that he is doubted, believed to be an outlaw train robber such as he warns them of. Unheeding of his protests, scorning his warning, they thrust him from the platform and he falls insensible by the track and the train pants on.

Among the passengers to whom it is whispered that a desperate train robber has attempted to board the train from horseback are a young married couple known as Mr. and Mrs. Peyton.

Mrs. Peyton, whose husband addresses her as Vivian, has shown some of the ladies on the Overland a wondrous diamond, set in an antique locket, that her husband gave her as her wedding present. "An old family heirloom," the happy bride explains.

Radiantly Beautiful, They Have Fascinated Men of Many Attractions in Many Lands. Social Position, Riches and Hearts—Especially Hearts—Have Been Laid at Their Charming Feet. Whose Heart Is Next?

By Gordon Seagrove.

YET again has the captivating beauty that distinguished the five Langhorne girls as "the Langhorne heartbreakers" exerted its potent influence, yet again have two hearts been broken, and yet again has more wealth been added to the millions that the beauty of the Langhorne girls drew to them.

Somewhere on Briton soil are the graves of two daring British soldiers, the Hon. Capt. Douglas Pennant and the Hon. Capt. William Reginald Wyndham, each of whom went to his death with the lovely face of Mrs. Phyllis Langhorne Brooks before his eyes and believing that had he lived he would have been the one to whom she would have given her hand. And by way of indicating that they had thought long before of the toll that war might exact from them, each drew up his will—still with the vivid face before him—and wrote in a bequest for the woman he loved.

And so it comes that the fourth of the lovely Langhornes today finds herself almost $500,000 richer, under the terms of the two wills, than she was last fall when her soldier suitors marched away to different battlefields—and to death.

Each had wooed this vivacious Langhorne beauty for several years, sometimes when she was visiting in England and sometimes at Mirador, the old Langhorne home in Virginia.

But although each strove to prove his love, there was no expression from her, and, indeed, when she secured an interlocutory decree of divorce from Reginald Brooks in Albemarle county, Virginia, last December, she set her friends in the 400 into a fever of speculation as to which of the two she would choose.

Either would have brought her social position in England, for Capt. Wyndham was the favorite nephew of Lord Leconfield, while Capt. Douglas Pennant is the brother of Lord Penrhyn and son of the late Lord Penrhyn, whose fortunes he inherited.

All Made Brilliant Marriages.

Perhaps no other five sisters in the world were born with such striking beauty, grew to such lovely womanhood, commanded so much attention, and broke so many hearts as have the daughters of Chiswell D. Langhorne of Mirador.

Elizabeth, Irene, Nannie, Phyllis, and Nora—all have married well, all married into wealth, and all left behind them scores of suitors who had hoped, but hoped in vain.

Elizabeth was first. In the middle '80s she came out in the southern cities, a ravishing girl with wonderful hair, slashing eyes, and a complexion that was pink and white from riding to the hounds.

The sons of first families of the south flocked to pay her homage, and it was rumored that many went away with hearts dull because she seemed to have no intention of marrying.

It was in the midst of some of these wails from the younger set that T. Moncure Perkins, a clubman who had quite enough money to satisfy any one and whose avocation lay in flitting about the firmament of Richmond society, was stopped short in his flitting by the loveliness of Elizabeth, who appeared suddenly before him at one of the Richmond balls.

From that moment on T. Moncure Perkins laid violent siege to the heart of the first of the Langhornes. On Oct. 20, 1886, they were married, and immediately the first of the Langhornes became the reigning matron of Richmond society, a position that she has not forsaken to this day.

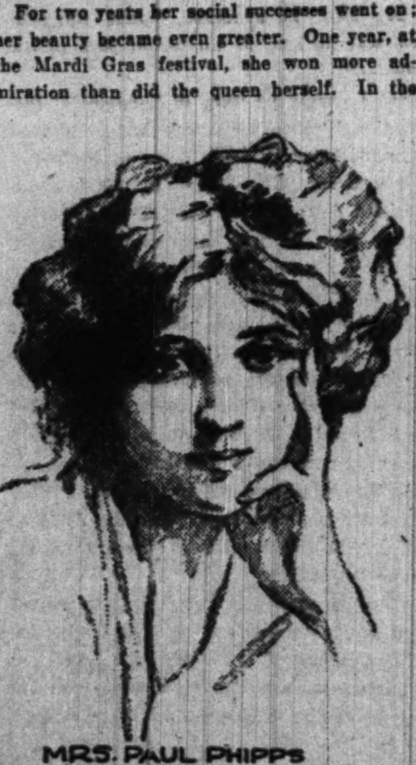
Suitors by the Dozen.

And while she plunged into the social whirl at once after her marriage, she found time to keep an eye on Irene, the next oldest sister. Irene who was still in school, but whose girlish beauty promised even greater social successes once it came to full bloom.

And bloom it did in 1892, when she came out in Richmond society at a german in the Cotillon club, without whose smile of approval no debutante may be considered to be really "in." From that night, when her patrician Irish beauty startled even the most blasé into attention, the second of the Langhornes was the center of a social whirl the cycle of which included a dozen southern cities.

In Richmond a dozen were dangling, in New Orleans other young men of the eligible list were secretly hoping to find lasting favor, at Mirador house parties some of the sons of first families were dancing attention always.

For two years her social successes went on; her beauty became even greater. One year, at the Mardi Gras festival, she won more admiration than did the queen herself. In the north, where her family had social connections, she was attracting the attention of every one, and the crowning compliment to her beauty came when Ward McAllister, mentor of New York society and all that New York society did, chose her as his partner to lead the Patriarch's ball.



MRS. PAUL PHIPPS

About this time a young artist was beginning to win recognition with some of his drawings which showed a certain type of beautiful girl. The pictures leaped into popularity at once and it was not until November 7, 1905, when Charles Dana Gibson married Irene Langhorne in Richmond, that society definitely realized that the second of the Langhornes had been the model for the famous "Gibson girl."

The marriage marked the beginning of another social triumph, this time in New York, where Gibson had hosts of friends. Mrs. Gibson's beauty, her ready wit, her gracious manners established her at once as a leader, and all society adored her. And just by way of showing that the Langhorne beauty does not readily fade, that it has the faculty of compelling attention, friendship, power, even in approaching maturity, it may be stated that Mrs. Gibson was the rage of London—always critical—in 1911, when she was the guest of her sister, Mrs. Waldorf Astor, at her home in St. James place, London, and at Cliveden-on-the-Thames.

Society Meets Nannie.

But all this time there were developments back at Mirador, circumstances that were shaping the destiny of the third of the Langhornes, the charming Nannie, who later was to rock the foundations of national and international society.

Unlike the others, she was blonde, but like them she had the same delicacy of feature, the same keen wit, and the same fondness for athletic sports, chiefly riding. In stature she was slightly smaller than her now famous married sisters, but however small, she was fully as charming. With them as her guides she was introduced to the smartest society in both Richmond and New York.

"You should meet little Nannie," said Mrs. T. Moncure Perkins in Richmond to Richmond's wealthy and desirable young men. Richmond's young men responded nobly—and felt heartaches.

"Really, you'll like Nannie," said Mrs. Gibson in New York to the top-hatted darlings of the 400. Whereat the top-hatted darlings concurred—some of them miserably.

Through the years 1895 and 1896 Nannie Langhorne's beauty shone at Richmond, Newport, Boston, and New York, and from the sketches of her talented brother-in-law, and society wondered which of all the hearts that she had set a-pattering she would choose.

But all speculation was cut short in April, 1897, when Nannie, from all her train of admirers, picked out young Robert Gould Shaw, son of the Quincy A. Shaws of Boston, and married him. As he had followed her in the Virginia hunts—ceaselessly—he swore he would follow her through life, which promised to be reasonably comfortable, since his fortune was in the neighborhood of $10,000,000.

But alas, the most sincere of promises sometimes is broken. For more than two years the young Shaws were happy, whether it was in the beautiful Shaw country place at Pride's Crossing or in Boston itself, where Mrs. Shaw was the idol of society, and then appeared the proverbial rift in the lute.

The first match of the Langhorne family was driving toward dissolution. Young Shaw went about his hunting, Nannie went back to papa, down at Mirador, and society went to gossiping. All this was in August, 1903. The following January suit for divorce was tried and Nannie won it and received the custody of her little son.

Marries Young Waldorf Astor.

After a proper period of retirement she came forth to resume some neglected social duties and the fashionable centers saw her often. Frequently she was the guest of her sister, Mrs. Gibson, in New York or at Newport, but just as frequently she was being entertained in the London home of Mrs. John Jacob Astor, whose very best friend she was.

Now there was a long standing feud between the William Astor and the William Waldorf Astor branches of the Astor family, and Mrs. Jack belonged to the former branch, while the other contingent was represented by William Waldorf Astor, the $200,000,000 expatriate, just then in the midst of his efforts to secure a place in London society.

As Mrs. "Jack's" guest the Virginia divorcee met all sorts of eligible young Englishmen, and in a few weeks her beauty, her charm, and her gowns were the talk of London.

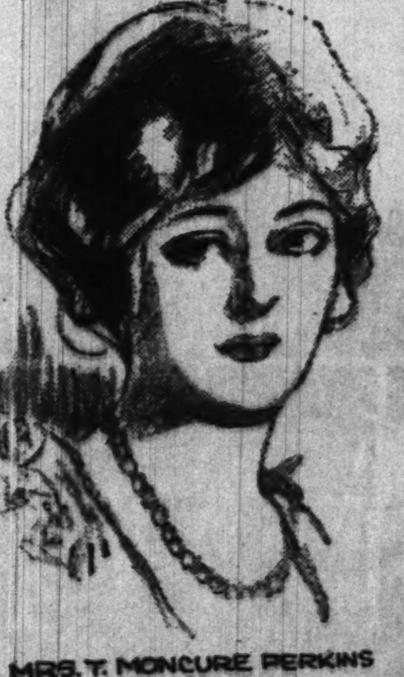
Over its cocktails and its tea it gossiped of the young Britons who had fallen under her spell. Rumor had it that young Robert Walton Goelet, who managed his affairs nicely with some eighty odd million, was engaged to Mrs. Shaw, for he was seen constantly near her for days at a time.

On the other hand, the tea party squads asserted just as positively that Lord Revelstoke, head of the house of Baring, and possessor of $5,000,000, was in love with the lovely Virginian, and would shortly announce the engagement. And, although the rumor was never either affirmed or denied, it was given credence, and Lord Revelstoke was considered another one of the "Langhorne conquests."

Society here and abroad was startled one day in 1905 to learn of the close friendship that had developed between young Waldorf Astor, son of William Waldorf Astor, and Mrs. Shaw. It seems that Mrs. "Jack" Astor had arranged it all very cleverly to have young "Wally" meet and come within the influence of the beautiful Langhorne girl. She assumed that "Wally," being a perfectly normal young man, would fall in love with her, and then—what a victory that would be over William Waldorf Sr.!

And just what Mrs. Jack expected young Astor to do, he did. He fell head over heels, or money bags over money bags, in love with Mrs. Shaw after wooing her both at Newport and in London, and on April 19, 1906, just one year after her rumored engagement to Lord Revelstoke, Mrs. Shaw became the bride in London of Waldorf Astor, one of the richest young men in the world.

And what do you suppose Papa Astor did?



MRS. T. MONCURE PERKINS

He bought them Cliveden, on the Thames, a wonderful home, with still more wonderful grounds, from the Duke of Westminster, and gave it to them as a wedding gift, not to mention presenting the bride with a tiara containing the famous Sancy diamond, valued at $75,000.

Perhaps this was the greatest match made by any of the Langhorne girls, for in a brief time Mrs. Astor became the dominant figure in both London and New York society. Just think of it—Nannie Langhorne, American, winning the most desirable and wealthiest young man in England from under the very eyes of the English girls with whom he had been brought up.

Paves Social Way for Phyllis.

The story of how this beautiful woman, by her tact and graciousness, overcame the queen's dislike for her and made her majesty overlook the fact that she had been divorced, won her admiration, and finally was presented at the palace, cannot be forgotten and neither can her campaign to win over the king in 1908, which she began by a wonderful party at Cliveden, and which ended, it is said, in the complete fascination of the monarch who had frowned on so many of her countrywomen.

In three years, with a pair of beautiful eyes and a smile Mrs. Astor Jr. had accomplished what Astor Sr. had failed to accomplish after years of efforts and the expenditure of millions.

In the meantime Phyllis has come out. Phyllis ran true to type; she was dark and vivacious, rather tall and slender, and a devotee of riding. Immediately after her debut she became a leader in southern and northern society. She rode at the Myopia, Meadowbrook, and other well known hunts, and it was while at a meet in the north that she first met Reginald Brooks, New York yachtsman and club member, hunter of big game, and wealthy—since he was the son of H. Mortimer Brooks.

Although her suitors were many and had everything to offer, Reginald Brooks appealed to Phyllis most because of his athletic proclivities, and on Nov. 15, 1901, they were married at Basic City, Va., in a church which held only the most notable members of New York's notable 400. By this match her social position, already strong by reason of her sisters, Mrs. Astor, Mrs. Gibson, and Mrs. Perkins, was strengthened, for Brooks' family was an old and established one in New York.

She was received everywhere and made an enormous hit in London, where she was the guest of the Astors repeatedly and where she won the hearts of English sportsmen. The Brooks union was considered a happy one until last fall, when they separated.

New, to the $12,000 yearly that the decree from Brooks awarded her has been added the fortunes of the two unfortunate soldier suitors who proved their love by bequests in their wills.

Nora Marries in London.

The last of the Langhornes to wed was Nora, and unlike any of her sisters, she wed a comparatively poor man—that is to say, he had only enough to keep him comfortably all his life and fulfill almost every desire. His name was Paul Phipps, and he is a grandson of William Butler Duncan of New York.

Nora, fresh from social triumphs in New York under the tutelage of her sister, Mrs. Gibson, went to visit her even more famous sister, Mrs. Astor, at Cliveden. Before she had been there a great while she was reported to be engaged to Prince Francis of Teck, brother of the present queen of England. Then, too, she was reported to have won the heart of Baron Gerard and others, but since she was a Langhorne that was to be expected.

At any rate, Paul Phipps turned out to be the lucky one, and attended by the cream of London society, they were married in St. James' church in London on April 28, 1909, and now make their home in London.

Thus, temporarily, ends the history of the heartbreaking Langhornes.

Whose heart is next?

MEBBE IT DOES TAKE MORE THAN A DAY TO BECOME A REGULAR TROOPER

Admits Oney Fred Sweet

Twenty-four Hours Out at Fort Sheridan Among the Old Timers Who Have Been "Over on the Islands" and "Down on the Border."

MY KNEES tremble now when I think of how that West Point officer called me down. Private Riley and I were on our way over to the rifle range when it happened. I had not been in my olive drab uniform long and my mind was so taken up with thoughts of what a swell regular army soldier I was making that the West Point officer, riding past us on a bicycle, wholly escaped my notice. Then I heard the West Point officer—well, as John McCormack warbles on the phonograph record—"I Heard Him Calling Me." He had dismounted from his bicycle, that tall West Point officer had, and he hypnotized me into walking right back to where he was waiting.

"Where was your salute?" he asked.

"I didn't think about it," I stammered.

"Well, you want to be thinking," he came back. "Go on, let's see you salute."

I made an amateurish attempt.

"The other hand," he interrupted. "Say, what troop are you from?"

Dang it, I hated to bring disgrace on Troop B the very first thing, but there wasn't any stalling with that guy wearing leather leggings. There's a stamp about those West Point men that lets you know right away they're boss.

"How long you been here?" he wanted to know.

"Just since yesterday," I answered, and I couldn't help the tears creeping into my voice.

"Well, maybe you don't know any better then," finished the lieutenant or captain or whatever he was, "but you see that you wise up."

* *

Gets the Red Flag.

"My God," breathed Private Riley, when I got back to where he was waiting. "Don't you know you're in the regular army? I see you in the guard house before night. It's a fine reputation you're going to help give Troop B of the Fifth United States cavalry."

"Aw, don't," I pleaded. "I'm strong for Troop B. They're a fine bunch. If I see another of those fellows coming with leggings on, I'll walk clear out around him. I won't be in the guard house by night. By tonight I'll be onto all this stuff. I've an idea it don't take long to make a trooper out of a man."

We reached the range from whence had come the "pop! pop!" and the "whang! whang!" of the rifles. It was all very interesting until, at the close of my shooting at 500 yards, the markers down by the targets viciously waved red flags. The red flags, so I was informed, meant "there's nothing on the target; no telling where the bullet went." But when Sergeant Byington, or Private Gogolkiewicz, or Private Quinlan, or Private Cancilleri shot, the markers held up paddles that stood for "bullseye, bullseye, bullseye, bullseye."

"I don't know what your idea of 'getting on to being a trooper' is," remarked Private Riley, "but so far as being a marksman goes, well I can guarantee you a nice black and blue spot on your shoulder tomorrow morning because of the way you held that gun."

"The sore spot was there all right next morning, but the morrow had not come yet and I was still contented in the belief that all that was needed in an army was plenty of men and uniforms and guns and ammunition.

Night in B Barracks.

I can shut my eyes now and see the Fort Sheridan scenes drift before me in a jumble—the stretch of fields with the touch of June upon them, the long rows of red roofed stone buildings, the brassy blare of bugles, the raising and lowering of the Stars and Stripes that began and ended the military day.

I am back at B barracks that first night. We are all in the recreation room—the recreation room with its walls decorated with army pennants and Remington paintings of the pioneer west and the portrait of Gen. Phil Sheridan. A pool game is going on between a couple of veterans in yellow striped and red banded, blue uniforms, who have seen service over "on the islands"; a red faced youth from West Virginia, who has just been transferred from Fort Sill, is grinding out a grand opera air on the pianola.

They are all red faced—these Troop B boys who respond to an order with "Yes, sir," and "Very well, sir." The sunburn on their faces is not the vacation, peeling off kind. The out of doors all the time sunburn is on their faces in deep layers, as you see it on the face of a farmer. Forty-two of the eighty-eight members of Troop B are re-enlisted men. They are old timers. There is nothing of the ribbon counter clerk atmosphere about them. They walk heavily. They look as if they are muscled of iron. They talk with deep voices.

Regular's Views of Militia.

I am sitting over in the corner reading a magazine and "Frenchy" Miller saunters up.

"You're a new man here," says "Frenchy." "Where you from?"

I felt the temptation to answer that I was "from the coast artillery" or "just back from the border" or some such place, but on second thought I decided I couldn't get away with it, and I confessed to "Frenchy" that it was my first day in a uniform. I am glad that I didn't try to put anything over on "Frenchy" because I learned later that he had had over twenty years' service in the United States army. Back of that, he had served for six years in the army of France.

"I'll be onto it in a day or two," I says.

"A day or two—hell," scoffed "Frenchy." "Three years is none too soon for turning out a cavalry man."

"I don't know," I flared back. "There was a friend of mine in the militia——"

"The militia's fine so far as it goes," interrupted "Frenchy," "but it don't go far enough. The men in it don't get enough training. They ought to be a month in camp instead of a week, and they ought to be made to attend drills. What can you expect of a militia when a whole lot of employers won't let their men off to go to camp? Wasn't I down at Chickamauga in '98 and didn't I see how the militia worked out? Say, their medical corps was something pitiful. The volunteers wouldn't have needed to have died like flies from typhoid if they had known how to take care of themselves. It's discipline and training and sanitation and physical fitness and ability to shoot that counts with an army. An undisciplined army! What is it? A mob!

Uniform Fails to Charm.

"Mebbe," I says to "Frenchy." "But why an army at all? Why not cut out all the war stuff?"

"My boy," he answered, "we're going to have war as long as the world goes round. "We——"

But I caught no more of "Frenchy's" dissertation because the bunch had started to leave the barracks to go down to Highwood "for a time." The "time" in this instance consisted in attending the village's moving picture show. I was eager enough to make the trip with the bunch because I had never been in army uniform before and I had the impression that Uncle Sam's soldier boys always made a hit with the ladies. At the movie, however, the young lady sitting next to me drew her skirts away in scorn as I came to sit beside her. A moment later I heard her rave over a feminine looking photoplay hero who appeared on the screen. Sergeant Frome, sitting on the other side of me, caught the expression of scorn on the young lady's face.

"They're that way now," he commented, "but say, in '98 they were begging for buttons off our uniforms."

"It's just as well that a movie was the only attraction to hold us in Highwood, for 5 o'clock in the morning and a bugle call came all too soon for me. I heard the bugle call, yawned and started to turn over and go to sleep again, but a trooper with an accent that he had brought from Atlanta, Georgia, informed me that reveille had just sounded.

"I don't care for the reveille," I answered with another yawn.

Bing!

When you're in the regular army and hear reveille, you want to get up—that's all.

But "Boots and Saddles" found me ready and alert. Ah, that was the bugle call I had been waiting for! Out in the corral with those prancing black horses from the western plains it was worth while taking interest. "Jeb" Stuart was my mount and he was some old trooper. He seemed to think he knew about what to do and where to go better than I did. He sure was stubborn, but I felt I was getting onto the preliminaries in pretty good shape. Then the West Point lieutenant, riding gracefully along beside us newcomers, shouted a sudden command. Old "Jeb" disagreed entirely with the way I tried to handle the reins. There was a clamping of hoofs and swishing of tails and along we came "dressing to the center." That is, the rest of the half dozen other raw recruits "dressed to the center."

Old Jeb Charges the Fence.

We weren't riding with saddles and in order to stick on I had to dig my heels into "Jeb's" ribs. Unfortunately, for many years past, the digging of heels into "Jeb's" ribs had been a signal for him to pick up speed. I quit altogether in trying to "dress to the center." All the equestrian tricks I possessed were concentrated in trying to keep myself from bouncing off "Jeb's" back. "Jeb" was breaking the speed limit straight for the corral fence. The harder he flew the deeper I dug my heels into his ribs. My elbows were no longer at the regulation angle; they were flopping up and down. If I could have heard the advice of the West Point lieutenant I would have taken my heels out of "Jeb's" ribs, but there was too much of a clatter and I was too excited to pay any attention to what he was yelling. I don't think I would have loosened my heels anyhow, if "Jeb" hadn't finally broken into a jerky trot. I loosened my heels then. I loosened every hold I had. I was in the midst of calling "Jeb" the hottest cuss word I knew when I took a higher bounce than usual, and——

Well—declining hospital treatment—I was sitting over on the barracks veranda, grateful that my bones were all whole even though there was an ache in every one of them (they are still aching) when Troop B—red faced, hard muscled, cavalry wise—clattered noisily up the steps.

It was "Frenchy" Miller's grin that irritated me most. I made up my mind that before he got close to me I would shut him off by putting in a word first.

"But in case of battle, 'Frenchy,' I would have been all right," I remonstrated. "That was just 'dress to the center' stuff. If we'd been charging and I'd had a saddle and a sabre you'd have found me fit."

"About as fit as the average man without training," agreed "Frenchy." "'In case of battle,' depending on a bunch like you, the Lord help us."

QUESTIONS FOR BOYS.

Do you know how to sail a boat?
Do you know how to find the north star?
What would you do if you were lost in the woods?
What would you do if you awoke and found the house afire?
Could you cook a meal without anything but a fire and food?
Could you build the fire without a match?
Suppose a comrade broke an arm in camp, what could you do?
Suppose you were bitten by a snake, what would you do?

You can find the answer and get a lot of real fun in the surest, safest way by joining the Boy Scouts of America. The local headquarters are at 425 New York Life Building, Chicago, the national headquarters are at 200 Fifth avenue, New York. They can tell you where to join and how. Now is a good time. The boys are getting busy for the summer fun.

CAMPING OUT.

EVERY normal boy wants to "camp out" when vacation time rolls around. But some way there seems to be a rather widespread impression among parents and the boys themselves that this is a luxury not available to most city boys.

Now the Boy Scouts of America have made camping out for the youngsters just as easy and as safe as staying at home.

Any city boy anywhere can go into camp this summer and "rough it" just as rough as he likes it. Ample provision has been made for the boy campers at two specially established boy scout resorts in the Chicago district—the "Week End" camp on the Desplaines river, which can be reached by a nickel's worth of car ride, and the big camp at Whitehall, Mich., on Crystal lake, to which the boys of the city are transported and kept for $10 for a stay of two weeks. Both of these camps have been discussed before on this page.

But there are also a lot of boys, scouts and others, who have evolved means of living the life of the open right at home. Hundreds of boys wise to the ways of scout craft have learned how to camp out all summer long, whether at home or abroad.

Two ambitious youngsters in Minneapolis have built themselves a home in the top of a big tree that stands between their back yards. They are cooking their meals over an open fire at the foot of the tree, and they try to supply their own larder by strenuously fishing with considerable success in the lake which decorates one of the nearby city parks.

Out in Kansas the other day I found a whole troop of St. Paul boy scouts camped out at the foot of the great hills that range up the valley of the Kaw river, near the junction of the Smoky Hill and Republican rivers. They had made a decision to get into the open even if it took all summer. At the point where I discovered the lads they had met with a great deal of success and considerable rain. Overland hiking with a trek cart all the way from the Minnesota capital had put them in fine trim and they promised to be tough as Indians by the time of their return.

At Kansas City, where the Kaw flows into the murky Missouri, I found another colony of boy scouts living in a shack they had built on the sand flats of the river bottom. They told me they went home Sundays. I suspect that this program was arranged with a sharp eye on the Sunday dinner with the home folks. They had a canoe, a skiff, and a strangely constructed sailing craft, all made with their own hands out of the materials they found in the driftwood and the river bottom woodlands.

On the north side of Chicago, a lad who last year was afraid to go to bed alone in the dark, has joined the scouts, grown brave, and taken to the open. He has a tent on one of the more secluded beaches and sleeps there of nights.

Illustrating the universal desire of the boy to get out into the open and camp is the case of a mountain boy I met down in the Arkansas Ozarks. This youngster, "Hi" Simpson, has lived for about seventeen years with his primitive parents in a log cabin on the sunny slope of the "second cove," about "two whoops and a holler" down the Owl fork of the Red river from the lofty top of Half Moon mountain.

Boy scouts in camp in Pelham Bay park, New York, which proves you can camp out anywhere if you want to.

Hi's home is the most perfectly ventilated habitation I have ever seen anywhere. The chinks between the logs are ample enough at places to admit the free and frequent entrance and exit of poultry, pigs, and the sundry varmints that infest the mountain side. The roof leaks everywhere except under the joists, and when the wind blows you couldn't keep your hat on in the house.

Hi strolled down to the river bank, where he found a couple of writer persons eating canned fish and wrestling with a snarl of wet bass line. He surveyed the layout—canoe, dog tent, cameras, rifles, grub, and new fangled alcohol stove.

"Gosh," he observed, digging into the sand of the riffle with a prehensile toe, "I wisht I could get out and go camping some time."

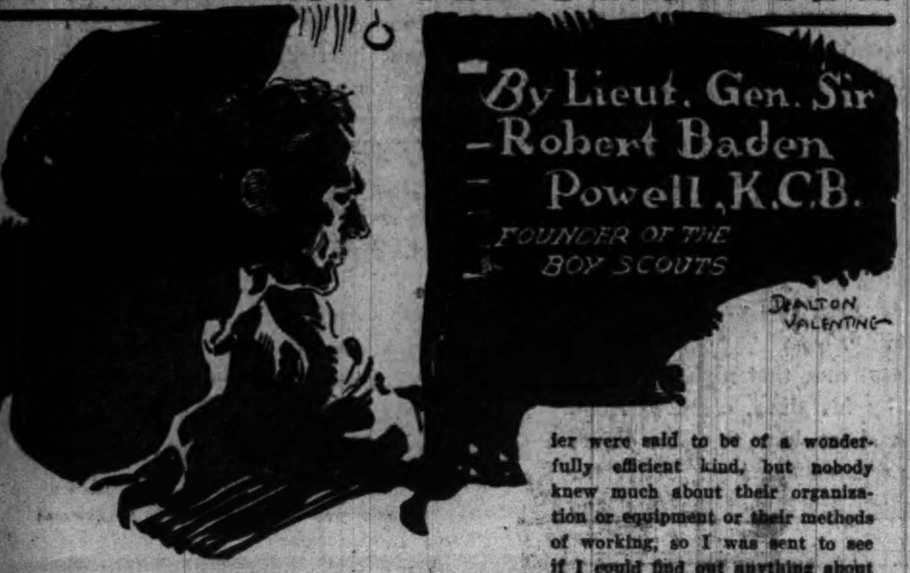
That mountain cub had been living in a camp all his life and doesn't know it. It wouldn't be worth while to tell him. Perhaps some day he will come down out of the mountains and come to the city to "rough it" a while.

But anyway, every boy can get out in the open air and live a camp life if he wants to do it. There is a way everywhere, and one of the best ways open to the city boy is to join the Boy Scouts of America. Then he will find half of the work of getting into camp already done for him.

Around the Camp Fire.

JIMMY H.—If a boy wants to join the boy scouts of America and doesn't know of any troop near him, he should write to the National Headquarters asking for the name of the nearest scoutmaster. National headquarters will ask the nearest scoutmaster to let the boy join his troop, even though he can not attend the troop meetings more than once or twice a year. Of course, the "lone scout" will have to learn the work by himself from the handbook, with the assistance of letters from the scoutmaster and from national headquarters. He will have to arrange with the scoutmaster to take his examinations at such times as he can go to the headquarters of the troop.

MY ADVENTURES AS A SPY



By Lieut. Gen. Sir Robert Baden Powell, K.C.B.

FOUNDER OF THE BOY SCOUTS

THE workmen were not yet upon the building, so I had the whole place to myself. My first act was to look for another ladder as a line of escape in case of being chased. It is always well to have a back door to your hiding place; that is one of the essentials in scouting. Presently I found a short ladder leading from my platform to the stage below, but it did not go to the ground. Peering quietly over the scaffolding, I saw my friend the policeman below, still at fault. I blessed my stars that he was no tracker, and therefore had not seen my footmarks leading to the foot of the ladder.

Then I proceeded to take note of my surroundings and to gather information. Judging from the design of the building, its great chimneys, etc., I was actually on the new power house. From my post I had an excellent view over the dockyard, and within 100 feet of me were the excavation works of the new dock, whose dimensions I could easily estimate. I whipped out my prismatic compass and quickly took the bearings of two conspicuous points on the neighboring hills, and so fixed the position which could be marked on a large scale map for purposes of shelling the place if desired.

Meantime my pursuer had called the other policeman to him, and they were in close confabulation immediately below me, where I could watch them through a crack between two of the footboards. They had evidently come to the conclusion that I was not in the power house, as the interior was fully open to view, and they had had a good look into it. Their next step was to examine the goods shed close by, which was evidently full of building lumber, etc.

One man went into it while the other remained outside on the line that I should probably take for escaping, that is, between it and the boundary wall leading to the gateway. By accident rather than by design he stood close to the foot of my ladder, and thus cut off my retreat in that direction. While they were thus busy they were leaving the gate unguarded, and I thought it was too good a chance to be missed, so, returning along the scaffolding until I reached the small ladder, I climbed down this on to the lower story, and, seeing no one about, I quickly swarmed down one of the scaffolding poles and landed safely on the ground close behind the big chimney of the building.

Here I was out of sight, although not far from the policeman guarding the ladder; and, taking care to keep the corner of the building between us, I made my way round to the back of the lodge, and then slipped out of the gate without being seen.

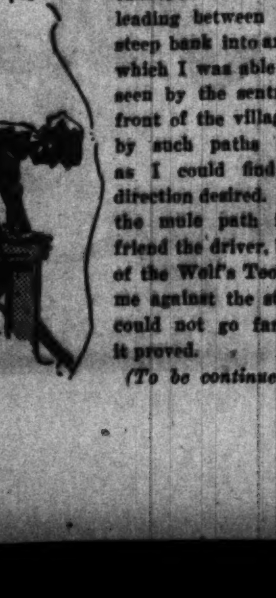
I was once in a country where the mountain troops on the frontier were said to be of a wonderfully efficient kind, but nobody knew much about their organization or equipment or their methods of working, so I was sent to see if I could find out anything about them. I got in among the mountains at the time when their annual maneuvers were going on, and I found numbers of troops quartered in the valleys and billeted in all the villages. But these all appeared to be the ordinary type of troops, infantry, artillery of the line, etc. The artillery were provided with sledges by which the men could pull the guns up the mountain sides with ropes, and the infantry were supplied with alpenstocks to help them in getting over the bad ground. For some days I watched the maneuvers, but saw nothing striking to report.

Then one evening in passing through a village where they were billeted I saw a new kind of soldier coming along with three pack mules. He evidently belonged to those mountain forces of which, so far, I had seen nothing. I got into conversation with him, and found that he had come down from the higher ranges in order to get supplies for his company, which was high up among the snow peaks and entirely out of reach of the troops maneuvering on the lower slopes.

He incidentally told me that the force to which he belonged was a large one, composed of artillery and infantry, and that they were searching among the glaciers and the snows for another force which was coming as an enemy against them, and they hoped to come into contact with them probably the next day. He then roughly indicated to me the position in which his own force was bivouacking that night, on the side of a high peak called the "Wolf's Tooth."

By condoling with him on the difficult job he would have to get through, and suggesting impossible roads by which he could climb, he eventually let out to me exactly the line which the path took, and I recognised that it would be possible to arrive there during the night without being seen.

So after dark, when the innkeeper thought I was safely in bed, I quietly made my way up the mountain side to where the "Wolf's Tooth" stood up against the starry sky as a splendid landmark to guide me. There was no difficulty in passing through the village with its groups of soldiers strolling about off duty, but on the roads leading out of it many sentries were posted, and I feared that they would scarcely let me pass without inquiring as to who I was and where I was going.



So I spent a considerable time in trying to evade these, and was at last fortunate in discovereing a storm drain leading between high walls up a steep bank into an orchard, through which I was able to slip away unseen by the sentries guarding the front of the village. I climbed up by such paths and goat tracks as I could find leading in the direction desired. I failed to strike the mule path indicated by my friend the driver, but with the peak of the Wolf's Tooth outlined above me against the stars I felt that I could not go far wrong—and so it proved.

Interesting Boys

RUNNING A "CRAWDAD" FARM.

IN Green county, Missouri, Fred and Frank Woods, two farmer boys, have discovered a pond that is making them a small fortune. This pond has been converted into a veritable crawfish farm. It is a spring fed body of clear cold water. The pond bottom is covered with a kind of moss not found elsewhere in the state. A species of periwinkle feeds on the moss and in turn swarms of crawfish feed on the periwinkle.

The boys daily net from the pond thousands of crawfish to fill their orders from St. Louis dealers. Their income from the underwater farm has averaged about $65 a week this season.

To those who are not acquainted with the rare delicacy of the crawfish it may be well to explain that it is practically a fresh water lobster of reduced size. The crawfish does not grow claws quite so large in proportion as the lobster, but otherwise probably it would prove difficult to distinguish from his sea cousin in casual observation.

The crawfish is a much esteemed food in certain sections of the west and south, where distance from the sea markets makes fish food scarce. The crawfish is cooked most every way the lobster is, and in a few ways designed for his special benefit. In the southland the crawfish is usually boiled alive in water containing spices and peppers. It is then eaten out of the shells just as one would a lobster.

The Woods boys have captured the cream of the market in their territory because of the unusual quality of the crawfish produced on their "farm." The clear cold water and beautiful supply of delicate periwinkles produce prize crawfish that command much higher prices than the crawfish taken from the muddy bottomed creeks and rivers.

The boys have found that they can tend the crawfish crop without interference with their studies and farm labors. In the evening when the fish are busy feeding on the periwinkles over the moss beds along the shores they are taken in nets.

One of the boys wading shoulder deep out in the pond carries an end of the net, while his brother walks close in along shore. Every haul can be expected to bring in a hundred or two crawfish of salable size. The market requires that they be three inches in length, but not infrequently some old giant of the pool as much as nine inches in length is taken in the net.

After nightfall the boys use an acetylene bicycle searchlight to detect the crawfish feeding on the moss beds.

The crawfish as taken from the nets are put into baskets, laid in layers with wet moss, which keeps them alive and fresh until they reach the consumers. Several southern hotels have made a specialty of crawfish soup, which bids fair to become a world renowned delicacy.

Last year the boys began their crawfish farm experiment and sold only 30,000 fish. This year they expect to end the season with a total of more than 100,000 sold. They have made a contract which brings them a regular income on their business. They first marketed their output on a basis of $8.50 a thousand.

The crawfish is rather well known to most western fishermen. When still fishing it is a considerable pest because of its habit of stealing bait by a slow process of nibbling, which merely aggravates the expectation of the angler. The only proper revenge on such a crawfish is to raise the line gently and capture it. The crawfish may then be used as a bait for bass or other gamy fish.

While the Woods boys' pond shows no sign of depletion, they are experimenting with a view to discovering the breeding habits of the crawfish. They may be able to improve the strain and increase the output of their pond. As it is now the land covered by the pond is producing a crawfish crop that brings them a much greater income than the same area in corn or other field crops and at a minimum expenditure of labor and attention.

MAN-CARRYING KITES IN WAR.

NOW comes word from France of renewed interest in the use of man carrying kites for military observation purposes. The construction of man carrying kites is not new, but because of the perfection of the aeroplane and the anchored balloon its development has been somewhat neglected in recent years. More than ten years ago experiments with man carrying kites were made in this country with considerable success.

Because of the roughness and inaccessibility of some of the territory which the French are fighting over, it has become more expedient to carry and operate war kites than aeroplanes or balloons. The kites may be taken down and folded into small compass, and because of the lightness of their construction a small crew is able to pack the entire equipment practically any place that a man can walk or climb.

In the earlier American experiments the observer was carried on a special platform, which was made a part of one of the kites in the man carrying series, or "tandem" of kites. Now the French are using the kites only to support a cable carried aloft on which a basket to hold the observer and his instruments is lifted. The basket used is a small model of that used on the racing balloons in transcontinental flights. It is equipped with the necessary outfit of range finding and spy glasses, etc.

The weight of the cable and its burden is not intrusted to one kite alone. The kites are flown in "teams" and tandem series. Thus a kite cable may carry as many as eight or ten kites attached at proper intervals along the line. This method of flying the kites answers two purposes. It enables the lifting of the kites and the line to the most nearly perpendicular angle possible and it divides the load so that the failure of escape of one or two kites is not fatal to the observer and his purpose. Then again, in taking down the kites for transportation it divides the packages into smaller size and facilitates handling.

The French method of using a traveling basket on the kite cable enables the observer to ascend and descend without disturbing the kite line, as was necessary with the first of the military kites.

The use of the big kites for scientific purposes has been highly developed in the United States weather service. Kites are used in explorations of the air, carrying instruments of precision to great heights with safety. These big kites, always of the cellular or box pattern, are flown on steel piano wire, frequently in spools of several miles in length. In order to handle this great weight of wire and to operate the kites engine driven reels or spools are used. The drums on which the wire is wound are of extraordinary strength because of the enormous pressure produced by the tension of the kites. Every turn of the wire when reeling in a string of kites perhaps a mile and a half in the air and five miles away produces a stress equal to the wind pressure on the kite planes, which means the total load of the drum runs into hundreds of tons.

The steel lines of the weather kites frequently reproduce Ben Franklin's experiment with shocking success. It has often been necessary for the operators to abandon kite lines in time of storm and electric disturbance.

The working life of an aeroplane motor is seldom more than 300 hours, according to the experience of aviators in the French military service. In order to get this much use of a motor it is necessary to take it apart and clean it after every fifty hours of service. Cal Rodgers, who was one of the most reliable flyers in America, took his motor down after every twenty-five hours of service. The short life of aeroplane motors is a big factor of military expense. These motors cost around 3,000 each. A factory near Paris is now delivering them at the rate of 150 a month.

THE ST[illegible]U HASSAN.

FROM THE ARABIAN NIGHTS

BY

IN the city of Bagdad there once lived a rich merchant who had one son, named Abou Hassan. The merchant had his son well educated and brought him up in the strictest manner. When Abou Hassan was 30 years old his father, having amassed a huge fortune, suddenly died, leaving his great wealth to his son.

Abou Hassan was a rather lazy young fellow, full of humor, fond of jolly company, and always ready to enter into a joke. His father had always forbidden him to be extravagant, and as the jolly young man had always longed to spend his money freely, he now started out to entertain in a most lavish way.

First he divided his money into two parts. With one half he bought houses and lands, with a resolution never to spend the money that came from his rents, which would be quite enough to keep him in a comfortable way. With the other half, which consisted of ready money, he made up his mind to have the best of good times.

Abou Hassan formed a club of men of his own age who were anxious to pass the time agreeably and set about spending his money in a most lavish and generous manner. He gave wonderful entertainments and gorgeous dinners and spared neither trouble nor expense to make them talked about throughout the city.

The expense of these costly affairs was so great that in less than a year he had spent all the money that he had set aside for this purpose. As Abou Hassan did not wish to touch the other half of his wealth, he was forced to give up his gay parties, and just as soon as he stopped entertaining his friends they began to avoid him. This action of his friends cut Abou deeply and he worried a great deal over their ungrateful behavior.

"A poor man is looked upon both by his friends and his relations as a stranger," thought Abou Hassan to himself. "For the last year I have treated all my friends with the greatest generosity, and now that my money is gone they turn from me. I am glad that I was wise enough to save half of my fortune, for I shall know how to use what is left to better advantage now."

Wondering if all his friends had turned against him, Abou Hassan determined to visit each one of them and ask for a loan, pretending that he did not have a cent in the world. None of his former friends would lend him money. In fact, some of them were rude to him and ordered him from their homes in the same way they would have dismissed a beggar.

One friend, to whom Abou Hassan had been particularly generous, when asked for a small loan looked at him in a haughty manner and exclaimed: "I am afraid, my man, that you have made a mistake. I am sure I do not know you," and, turning up his nose in the most provoking way, he walked off.

Abou Hassan made up his mind that he would form no more close friendships, but as he was fond of company he soon planned a way to have a congenial companion without having to keep such men as his friends. His scheme was to go to the main gate of the city and invite the first stranger he saw, who was not a citizen of Bagdad, to his house, on the condition that he would leave the following morning. In this way Abou Hassan felt that he would enjoy the companionship of the person he was entertaining without knowing him long enough for a friendship to be formed.

Every morning he went to the city gate and invited a stranger to his house. His table was set with plenty of good food and his wines were of the best. As Abou Hassan was a witty and well educated young man, he was a delightful and entertaining host and his guests were usually sorry to leave his house after their short but pleasant visit.

One day as Abou Hassan stood waiting at the gate as usual a richly dressed merchant came into the city attended by a slave, and as Abou Hassan was pleased with the manly bearing of the merchant, he walked up to him and said: "My good man, my name is Abou Hassan, and I should love to have you do me the honor of dining with me and spending the night at my house. I have a peculiar whim, at which I hope you will not take offense. I am always glad to entertain strangers at my home, but do so only on condition that they will leave the following morning and never see me again."

"This is a most singular condition," said the merchant, "but, being a total stranger to you, I could not demand more of your hospitality than you cared to offer. Give me the direction for finding your house and I will be greatly pleased to come this evening and accept your hospitality."

At the appointed time that night the merchant, attended by his slave, came to Abou Hassan's house and sat down to a fine dinner that had been prepared for him. After the merchant had eaten heartily of the food and had drunk of Abou Hassan's wine he listened with satisfaction to the young man's pleasant conversation. At last, in a burst of confidence, Abou Hassan told the merchant his history—how he had divided his money and how he had wined and dined his friends, only to have them forsake him when his money was gone.

"Don't you think my friends were most ungrateful?" asked Abou Hassan as he filled the merchant's glass with wine.

"I think their conduct was most ungracious," answered the merchant, "and it's a pity that there is no law that could punish them for their ingratitude."

"I wish I were king of this city for one day," said Abou Hassan, "and I would have each of these false friends given one hundred lashes on the back."

"It's a lucky thing for them," laughed the merchant, "that you are not the king. Well, fill up your glass. I'll drink to your good health and then retire, for it is late."

Abou Hassan filled his guest's glass with wine and then poured out a glass for himself.

"Before we drink," said the merchant, "I wish you would go to the outer door and bring my staff, which I left there as I came in."

Abou Hassan set down his glass and quickly left the room. As he passed through the door the merchant hurriedly took a small bottle from his pocket and, pulling out the cork, he poured a few drops into Abou Hassan's glass.

Presently the host returned with the staff, which he gave to the merchant, and, taking up his glass, he said, "Here's good health to you, my friend, and may you have pleasant dreams."

They both drank their wine, and as Abou Hassan set his empty glass on the table he suddenly fell senseless to the floor. The merchant made a sign to his slave to take Abou Hassan upon his back, and, hurrying to the street door, they passed out into the night.

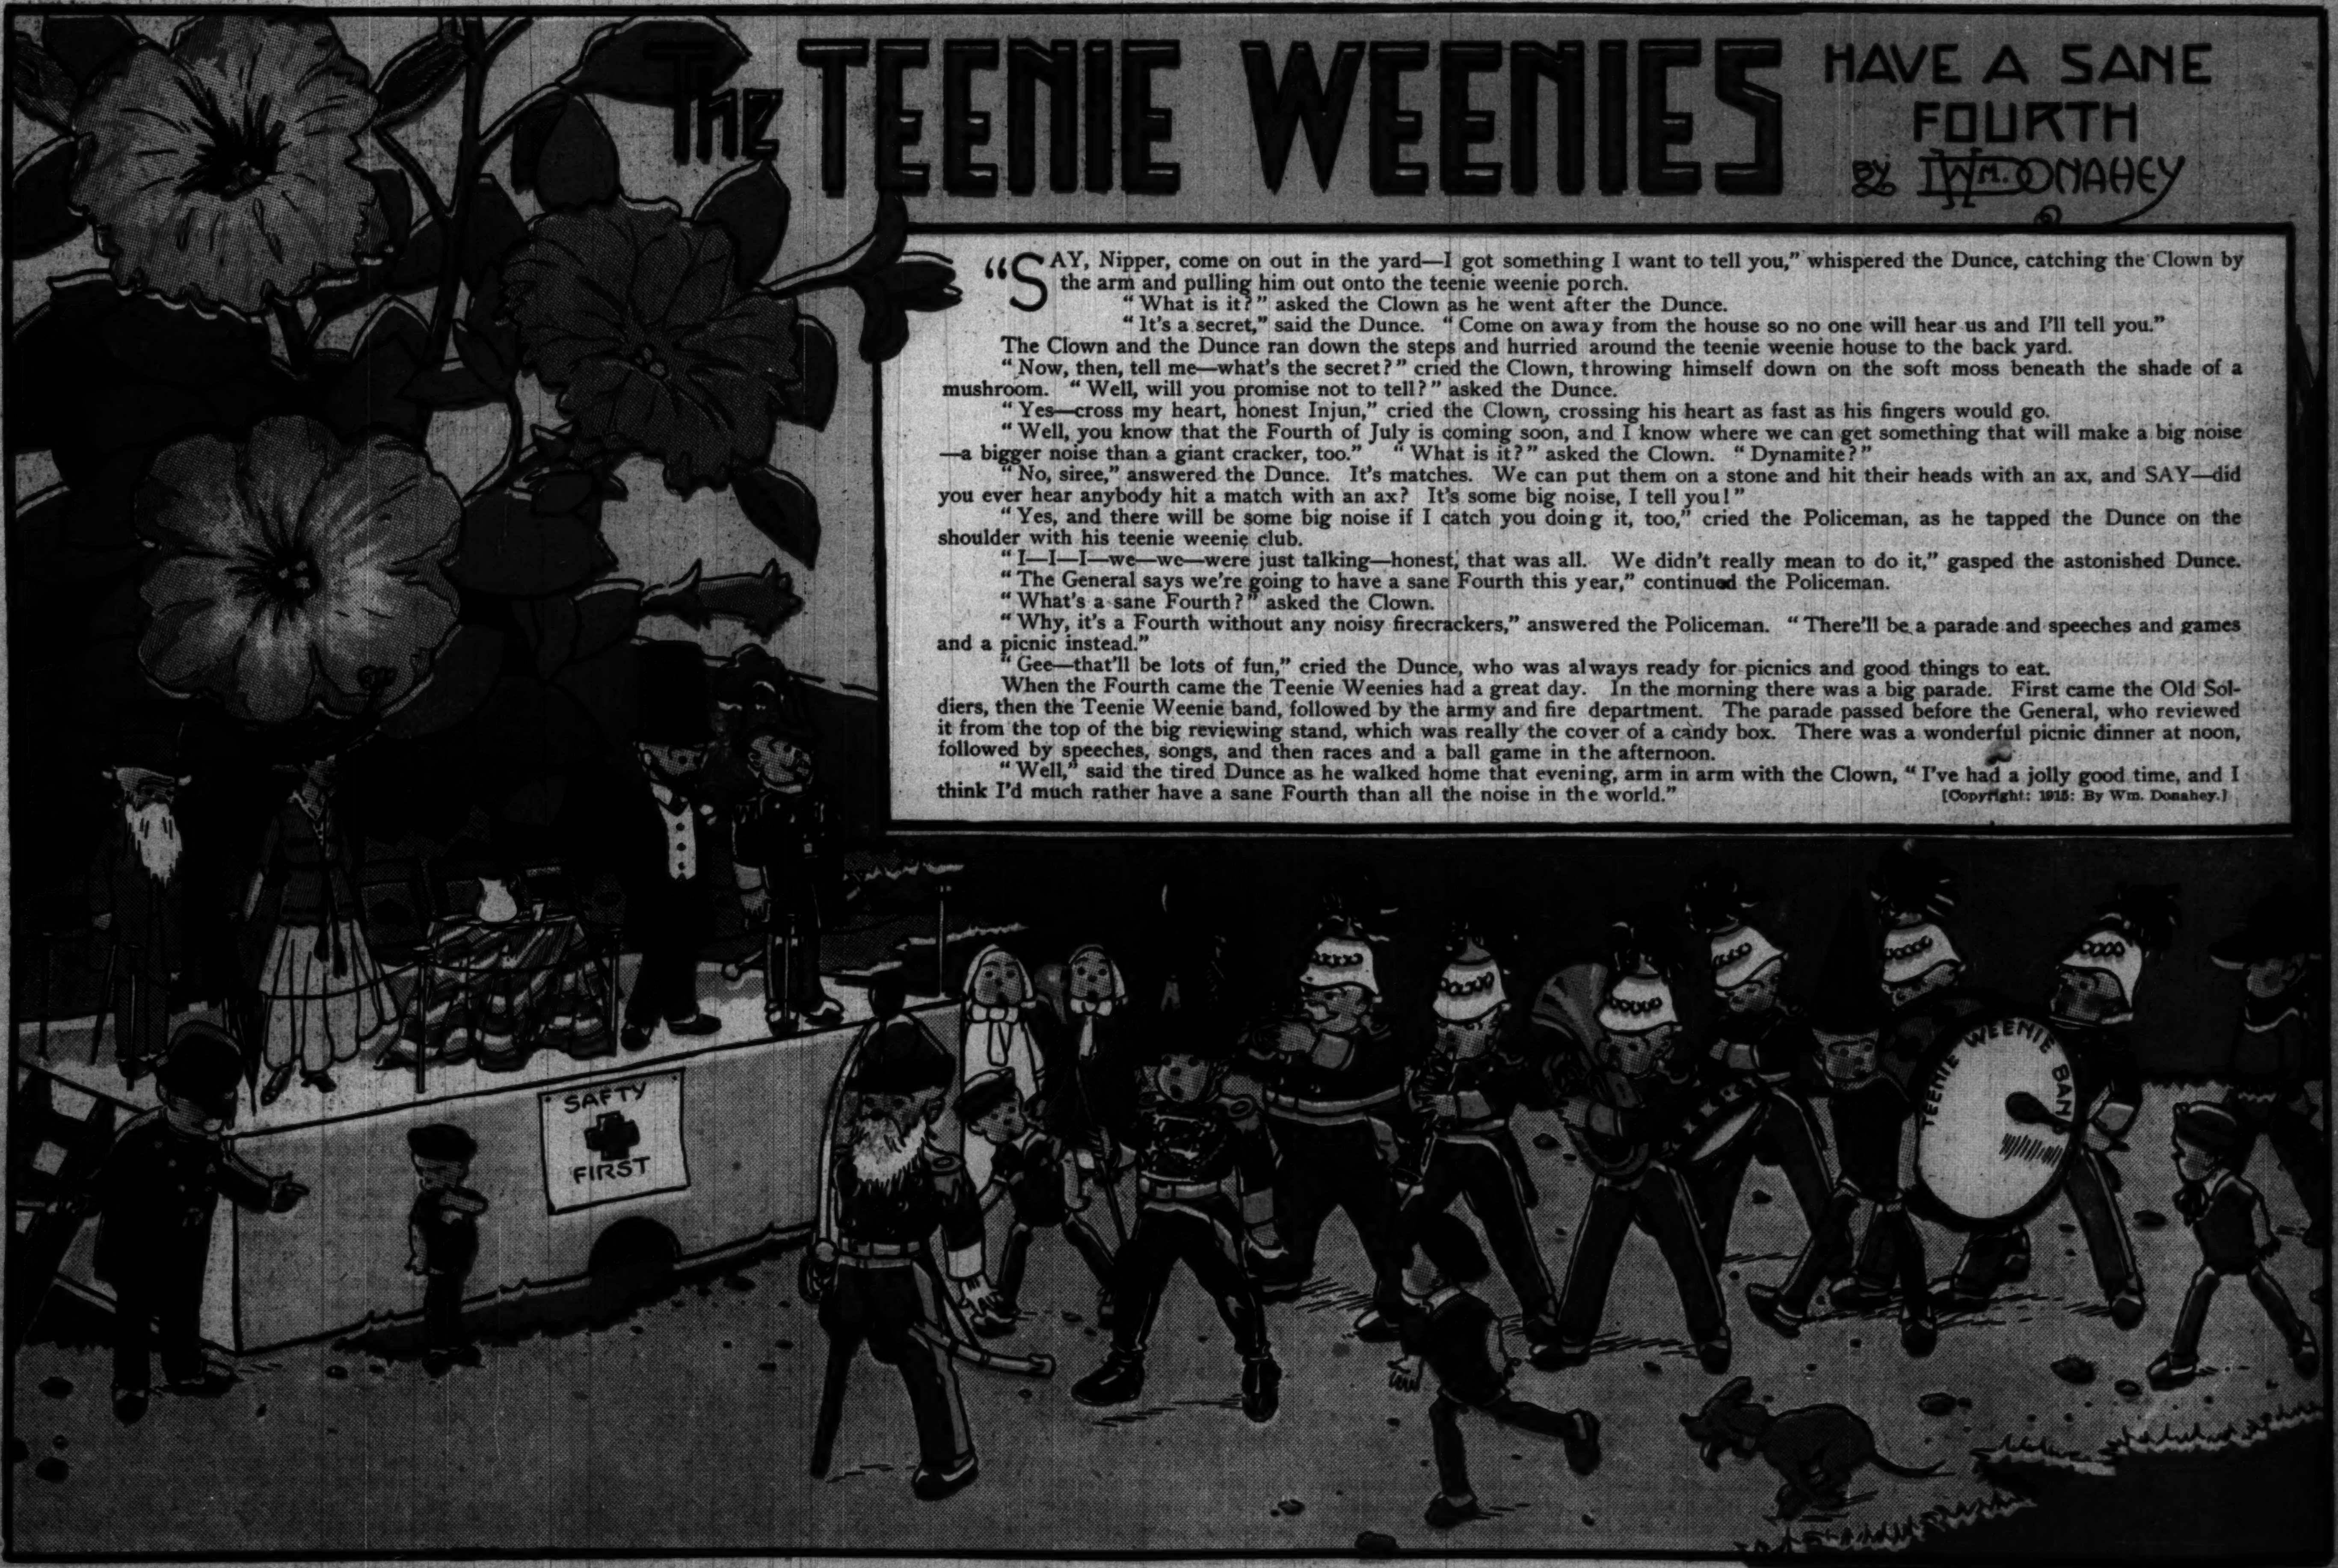
THE TEENIE WEENIES

HAVE A SANE FOURTH

BY WM. DONAHEY



"SAY, Nipper, come on out in the yard—I got something I want to tell you," whispered the Dunce, catching the Clown by the arm and pulling him out onto the teenie weenie porch.

"What is it?" asked the Clown as he went after the Dunce.

"It's a secret," said the Dunce. "Come on away from the house so no one will hear us and I'll tell you."

The Clown and the Dunce ran down the steps and hurried around the teenie weenie house to the back yard.

"Now, then, tell me—what's the secret?" cried the Clown, throwing himself down on the soft moss beneath the shade of a mushroom. "Well, will you promise not to tell?" asked the Dunce.

"Yes—cross my heart, honest Injun," cried the Clown, crossing his heart as fast as his fingers would go.

"Well, you know that the Fourth of July is coming soon, and I know where we can get something that will make a big noise —a bigger noise than a giant cracker, too." "What is it?" asked the Clown. "Dynamite?"

"No, siree," answered the Dunce. It's matches. We can put them on a stone and hit their heads with an ax, and SAY—did you ever hear anybody hit a match with an ax? It's some big noise, I tell you!"

"Yes, and there will be some big noise if I catch you doing it, too," cried the Policeman, as he tapped the Dunce on the shoulder with his teenie weenie club.

"I—I—I—we—we—were just talking—honest, that was all. We didn't really mean to do it," gasped the astonished Dunce.

"The General says we're going to have a sane Fourth this year," continued the Policeman.

"What's a sane Fourth?" asked the Clown.

"Why, it's a Fourth without any noisy firecrackers," answered the Policeman. "There'll be a parade and speeches and games and a picnic instead."

"Gee—that'll be lots of fun," cried the Dunce, who was always ready for picnics and good things to eat.

When the Fourth came the Teenie Weenies had a great day. In the morning there was a big parade. First came the Old Soldiers, then the Teenie Weenie band, followed by the army and fire department. The parade passed before the General, who reviewed it from the top of the big reviewing stand, which was really the cover of a candy box. There was a wonderful picnic dinner at noon, followed by speeches, songs, and then races and a ball game in the afternoon.

"Well," said the tired Dunce as he walked home that evening, arm in arm with the Clown, "I've had a jolly good time, and I think I'd much rather have a sane Fourth than all the noise in the world."

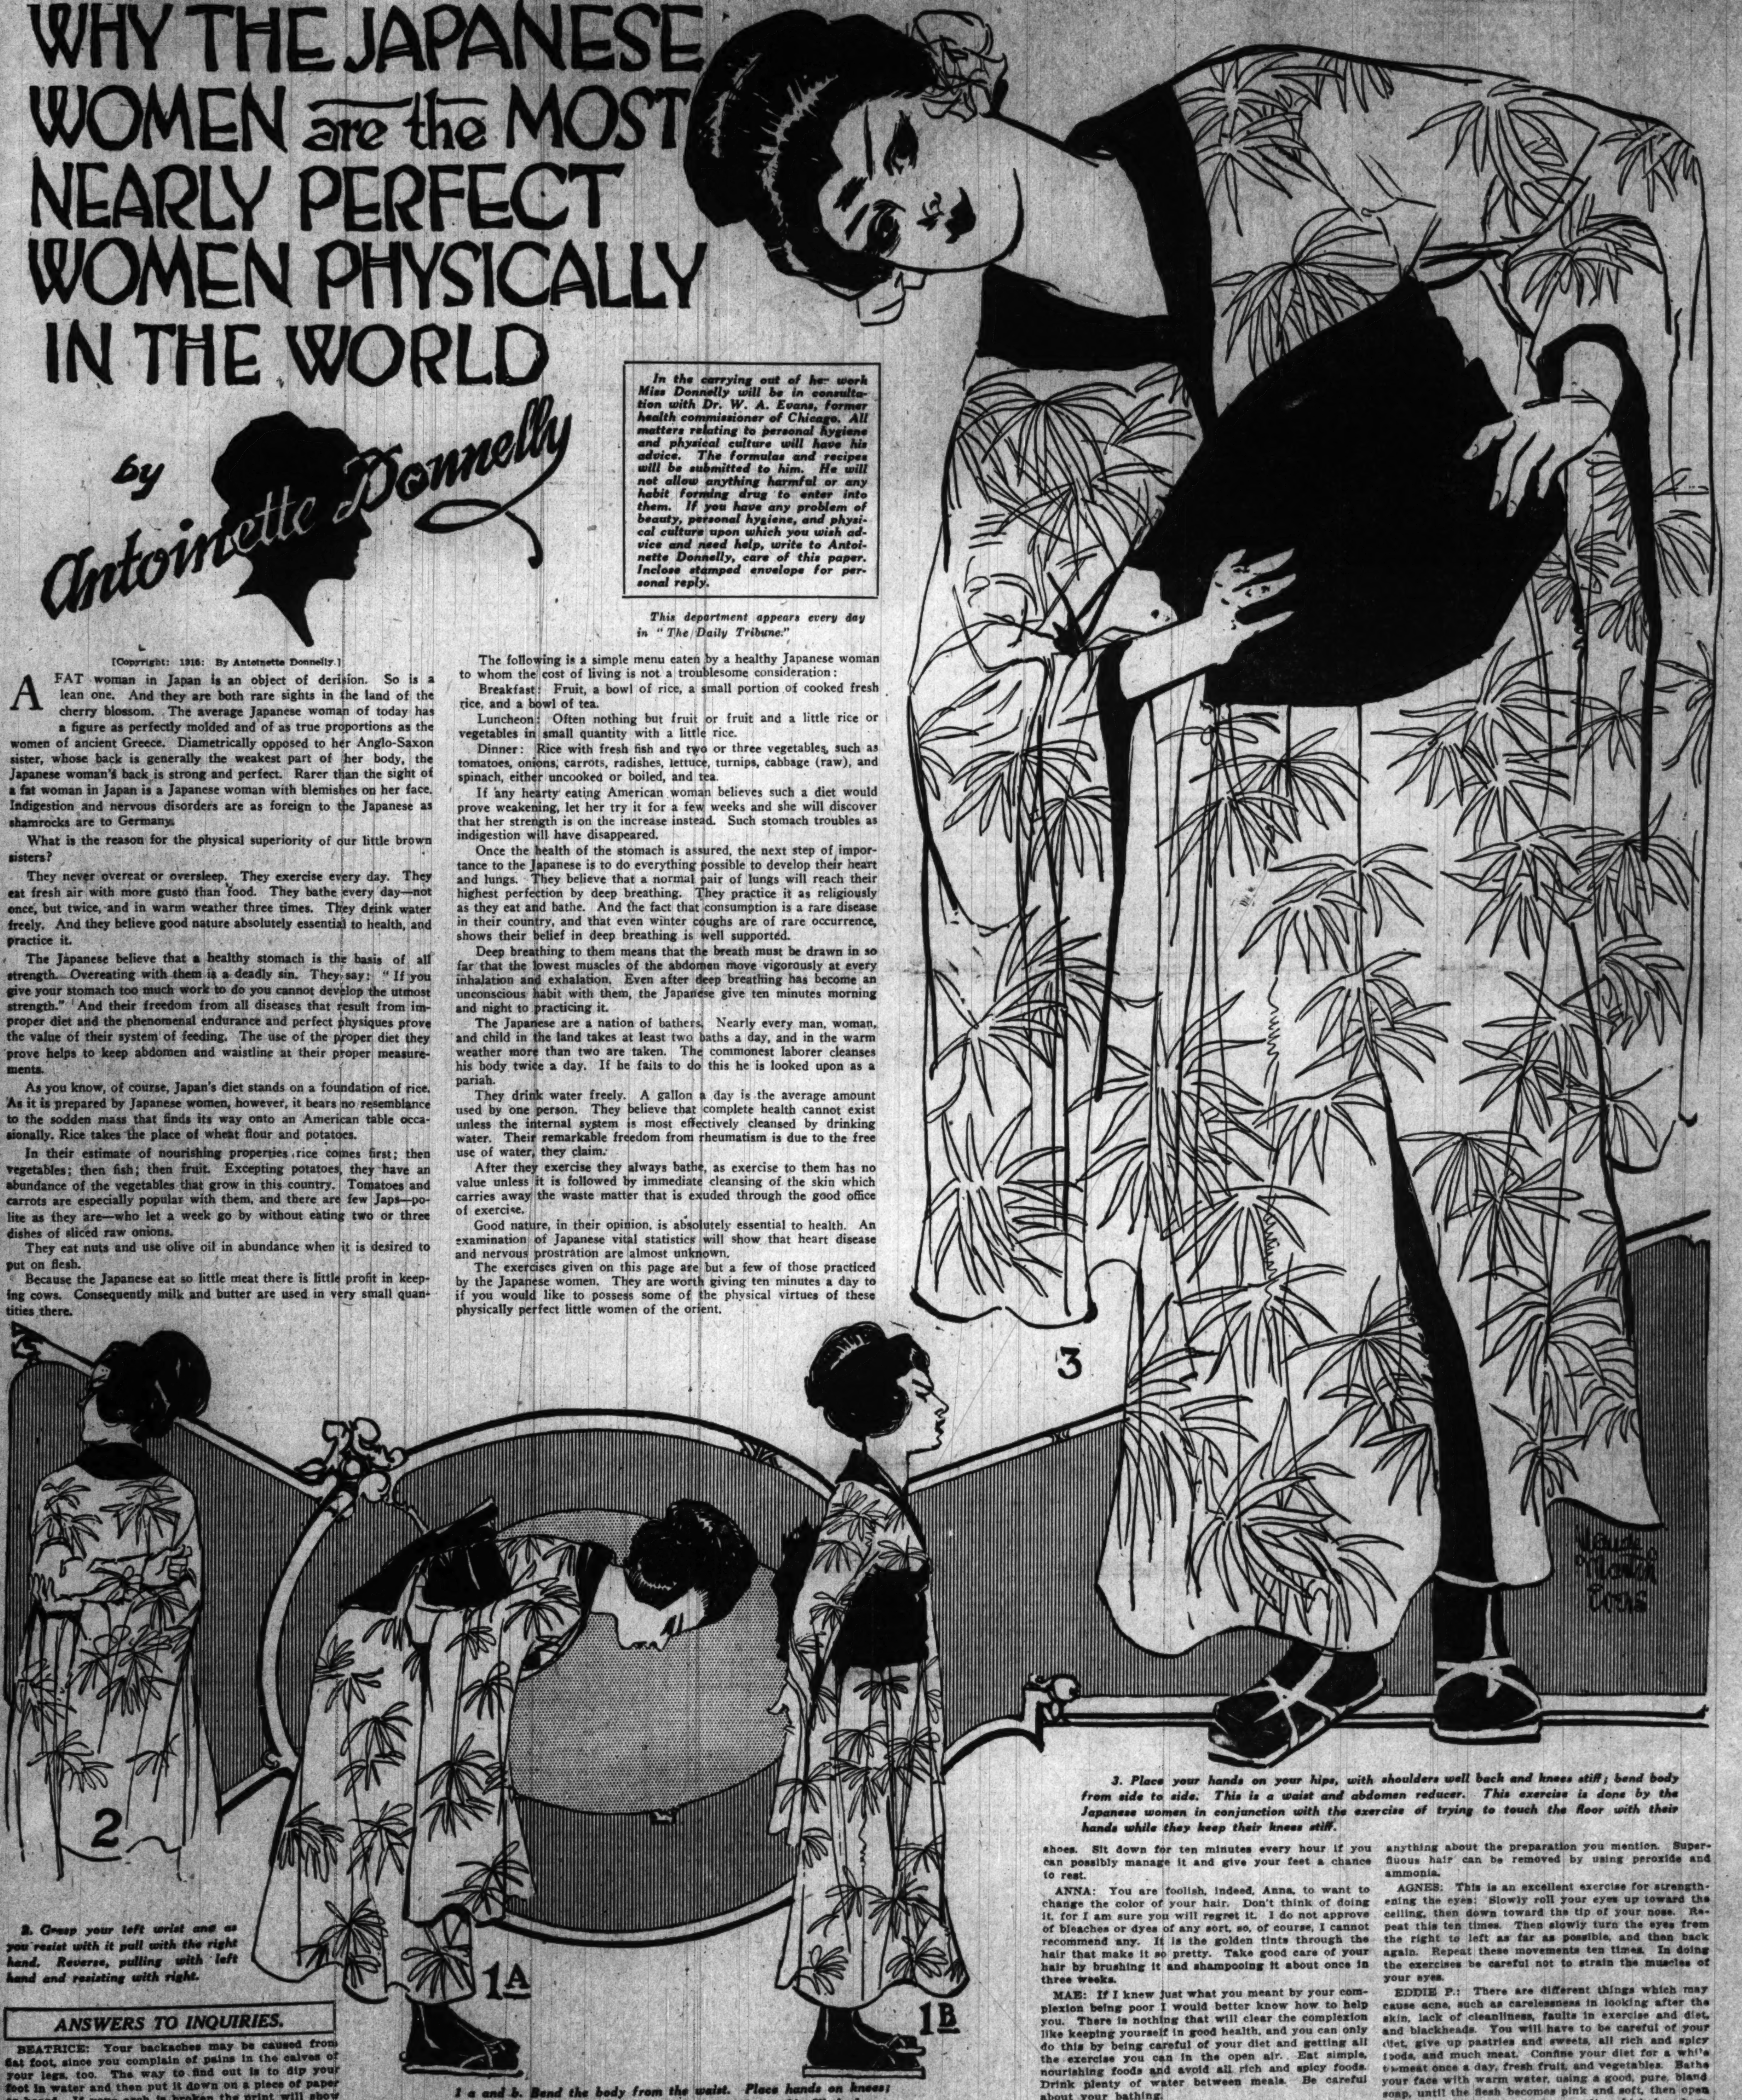
WHY THE JAPANESE WOMEN are the MOST NEARLY PERFECT WOMEN PHYSICALLY IN THE WORLD

by Antoinette Donnelly



[Copyright: 1915: By Antoinette Donnelly.]

A FAT woman in Japan is an object of derision. So is a lean one. And they are both rare sights in the land of the cherry blossom. The average Japanese woman of today has a figure as perfectly molded and of as true proportions as the women of ancient Greece. Diametrically opposed to her Anglo-Saxon sister, whose back is generally the weakest part of her body, the Japanese woman's back is strong and perfect. Rarer than the sight of a fat woman in Japan is a Japanese woman with blemishes on her face. Indigestion and nervous disorders are as foreign to the Japanese as shamrocks are to Germany.

What is the reason for the physical superiority of our little brown sisters?

They never overeat or oversleep. They exercise every day. They eat fresh air with more gusto than food. They bathe every day—not once, but twice, and in warm weather three times. They drink water freely. And they believe good nature absolutely essential to health, and practice it.

The Japanese believe that a healthy stomach is the basis of all strength. Overeating with them is a deadly sin. They say: "If you give your stomach too much work to do you cannot develop the utmost strength." And their freedom from all diseases that result from improper diet and the phenomenal endurance and perfect physiques prove the value of their system of feeding. The use of the proper diet they prove helps to keep abdomen and waistline at their proper measurements.

As you know, of course, Japan's diet stands on a foundation of rice. As it is prepared by Japanese women, however, it bears no resemblance to the sodden mass that finds its way onto an American table occasionally. Rice takes the place of wheat flour and potatoes.

In their estimate of nourishing properties rice comes first; then vegetables; then fish; then fruit. Excepting potatoes, they have an abundance of the vegetables that grow in this country. Tomatoes and carrots are especially popular with them, and there are few Japs—polite as they are—who let a week go by without eating two or three dishes of sliced raw onions.

They eat nuts and use olive oil in abundance when it is desired to put on flesh.

Because the Japanese eat so little meat there is little profit in keeping cows. Consequently milk and butter are used in very small quantities there.

In the carrying out of her work Miss Donnelly will be in consultation with Dr. W. A. Evans, former health commissioner of Chicago. All matters relating to personal hygiene and physical culture will have his advice. The formulas and recipes will be submitted to him. He will not allow anything harmful or any habit forming drug to enter into them. If you have any problem of beauty, personal hygiene, and physical culture upon which you wish advice and need help, write to Antoinette Donnelly, care of this paper. Inclose stamped envelope for personal reply.

The following is a simple menu eaten by a healthy Japanese woman to whom the cost of living is not a troublesome consideration:

Luncheon: Often nothing but fruit or fruit and a little rice or vegetables in small quantity with a little rice.

Dinner: Rice with fresh fish and two or three vegetables, such as tomatoes, onions, carrots, radishes, lettuce, turnips, cabbage (raw), and spinach, either uncooked or boiled, and tea.

If any hearty eating American woman believes such a diet would prove weakening, let her try it for a few weeks and she will discover that her strength is on the increase instead. Such stomach troubles as indigestion will have disappeared.

Once the health of the stomach is assured, the next step of importance to the Japanese is to do everything possible to develop their heart and lungs. They believe that a normal pair of lungs will reach their highest perfection by deep breathing. They practice it as religiously as they eat and bathe. And the fact that consumption is a rare disease in their country, and that even winter coughs are of rare occurrence, shows their belief in deep breathing is well supported.

Deep breathing to them means that the breath must be drawn in so far that the lowest muscles of the abdomen move vigorously at every inhalation and exhalation. Even after deep breathing has become an unconscious habit with them, the Japanese give ten minutes morning and night to practicing it.

The Japanese are a nation of bathers. Nearly every man, woman, and child in the land takes at least two baths a day, and in the warm weather more than two are taken. The commonest laborer cleanses his body twice a day. If he fails to do this he is looked upon as a pariah.

They drink water freely. A gallon a day is the average amount used by one person. They believe that complete health cannot exist unless the internal system is most effectively cleansed by drinking water. Their remarkable freedom from rheumatism is due to the free use of water, they claim.

After they exercise they always bathe, as exercise to them has no value unless it is followed by immediate cleansing of the skin which carries away the waste matter that is exuded through the good office of exercise.

Good nature, in their opinion, is absolutely essential to health. An examination of Japanese vital statistics will show that heart disease and nervous prostration are almost unknown.

The exercises given on this page are but a few of those practiced by the Japanese women. They are worth giving ten minutes a day to if you would like to possess some of the physical virtues of these physically perfect little women of the orient.

2. Grasp your left wrist and as you resist with it pull with the right hand. Reverse, pulling with left hand and resisting with right.

1 a and b. Bend the body from the waist. Place hands on knees; draw in a long, deep breath through your nostrils, thoroughly fill the lungs, and while holding the breath assume a standing position as in 1 b and throw the chest well out, then blow the breath out slowly, as if blowing it through a fine tube. Repeat ten times morning and night. The breaths must be long and deep.

3. Place your hands on your hips, with shoulders well back and knees stiff; bend body from side to side. This is a waist and abdomen reducer. This exercise is done by the Japanese women in conjunction with the exercise of trying to touch the floor with their hands while they keep their knees stiff.

ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES.

BEATRICE: Your backaches may be caused from flat foot, since you complain of pains in the calves of your legs, too. The way to find out is to dip your foot in water and then put it down on a piece of paper or board. If your arch is broken the print will show the whole bottom of your foot. In a normal foot there is a big scoop at the inner side for the arch. A broken arch may be the result of ill fitting shoes, long standing, or walking with the toes turned out. Wear shoes with heels of from one inch to an inch and one-half. Laced shoes give more support than buttoned shoes. Sit down for ten minutes every hour if you can possibly manage it and give your feet a chance to rest.

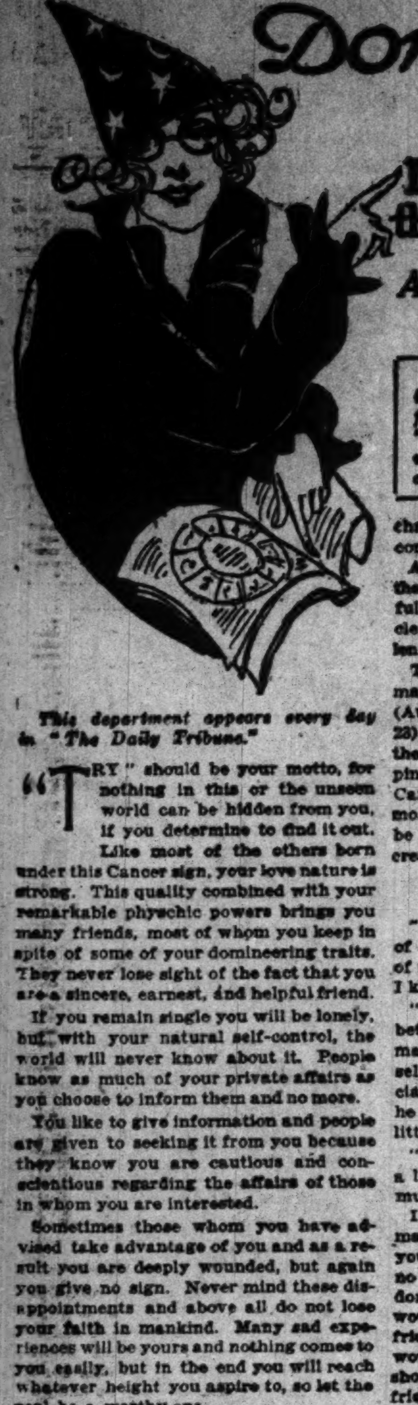
ANNA: You are foolish, indeed, Anna, to want to change the color of your hair. Don't think of doing it, for I am sure you will regret it. I do not approve of bleaches or dyes of any sort, so, of course, I cannot recommend any. It is the golden tints through the hair that make it so pretty. Take good care of your hair by brushing it and shampooing it about once in three weeks.

MAE: If I knew just what you meant by your complexion being poor I would better know how to help you. There is nothing that will clear the complexion like keeping yourself in good health, and you can only do this by being careful of your diet and getting all the exercise you can in the open air. Eat simple, nourishing foods and avoid all rich and spicy foods. Drink plenty of water between meals. Be careful about your bathing.

NAN: If your elbows are bony you can massage them with a good nourishing skin food. Place the cream in the palm of your hand and rub well into the elbow. In a few weeks a pretty rounded elbow will replace the ugly one. I am sorry, but I do not know anything about the preparation you mention. Superfluous hair can be removed by using peroxide and ammonia.

AGNES: This is an excellent exercise for strengthening the eyes: Slowly roll your eyes up toward the ceiling, then down toward the tip of your nose. Repeat this ten times. Then slowly turn the eyes from the right to left as far as possible, and then back again. Repeat these movements ten times. In doing the exercises be careful not to strain the muscles of your eyes.

EDDIE P.: There are different things which may cause acne, such as carelessness in looking after the skin, lack of cleanliness, faults in exercise and diet, and blackheads. You will have to be careful of your diet, give up pastries and sweets, all rich and spicy foods, and much meat. Confine your diet for a while to meat once a day, fresh fruit, and vegetables. Bathe your face with warm water, using a good, pure, bland soap, until the flesh becomes pink and soft, then open each little bump with a fine needle which has been sterilized by boiling and dipping into peroxide of hydrogen. Press out the little white substance and apply a drop of peroxide to the wound. In this way no scar would be left.



Doris Blake Says

If you were born this week you are,

Able to make friends and keep them.

Have you a perplexing love affair in which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care "The Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply send stamped and addressed envelope.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

"TRY" should be your motto, for nothing in this or the unseen world can be hidden from you, if you determine to find it out.

Like most of the others born under this Cancer sign, your love nature is strong. This quality combined with your remarkable physchic powers brings you many friends, most of whom you keep in spite of some of your domineering traits. They never lose sight of the fact that you are a sincere, earnest, and helpful friend.

If you remain single you will be lonely, but, with your natural self-control, the world will never know about it. People know as much of your private affairs as you choose to inform them and no more.

You like to give information and people are given to seeking it from you because they know you are cautious and conscientious regarding the affairs of those in whom you are interested.

Sometimes those whom you have advised take advantage of you and as a result you are deeply wounded, but again you give no sign. Never mind these disappointments and above all do not lose your faith in mankind. Many sad experiences will be yours and nothing comes to you easily, but in the end you will reach whatever height you aspire to, so let the goal be a worthy one.

You are able to command forces and powers which other men not only lack, but fear and dread. This is due to your deeply religious and mystical nature. Indeed, you may become a marked figure in the occult world.

If you were born on July 7 or 8 your kindly, sympathetic nature is easily offended. You are generous and charitable in your judgments of others, but, unfortunately, get but little of this in return. Take unto yourself more of the qualities of your prototype, the crab, and be persistent in holding on to a project begun, even if your plans do sometimes miscarry. You can make a success of anything you begin; the power is within you.

Those fortunates born on July 9 have the maternal instinct pronounced. With this splendid inheritance you are capable of untold heights. One thing sure, if you make the most of your talents you will be heard from. You have the qualities out of which martyrs are made and are therefore a natural reformer, capable of aiding the world to better conditions. Original in thought, fearless in investigation, able to pass through mental suffering quietly and uncomplainingly, think of these qualities within you! No wonder you can attain the heights.

You have a legal, imaginative mind, but if you practice law you will be most successful at office practice rather than court work. In any case your client could place the utmost confidence in your ability and integrity.

This same tender sympathy will make possible a good, conscientious physician, thoughtful, but determined. As such you would not follow any school and your intuitive powers would be largely drawn upon for your diagnosis.

In this, as in everything you do, your convictions are settled, and although you may listen patiently to advice, it does not change your opinion; such changes must come from within.

As is evident, people born in this part of the Cancer sign will be eminently successful as physicians; also as orators and clergymen. The women will make excellent teachers and nurses.

The Cancer man will find a congenial mate in Pisces (Feb. 20-March 21), Virgo (Aug. 24-Sept. 23), or Libra (Sept. 24-Oct. 23). Women must be careful in making the momentous decision, for it means happiness or disaster. However, Pisces or Cancer (June 22-July 22) are apt to prove most congenial mates. Cancer people will be fortunate when the moon is on the increase.

Wants a Mate.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a man of 28, of good habits. I can furnish the best of references, and have a steady position. I know but very few girls in the city.

"I would like to meet a good girl, a girl between 18 and 24, who would like to get married. I prefer a girl who has been self-supporting and who would appreciate a man that would give her the best he could on a $25 a week salary and a little saved.

"I am tired of living alone, and want a life mate. I would like to get in communication with some good girl."

I am very sorry that I cannot find a mate for you. I think, however, that if you kept your eyes open you would have no trouble in finding a nice girl. Why don't you tell your relatives that you would like to meet some of their young friends? Your business acquaintances would invite you to their homes if you showed that you were willing to make friends, and surely after you get acquainted with a few families you can confide in them that you are looking for a nice girl to give a home to, and they will know all sorts of girls to introduce you to.

Husband Keeps Summer Resort.

"My Dear Miss Blake: I am taking this opportunity to ask you freely about some worrisome little problems.

"My husband is, or will be, the manager of a summer hotel. I will apreciate your sincere advice as to how I shall conduct myself. This will be my first experience, although my husband has had this position for several years.

"I am 20 years old and still a bride. I am quite fond of all kinds of exercise. Shall I feel free to partake in any amusement I care to? Should I become friendly with any of the guests?

"I wish very much to be quite tactful in all my relations with this class of people—people of means and good standing. The resort is more or less secluded, catering to families who desire quiet and rest through the hot summer months. As you must have seen already, I am absolutely inexperienced in this sort of summer life.

"Naturally I wish to be 'well liked' and be friendly towards every one. Please give me your very best advice.

"Mrs. R. H."

Your husband will be a better guide for you than any one else. Ask him what you had better do and he will tell you, I am sure. Take all the exercise you wish to, and take part in all of the pleasures which the hotel offers, but don't impose your friendship upon the guests. If they wish to include you in their pleasures, accept graciously, but don't feel hurt if they don't. It will be better for you to be a little too reserved than to be accused of being forward.

Real Love Stories

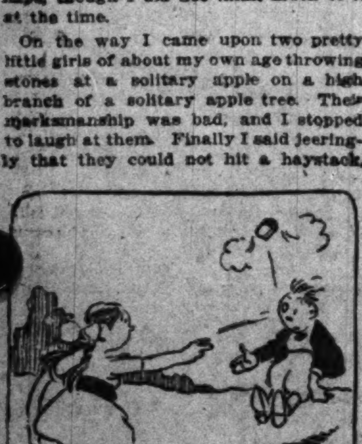
Her First and Last Patient.

I WAS raised on a farm in an out-of-the-way place, and one day when I was about 10 years old I went on an errand to the nearest town, about four miles away. It was the first time I had been allowed to go alone, and I was filled with the spirit of pride and adventure. I had an adventure, too, before I returned —the greatest in my life, perhaps, though I did not think much of it at the time.

On the way I came upon two pretty little girls of about my own age throwing stones at a solitary apple on a high branch of a solitary apple tree. Their marksmanship was bad, and I stopped to laugh at them. Finally I said jeeringly that they could not hit a haystack, whereupon one of them flared out and said she could hit something much smaller than a haystack. I dared her and she hit the mark.



The stone struck me over the right eye and inflicted an ugly wound. The girls then got scared and ran away. They went in the direction of the town, while I sought out a little running stream and started washing the wound.

After a while I looked up and saw the girl who hit me standing alone a short distance away watching me with a look of contrition on her face. I scowled at her without speaking and resumed bathing the wound. After a little she approached timidly to within a few feet of where I was kneeling and then when I turned and looked at her she said in a weakly voice: "Do you want to beat me?" I answered "No" sullenly and turned my head away in the haughtiest manner I could. Then she dropped on her knees beside me and began to cry. That softened me and I allowed her to knot her own hankerchief and mine together and bandage my wound.

Do you know a real love story—a romance in the life of a relative, acquaintance, or perhaps in your own life? If there has come within your experience of life a love story about which you've said, "That's stranger or more romantic than any story I have read," write it out and send it in at once. "The Tribune" will pay $5 for every real love story published. You need not mention names, and your name will be withheld if you wish. Manuscripts will not be returned. Address Doris Blake, "The Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

Then she escorted me back to the road, and when I started to go home she blushed and looked at me as if she wanted to kiss me. I went without the kiss, however, but when a quarter of a mile away I looked back I saw that she was still standing in the same place looking after me.

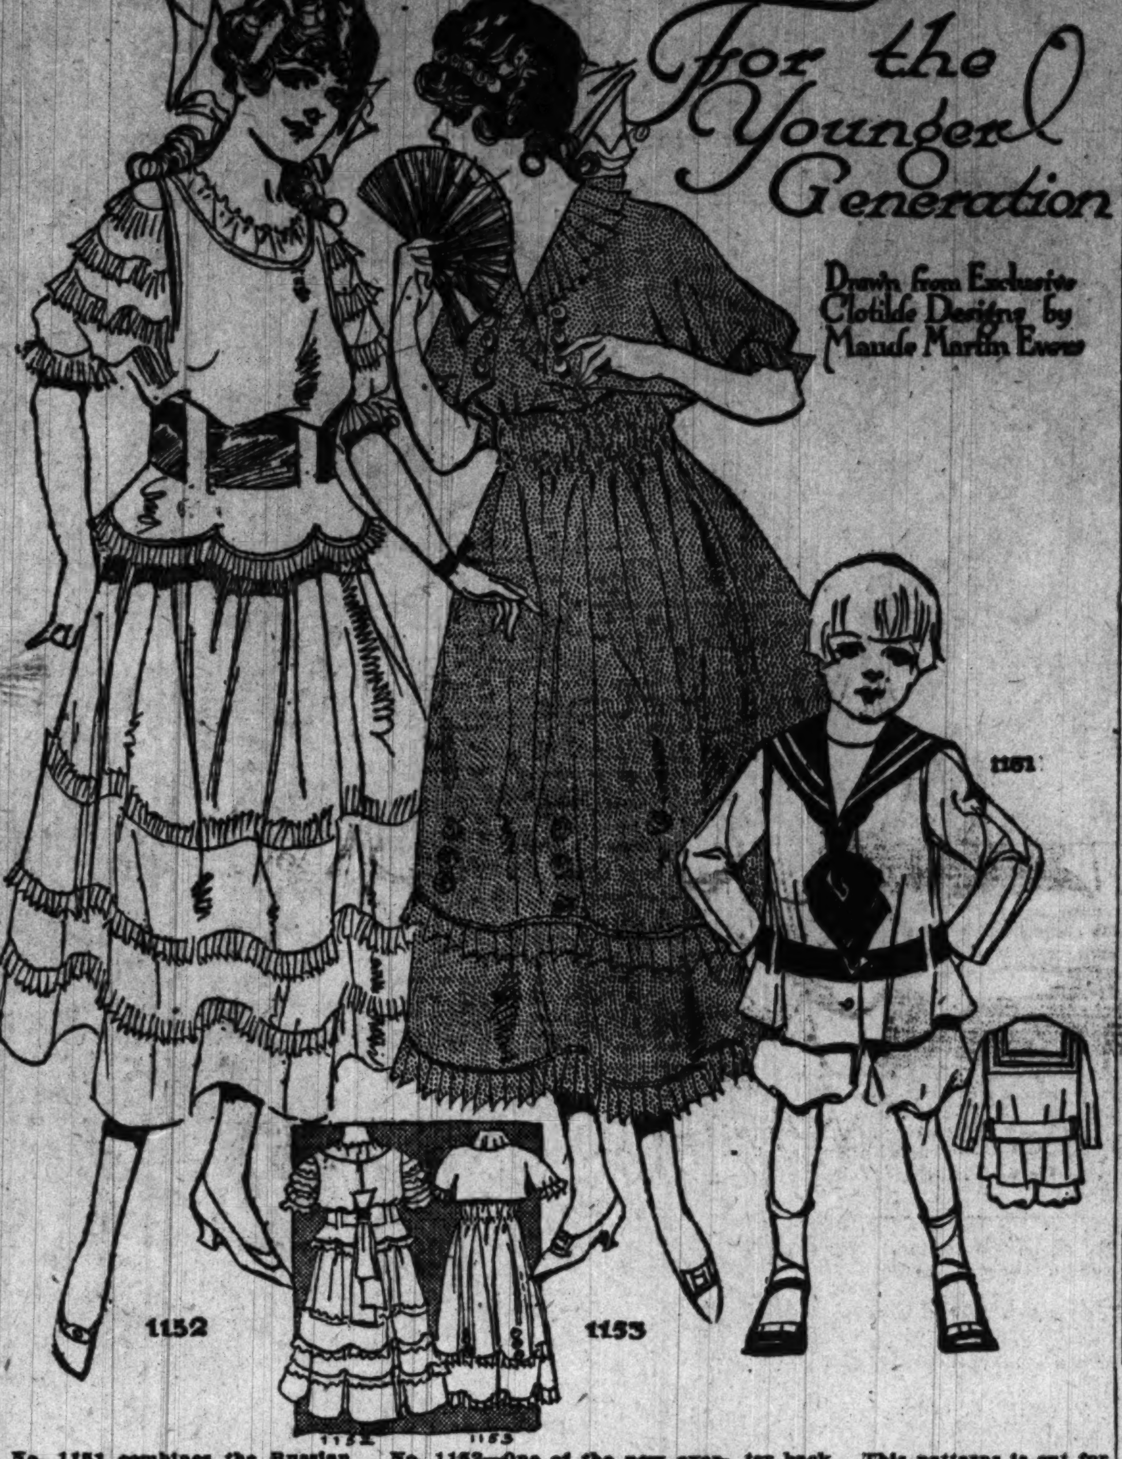
This happened in the old country, and a few years later I came to America. Time passed and I grew to be a man, but had never seen or heard of the girl from the day of the accident.

Just one year ago I was working in a factory here in Chicago and one day a falling piece of iron struck me in the forehead in exactly the same place I had been struck by the stone. There was a hospital with a doctor and staff of nurses attached to the place, and into this hospital I was taken for treatment. My wound proved to be only slight, however, so I was allowed to go home, but was required to call twice a day at the hospital to have my wound dressed.

It was the same nurse who dressed it every time, and after a bit we grew quite friendly, and one day I asked her how long she had been a nurse, and she replied: "Since I was 10 years old—at least at that time I treated a wound like this on my first patient—only that I had inflicted the wound myself."

She was the same girl, and later when I asked here if she would take over the job for life and let her first patient be her last she didn't say nay. S. C.

Patterns by Clotilde



For the Younger Generation

No. 1151 combines the Russian and the middy blouses for the small boy. Duck, cotton, gabardine, linen crash, or galatea will make up appropriately, while the sailor collar may be indigo or scarlet twill. The sailor cravat, however, is more usually a black or a navy blue Windsor tie, a separate affair. The little trousers are of the full cut, caught with an elastic band at the knee. Pattern 1151 may be had in 2, 4, and 6 year sizes.

No. 1152—One of the new overblouse dresses is here shown, worn with a separate guimpe, to which the sleeves are attached. Any of the modish materials—plain organdie, linen, cotton crepe, pique, crepe de chine, pongee, or shantung—will develop well in this design. The stiff plaited little quillings may be cut either on the straight line of the goods or on the bias, as desired. Both blouse and skirt fasten at the center back. This patterns is cut for girls in 12 and 14 year size only.

No. 1153—Misses and small women will find this an excellent design for almost any of the sheer summer time materials. Model is made of crepe de chine, which lends itself well to shirrings. Pattern consists of bolero and skirt, the underblouse depicted being a separate garment not provided for in the pattern. May be ordered in the 16 and 18 year sizes only.

PICTURESQUE, and at the same time decidedly practical, are the new designs intended for the younger generation, three of which are pictured above. It is interesting to note how the prevailing lines in adult garments repeat themselves in the juvenile editions, and how cleverly the designers maintain all of that charming simplicity—the hall mark of good taste where the small folk are concerned—while at the same time keeping the trend of the current modes plainly in view.

The full skirt, the bolero, the tiny ruffings and quillings, and ruchings and shirrings that decorate their mothers' and elder sisters' frocks are reproduced in miniature for the little maid. Where such trimmings are concerned there is oftentimes danger of overdoing the thing, applying those decorative touches in such abundant manner as to give the impression that the small frock has been made over from some grown person's gown, and so ruining the air of simplicity that is—or should be—the great attraction in juvenile garb.

A famous French designer, who confines her talents entirely to modes for the younger generation, was asked once upon a time how it was that she cut such clever patterns for the little folks.

"I cut them with a pair of scissors and artistic discrimination," she replied.

While we all of us may have the pair of scissors at any time, the attainment of an artistic discrimination is something that cannot always be achieved in a morning's work.

And just the same artistic discrimination must be applied where the small boy's clothes are concerned. While it is essential that they shall present a "manly" appearance—for every little son fondly wishes to be the replica of his dad in everything and in clothes most of all—the elements of both the practical and the picturesque are by no means lacking.

A clever combination of the best points in both the sailor and the Russian blouses is presented in the pattern illustrated above. The broad shouldered effect which the sailor collar gives and the long straight lines of the Russian blouse grant to the wearer the effect of both height and breadth. For warm days the shield—which is here depicted without the usual "choker" neckband—may be omitted and the fad of the V neck extended to include the boy of the family as well as his sisters. Full bloomer trousers, caught with an elastic at the knee, complete the costume.

Pinafore or bib effects are among the newest points that bid for favor, and more often than not the overblouse, which we have had with us now for a little while, takes on this newer semblance. How cleverly it is handled in the little girl's frock is apparent at a glance, and since it brings back the vogue of the separate guimpe it is a fashion that will be welcomed by many mothers.

The guimpe or underblouse has the sleeves attached, and may be fashioned of net, sheer lawn, organdie, nainsook, or any of the approved lingerie materials. The outer dress is made up in a rose colored pongee, the stiff little quillings—they are knife plaited—applied with a piped heading on the blouse part, the edge being cut into a long, wavy scalloped line, while on the skirt they are just applied with machine stitching on the extreme upper edge, without any piping. The broad belt of a deeper shade of rose colored velvet ribbon is passed through straps of pongee and fastens with a stiff bow and short ends in the back.

The lines of the bolero are assuredly a gracious help to the sometimes awkward angles of the immature figure of the school girl. In the most approved lines it is as full as well may be below the shoulders, the smooth fit at that point being about the only items insisted upon. Standing well out from the figure the design illustrated will commend itself either as an extra garment or as an essential part of the frock with which it is worn.

In this instance a pale green crêpe de chine made both the bolero and skirt, the latter having a deep belt over which the skirt is shirred. The blouse worn beneath is a separate affair and is not included in the pattern, although the pretty design may be as well worn without a blouse, if there is a guimpe beneath. The shirred skirt shows two scant little ruffles posed above the deep hem, and little tight close roses made of chiffon add a dainty touch.

How I Helped My Hair.

Massage Every Night.

I massage my scalp each night. I commence at the base of the scalp, using the fingers of both hands with a rotary motion, pressing just hard enough to move the skin, and work on up to the crown. This brings the blood to the roots, causing a tingling sensation. The night before I wash my hair I massage into the roots all the warm olive oil that the scalp will absorb and wrap my head in a towel for the night. I shampoo the hair every two weeks, using a weak solution of a mild soap, and never use hot tongs, preferring the kid curlers. Mrs. R. S.

Sassafras Makes Fluffy.

About two hours before I wash my hair I rub oil of sassafras into the roots. I find this makes the hair fluffy, and also prevents it from falling out. A. H.

Rubs with Almond Juice.

To have beautiful long hair every evening before going to bed brush the hair good with about 150 strokes, then massage into the scalp and roots a little almond juice on the tips of the fingers, then braid loosely. This almond oil can be had at any drug store. If the hair is oily rub the scalp with cornmeal, then wash in soft water with a good soap. B. K.

* *

Tonic Applied with Toothbrush.

I have had frequent serious illnesses for years and in consequences have been greatly troubled with my hair falling out. However, my hair remains heavy and in good condition, due, I consider, to the simple application of brandy and salt, to which I sometimes add a few pinches of quinine. My method is to pour a small quantity of brandy in a sauce dish, dissolve in it a teaspoon of salt, and add the quinine. I part the hair carefully over the entire head and apply mixture with an old tooth brush. I usually apply the remedy every other day for two weeks and longer if necessary. F. K.

How do you keep your hair from falling out? By brushing, clipping, and singeing? How often do you do this? Do you clip and singe your hair within a certain phase of the moon? What shampoo and hair tonic (other than proprietary articles) have you found best? Do you massage your scalp and how? Do you know a way to wave your hair without the use of curling irons? Have you found something to make your eyebrows and eyelashes grow? "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on "How I Have Helped My Hair." Punishment for Wrongdoing.

I know my plan of punishment works well in the present, and my theory is that it will fit my children for future good citizenship. No matter how a disobedience angers me, I never show any vexation or notice the bad action particularly. Then the next time the rest of us have a treat, as a nickel show, car ride, ice cream, etc., I say, "Now Johnny [or Alice], yesterday [or this morning or last week, as the case may be], you did this [or that] wrong thing, so, of course, you cannot share in our treat." This method teaches that all wrongdoing brings its own inevitable punishment. R. G. B.

Fussiness About Eating.

My mother had a most effective method of curing her children of being fussy about eating. Whenever the ugly frowns would come to our faces and we would begin to complain about the food which had been set before us mother would dismiss us from the table and hungry we would have to remain. So it came about that we each learned to eat many a dish which we had at first had aversion to, and all of that embarrassing complaint, so characteristic of American children at meals, was eliminated from mother's table. And now we are grateful for this early training, as it makes a varied diet possible to us. We are never heard to say, "O, I don't like this," or "I can't eat that." E. A. B.

Fairy Story of Piano Keys.

My son, when 4 years old, was fond of the piano, and so I made the learning of the keys attractive by saying they were houses, the white ones occupied by fairies and the black ones by goblins. When he rang the bell of fairy A's house he remembered her house as being on the right side of the middle goblin house and there being eight exactly alike. He learned the fairies travel on two motor roads [staffs] with a banner for each, the Treble and Bass roads. We call the black notes coconuts and the white ones tulips. The scale is a procession. It is an inexhaustible kingdom and a source of pleasure to us both. W. W.

Does Wonders for Baby's Heath.

The following plan given to me by a trained nurse will do wonders for the health of a baby and will do more than anything I know of to correct constipation, which particularly affects bottle fed babies.

Have a small two ounce bottle and rubber nipple and from this give the baby warm water between every feeding. Don't be satisfied with giving a teaspoonful or so a day and insist on the nurse following this plan from the first day.

If the child suffers at any time from colic give the water as warm as you could drink it. This will usually move the gas at once; in a severe case give a warm enema.

The nursing mother can do much to correct constipation in herself by the addition of bran bread to her diet. This is much better for herself and baby than the use of cathartics. Mrs. H. J. G.

* *

Prevents Spasms in Teething.

As my treatment has proved so good to prevent spasms in teething children, I am going to pass it on.

Take two squares of flannel, large enough to reach from arm to arm, and from throat over abdomen. Sprinkle quinine between and quilt together. Every third morning dampen with pure alcohol and keep on baby's breast until through teething. As one becomes soiled make a new one.

I hope this may help some mother as much as it has me. Mrs. C. C.

If you have had a valuable experience in the matter of child discipline, child diet, the physical or mental development of your child, in the correction of bad habits, both mental and physical, in the care of the baby's skin, hair or any other part of the child's anatomy, nursery furnishings, baby's bath, teething difficulties, effective emergency remedies, children's clothing, games and friendships, manners and punishments, write them in to Mothers' society, care of "The Chicago Tribune." For every letter printed "The Tribune" will pay $1. Write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned.

When Baby Is Teething.

During the baby's first summer when teething and his food does not stay down if baby is given the beaten white of an egg with a pinch of sugar mixed in it he will gain rapidly and be able to keep his food on his stomach. L. B. M.

Records the Good Deeds.

I have bought my young daughter a prettily ornamented notebook, in which she enters each day every kind and considerate act that she does. At night she brings me the book and we talk it over together. Her thoughtfulness for others and her power to think things out for herself and to gain the viewpoint of others has developed to a remarkable degree since we began this little game. Mrs. A. W. C.

The GARDENER AT WORK

The Garden Editor will give expert advice on planning gardens, organizing garden clubs, and planting flowers, vegetables, or shrubs. Address The Garden Editor, "The Tribune."

WHAT TO SEE IN GARDENS.

BLOSSOMING shrubs include many more species in private and public grounds than they did a decade ago. The viburnams are at their best in all the parks and suburban ways this week. The spireas, which began flowering in May, with the snow garland and the bridal wreath, are showing the opulifolia, or ninebark, and the golden spirea today. The low growing Anthony Waterrer, with deep rose colored bloom, is seen in the parks south, west, and north. Some call it "Meadow Sweet," a popular title for many flowers.

The spirea is the Greek name for a plant used for garlands, and Chicago spireas have lived up to all that was expected of them this season. Among the perennials in the Shakspeare garden in Lincoln park are snowy little spireas of a lovely type.

Sweet Williams, the dianthus barbatus, call this their season. Rich reds and pinks and dainty fringes distinguish the clumps of bloom flourishing in the borders on the edge of the rose garden on the Wooded island in Jackson park. The rose garden displays its American Beauties, Frau Karl Druschki, and Ulrich Brunner among the prolific bloomers. The rose garden in Humboldt park and that at Lincoln park are the center of interest in the high tide of summer.

The hardy garden lilies are in bud. Pyrethrums seem to show finer colors this season; the pentstemons, pansies, and hardy annuals are coming on. Every day in July has a surprise. Catalpa season benefited by the rains. The richly leaved trees are great bouquets of bloom, and the bees are making honey when the sun shines.

In the Parks.

No visitor or sightseeing citizen should miss the conservatories at Garfield park. Contrary to the idea that plants worth seeing are all out of doors in July, it is a fact that the greenhouses are in splendid condition just now. Certain plants must live under glass in this latitude and the selection at Garfield park, at Lincoln and Washington parks is varied and handsome.

The Garfield park conservatories are among the finest in the country. Enter the stately doorway leading to the palm house with its statuary, vases, pools of water, and charming vista to the ferny dell beyond. Tall eucalyptus, rubber, and coffee, and bread fruit trees, banana palms, and strange leaved curiosities from the tropics picture the ideal jungle. The fern house presents a miniature landscape. Its lawns are fresh and green with the creeping lycopodium, maiden hair spreads its delicate branches over an artificial spring, the fern trees of a long ago age are over head, and on all sides are native and rare species unfolding in curious ways.

In the exhibition house at the north, a rich display of flowering plants makes a show eevn in July. Beyond is the conifer house with Christmas trees of every land, the subtropical eergvreens, cedars of Lebanon, Norway pines, monkey-puzzle trees, umbrella pines, and many native sorts from the American mountains pleasant to meet with their names on labels.

The economic plants are next door—orange, lemon, pepper, pomegranate, coco trees, cactus, edible and medicinal plants wonderful to discover. The New Holland house filled with curious crotons and orchids, and the stove house of mysterious plants from the hottest tropics are all free to the public to enjoy.

Replies to Queries.

Mrs. M. E. D.: Make a slanting cut across a branch of your geranium. Let the slip be about four inches long. Prepare a well drained pot of soil and plant your cutting an inch or two deep. Let some leaves remain on the cutting. Do it now.

J. A. Barclay: Cucumbers like a rich quick soil. If your trouble is due to pests consult your neighbor gardeners. Cucumber pests are many. For anthracnose or for wilt use Bordeaux mixture and rotate crops. For beetles use pyrethrum, hellebore, or tobacco powder, and for plant lice spray with tobacco water.

A. F., Valparaiso, Ind.: Pick your calliopsis and larkspur and you will extend the blooming season. Under fair conditions you should have flowers from them until frost.

Miss M. G., Drexel boulevard: It is not too late to buy plants for the strip you wish to garden. Sow phlox drummondi and nasturtiums, having made the soil fine with hoe and rake. Study the flower beds on Drexel and in Washington park.

Mrs. A. E., Normal boulevard: Dust the outside leaves with tobacco dust. You have to pick many caterpillars by hand. It is safe to use insectides on salad plants because the rain washes them off and cooks throw away the outside leaves. Continue spraying the roses. The kerosene emulsion did not hurt them. Black leaf spot is a common disease. Spray with Bordeaux mixture.

BIRD LOVER—Wrens as well as robins destroy insect pests. By planting the wild blackberry, the European bird cherry, or the mountain ash as an ornamental tree or shrub the birds will be attracted and stop and nest in the yard.

FIELD ROVER: The wild flowers in season are the blue lupines found in the dunes of the southeast, painted cup, puccoon flowers, Indian clover [yellow and white], Queen Anne's lace, wild iris, yellow mustard, prairie roses, mertensia, Grass of Parnassus, dodecatheons or shooting stars, milkweed and the small flowers of the grass and the woods.

AUDUBON MEMBER: Birds prefer a thick foliage. The writer has known of a clump of bush honeysuckles on the north side in which catbirds have nested year after year. The mock orange is popular among shrub nesting birds. If no cats are around the birds prefer the shrubbery to low trees. Wrens prefer ledges above the doors or on the porch or boxes.

MRS. K.: There is no reason why a kitchen window box should differ from any other. All the ordinary annuals will get along if watered. The balsam, or lady slipper, needs rich soil, sun, and water, and will do well in a box, but better in a border where a stocky plant is needed.

PEONY LOVER: A grower says that if a quantity of red pepper is shaken over the crown of peonies coming up the ants will keep away. Another suggests a wren box over the peony border. Wrens hunt ants. A third says that toads in the lot will rout the ant army.

My Most Embarassing Moment.

Performed with Wet Towel.

The office boy had been playing pranks on the stenographers all afternoon, and I planned to have "sweet revenge," so, armed with a wet towel, I lay in wait just inside the door for his return. Finally I heard footsteps approaching, and, all ready for the onslaught, I slapped the wet towel—right in the face of the boss! Explanations were in order, but difficult to produce. Miss F. P.

Fell Through Skylight.

The most embarrassing moment of my life was this: Our house was built with a flat roof. The room underneath, lighted by a large skylight, was my brother's "den." On the roof we were growing flowers and using it for various purposes. One evening my brother was entertaining some young gentlemen friends, among them one who had paid me some attention. I wished greatly to make a good impression, as I liked him better than any one of my young gentlemen acquaintances. On this particular evening I went to the roof and was stepping very carefully about, when my foot slipped and I went crashing through the glass to my waist. There was a moment of sudden silence below, then exclamations of "Great Scot!" Good heavens!" "What is that?" etc. I dared not move for fear of a worse calamity. My brother, surmising the situation, came to my relief—and with him was the particular friend whom I had hoped to impress. Mrs. H. A. M.

He Passed Her Paper.

I had fallen into the habit of reading the headlines on my neighbor's paper, while riding on the crowded street cars. One morning I became so engrossed in an article that I leaned forward to read all there was; suddenly the owner (a total stranger) passed the paper over to me, and my fellow passengers laughed. I left the car at the next station. W. M. I.

They Tittered All Around.

I had worn my new spring hat for the first time when I attended a theater. It was one of those chick little hats that sits high on the head. When the performance started I removed my hat.

About five minutes later my friend turned to me to make some remark about the play. He didn't finish what he had to say, but looked at me with astonishment and said: "What's that on your head?"

Well, to my surprise, it was a wad of tissue paper. I had put into my hat to make it sit higher. The paper had caught on a hairpin and there I sat five whole minutes with a big wad of paper right on the top of my head. L. D.

HAIR ON FACE NECK AND ARMS WHAT CAUSES IT

Nature does not produce coarse stubborn growths of superfluous hair. They are caused by the unwise use of so-called hair removers.

The only way to gain control of such growths is to devitalize them. It is impossible to accomplish this result with pastes and rub-on preparations because they only remove hair from the surface of the skin. DeMiracle, the original liquid depilatory, devitalizes hair by attacking it under the skin as well as on the skin.

Imitations of DeMiracle are as worthless as pastes and rub-on preparations because they lack certain ingredients that DeMiracle alone contains which give it the power to rob hair of its vitality—its life sustaining force.

Insist on the genuine DeMiracle and you will get the original liquid hair remover. Others are worthless imitations—refuse them.

DeMiracle is sold at all good stores, including the Public Drug Co. and Buck & Rayner's five stores. The truth about the treatment of superfluous hair mailed in plain sealed envelope on request. De Miracle Chemical Co., Dept. C, Park Ave. and 129th St., New York.—Advertisement.

A Little Lesson in Courtesy.

THE saleswomen in the shops, we all know, are extremely busy people. They seldom find time hanging heavily on their hands. Their time is well occupied and there is little opportunity for gossiping and visiting. Yet from the complaints one hears now and then in the stores from impatient women customers one would think they were women of leisure who were annoyed when a customer approached their counter.

One day I was standing at a counter when a woman came up and interrupted a saleswoman who was taking care of another customer and asked her the price of an article on the counter. The girl answered her, and when the woman picked up other articles and asked about them the girl said: "In just a moment; when I am through with this customer I will wait on you."

The woman paid no attention to this. She calmly went on asking questions, and again the girl had to ask her to wait until she was free to take care of her. This time the woman became angry at being asked to wait even for a minute and proceeded to reprimand the girl in a loud tone of voice. After telling the girl what she thought of her ability as a saleswoman she turned to the other customers and complained of the girl to them, asking them if they did not agree that the girl was impertinent.

This was all extremely unpleasant for the girl, who went on making out the check for the woman she was waiting on, and although she seemed to be paying no attention to the tirade, her cheeks flushed scarlet and the women near knew that it was terribly embarrassing for her.

When she was ready to take care of the impatient woman she turned to her and politely asked her what she wished, and the woman snapped back at her: "I wish nothing from you. I would not let you wait on me now. I will get some other saleswoman or go elsewhere. I never have received such discourteous treatment and shall certainly report the matter to the head of this department."

Of course the girl could do or say nothing to appease the woman and just had to wait on some one else and was so disturbed by the disagreeable incident that it was only with difficulty she could answer questions that were put to her. The other women who witnessed the unpleasant little scene were so sorry for the girl that they made it a point to comfort her and tell her not to mind.

While she knew she had done nothing for which she could be blamed by the superintendent, yet she devoutly hoped the woman would not carry out her threat, as it would mean that she would be summoned to the superintendent's office and would have to give an explanation. She was afraid that the woman would not scruple to exaggerate and might succeed in convincing the superintendent that she had cause for complaint and that it would be difficult to make him believe the woman would deliberately try to have the girl discharged for no reason at all.

Fortunately for the girl, however, the floor walker was near enough to witness the incident and hurried to the superintendent's office to forestall the woman and later told the girl she had no cause for worry about the matter.

I am sure that the other women who were standing at the counter made a firm resolution to be more patient and considerate of saleswomen in the future and hoped they never would so far forget themselves as to create a scene like that. I know that I did.

ETIQUETTE

by ELIZABETH VAN RENSSELAER

Any question on etiquette will be answered if you write to Elizabeth Van Rensselaer, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply inclose a stamped, addressed envelope. Please write on one side of the paper only.

IT is a matter for congratulation that the custom of motoring bareheaded is gradually losing vogue. Especially for women is it an undesirable and pernicious fashion. Aside from the fact that it is most injurious for complexion and hair, it is decidedly inelegant and the opposite of chic. As the motoring season is upon us, I urge all women motorists, young or less young, to be sure to provide themselves with smart, close head coverings and veils, so that, as they speed through the land, they shall not look like the furies or banshees or other disheveled wild women.

MARY W.: You ask what clothes to take and what to do in being one of a summer house party in Wisconsin. The most useful costume for you will be an outing suit, one suitable for golf, tennis, picnics, walks, etc., with an ample supply of simple, pretty blouses. A dainty afternoon dress of some summer silk, a thin dress (if you can afford it, what is called a lingerie gown), and two or three pretty evening dresses will be the most necessary features of your wardrobe. Add to this one or two kimonos, a serviceable coat like a raglan cloak, warm and weatherproof, for motoring, some white shoes, evening slippers, tan shoes, and two or three hats, and you will be outwardly ready. If possible, take enough underwear so that you do not need to have any laundering done until you get home. It is often hard in country places to find a good laundress. As for what to do as a guest, the principal thing is to be scrupulously prompt at meals and to arise in the morning when the rest of the household does. Otherwise try to fall in with the plans of the rest of the party, and be sure to write home to your family. Do not forget home ties when you are having a good time.

Tactless Remark I Never Forgot.

It Was His Walk.

I was teaching a play to some amateurs and one of the young men, who was extremely bashful and sensitive, was taking a comedy part which called for girlish actions.

After one of the rehearsals I remarked, before all the players, "Mr. M., that walk is fine. You look just like a duck waddling across the stage."

The next day, walking back of Mr. M. on the street, I realized he had not been acting; it was his natural walk. Then I remembered his embarrassment on receiving my well meant compliment on his acting.

This Made 'Em Wince.

Mrs. Vincent von Broridge had given an elegant luncheon. One of the guests in bidding her good-by told her what a charming affair it had been and how she had enjoyed it. Had Wide Set Eyes.

My eyes are set very wide apart. I had never thought very much about it until one day a young man said to me that those people whose eyes are wide apart are supposed to possess fine memory and strong reasoning powers. Naturally I was very much pleased. My joy was short lived, however, for a girl friend chimed in: "I've often noticed that, and have wished I could be as bright as she looks to be."

My "Puppy" Love Affair.

She Saw Him Feeding.

At 16 I held my first stenographic position in the office of a lecture bureau, where I constantly met famous lecturers, singers, etc. My first puppy love fell on a young Spaniard, a tenor, and I was so madly in love with him I imagined I could die for him. He soon must have noticed with what admiration I looked upon him. One day as he came into the office I was overjoyed when he invited me to take lunch with him. He took me to a first class restaurant and ordered a grand dinner. I was filled with horror, however, when he commenced to eat his soup, for he made so much noise that even the couple sitting at the next table looked up in surprise. However, my imagined love was so great I would have forgiven this, but when the meat came and he commenced to scoop up the gravy on his knife and stick it into his mouth my love vanished—I was completely cured.

E. S.

Of course you loved violently, passionately, and intensely, and perhaps secretly, at 16. When you met that puppy love ideal years later did you have to smile at the idea of his or her ever having inspired blissful and roseate dreams in your romantic young head? How did he or she turn out? Tell us about the evolution of that first absorbing love if it turned out funny. Address Doris Blake, "Chicago Tribune." "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published.

Always at Home.

When I was 16 years old there was a boy whom I thought I was madly in love with, for whatever he told me to do I did. One thing I did to please him that displeased my mother most was to sit out in front of our home in the yard from 6:30 p. m. until dark, as he only lived a block away, so he could see that I was home and not out with any other fellow; so there I would sit every evening when he didn't call.

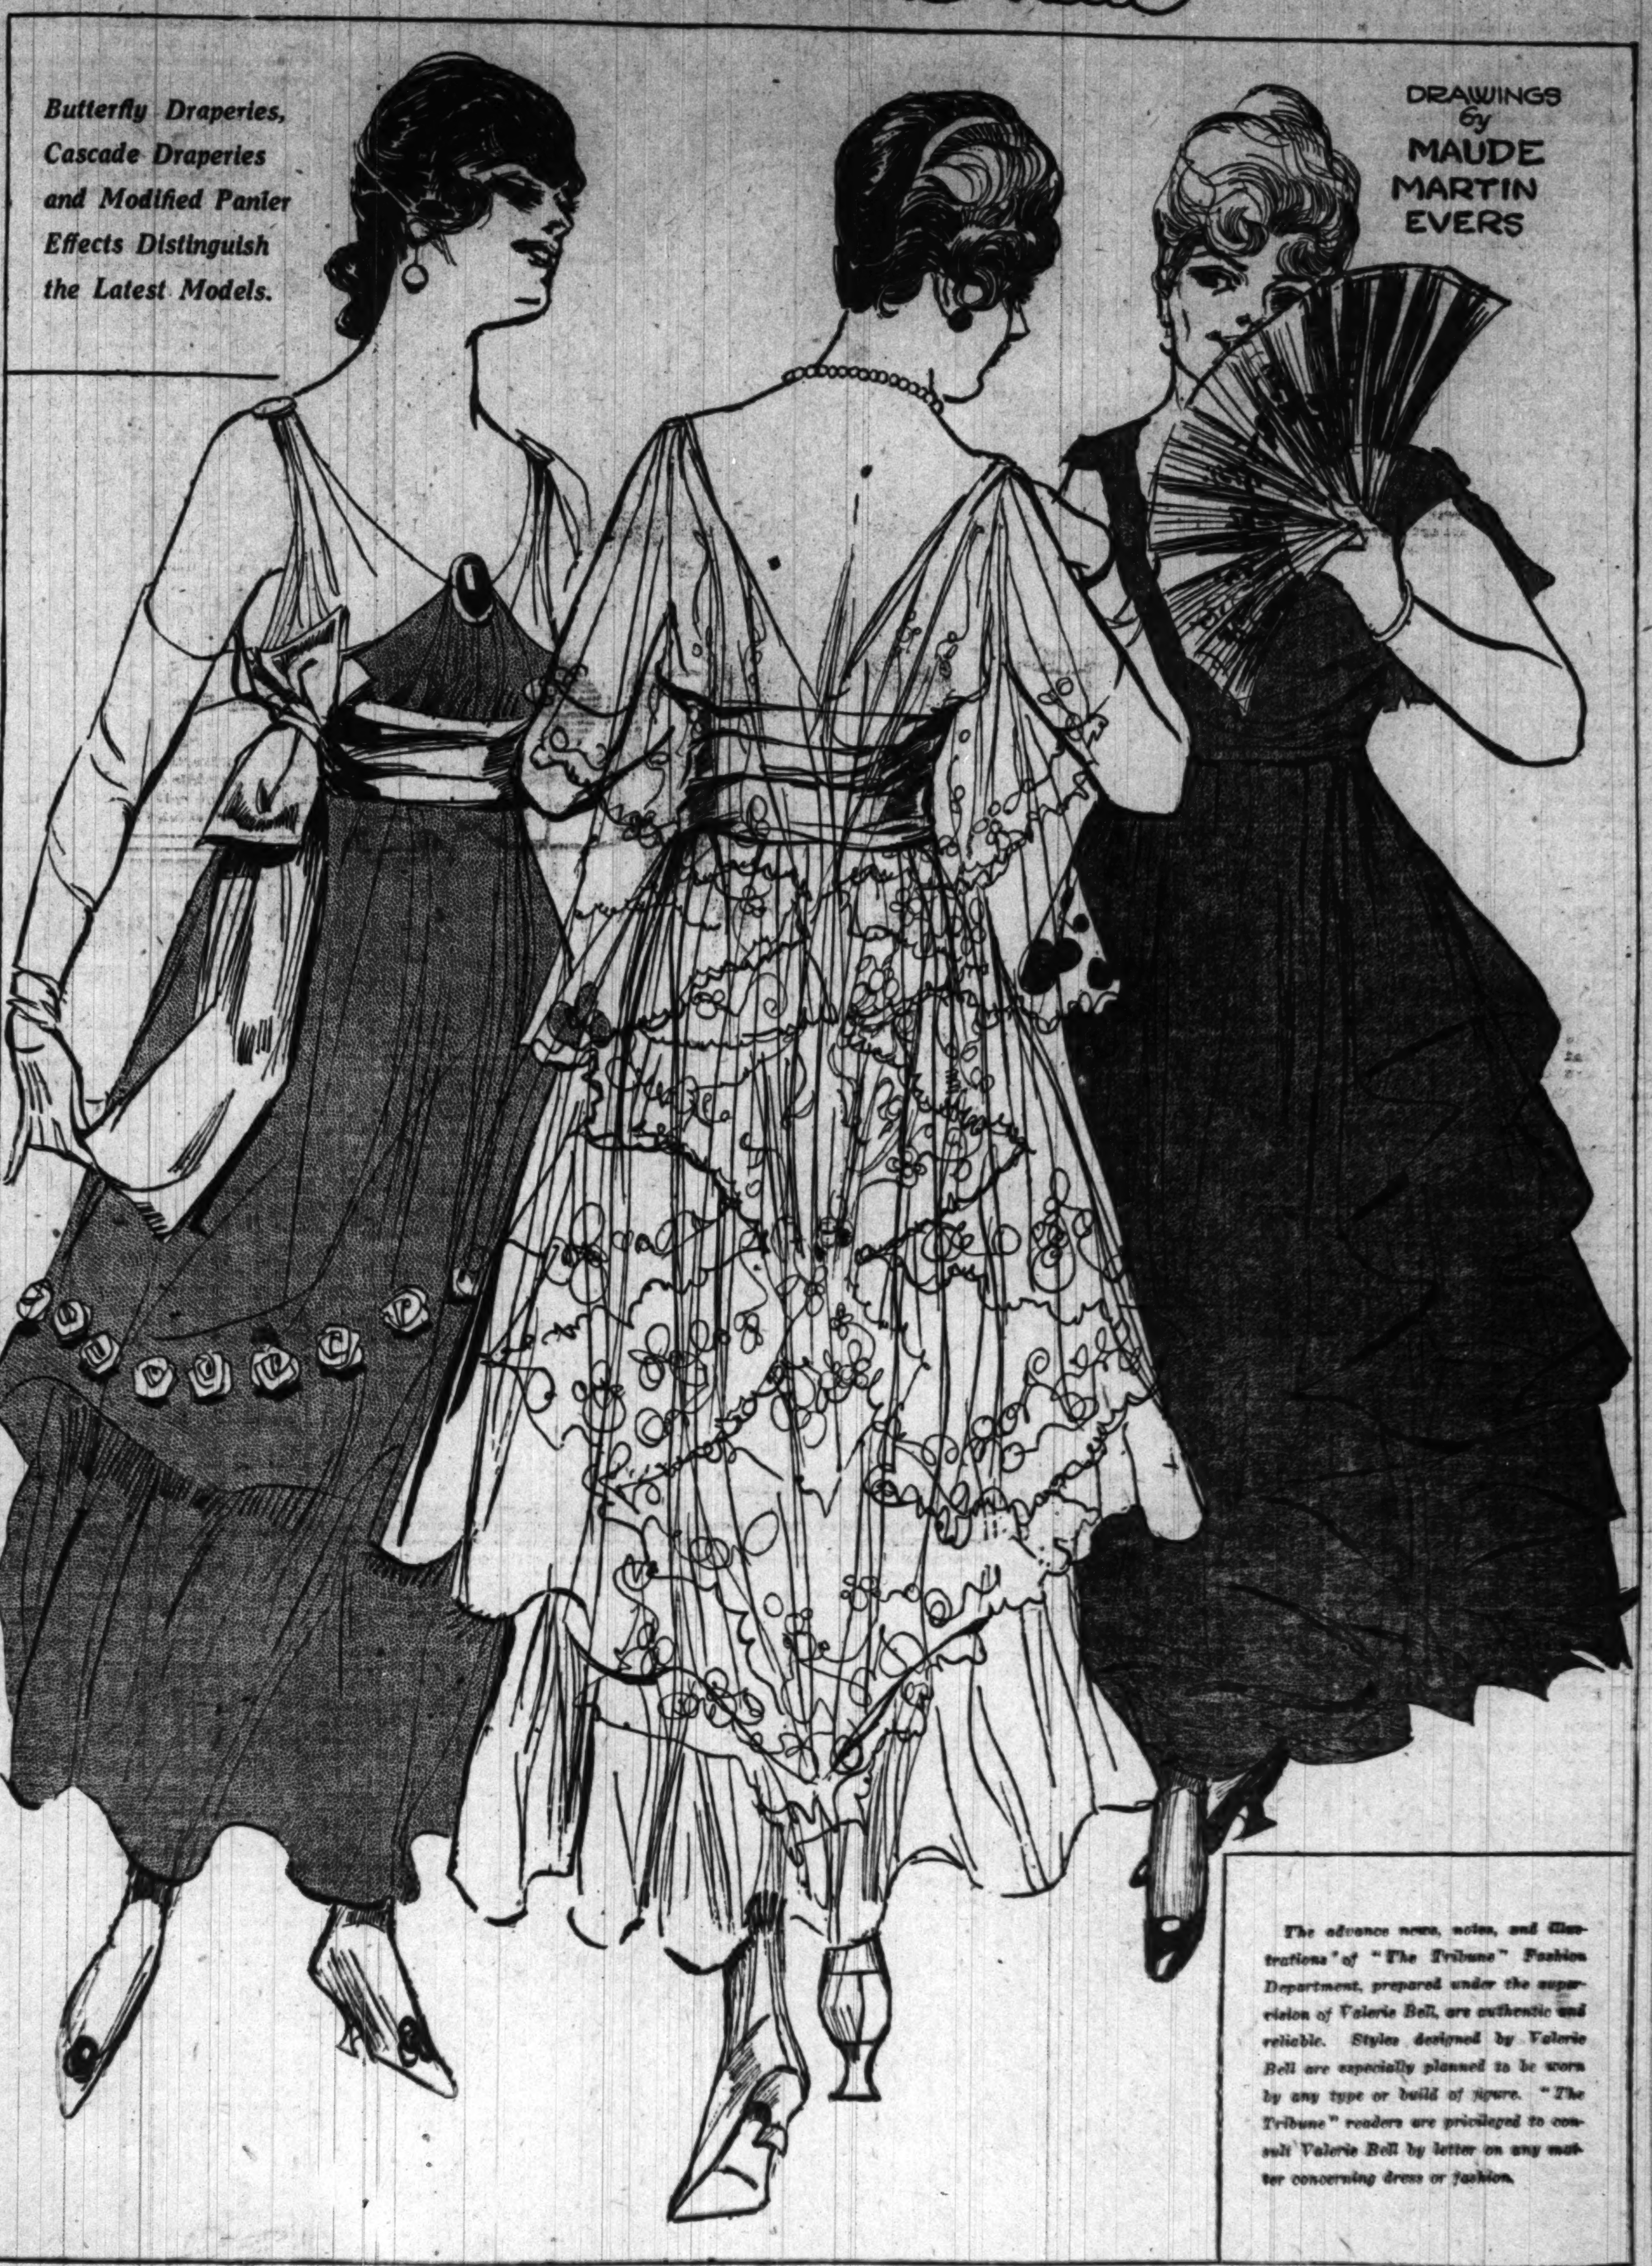
Dance Frocks that are Different

by Valérie Bell



DRAWINGS by MAUDE MARTIN EVERS

Butterfly Draperies, Cascade Draperies and Modified Panier Effects Distinguish the Latest Models.

The advance news, notes, and illustrations of "The Tribune" Fashion Department, prepared under the supervision of Valerie Bell, are authentic and reliable. Styles designed by Valerie Bell are especially planned to be worn by any type or build of figure. "The Tribune" readers are privileged to consult Valerie Bell by letter on any matter concerning dress or fashion.

AS the vacation season opens, dancing frocks take to themselves new attractions, new fascinations, and a most elaborated importance. I am almost inclined to think the designers have held back their best inspirations until now, so distinctly new and so strikingly different are the creations of lace and chiffon, of net and embroidery, of transparencies posed above a solid color, that are brought forward at the last moment and announced as dancing frocks.

While seemingly the height of extravagance and fragility, those yards and yards of filmy fabrics are so ingeniously planned that an astonishing amount of service can be had out of any of them.

And do you observe that the double skirt is prominently brought into notice again, just as the eye was becoming educated to the long, straight, unbroken line? But this novel double skirt is to be worn as Ophelia wore her rue, "with a difference."

All the attention of the maker seems centered upon the tunic, or the upper part of the skirt. For the hem, so long as there is a sufficiency of material to meet the latest fad, all right. But the overskirt—that is the important point. Just glance at the illustrations, and at once you will see that in the employment of a tunic and underskirt effect the necessities of the dance and the dancers are marvelously met.

Cut to fashionable shortness—four to six inches off the floor—there is no chance of catching a high heel in a swirl of chiffon around the feet. Then, too, notice that all of the trimming scheme is applied well above what we might term the danger line in a dancing frock. There is no chance for a clumsy partner to wreck a pretty gown by awkwardness in the dance. Even should an accident happen it will be to the underskirt, which is full, though plain, and possible rents are easily repaired and hidden in the extra fullness that is a sine qua non in this novel mode.

Drapery is the keynote of those novel gowns. Lace, chiffon, net—be it plain, flowered, beaded, embroidered—and, of course, tulle are employed in quantities.

That it takes a skilled hand to manipulate those same draperies—for goodness' sake do not call them "drapes," that were a most inartistic application of an inartistic word—even the veriest amateur in the couturiere's art will acknowledge. For it is in those same draperies that the skill of the modiste instantly declares itself. Just the right touch is necessary—a trifle too little and the frock looks skimped and stingy; a trifle too much and the result is ruined.

But, scant of line, and still scantier of trimming are the corsages that top those same extravagantly full skirts. Seemingly in apology for using so much material elsewhere and to even up the average, the smart maker now is content with gaining a clever line in the corsage, one that shall best accord with the figure lines of the wearer. Surplice effects are desirable, being universally becoming.

And sleeves—well, they are like the snakes in Ireland—they are not there. The full contour of the arm is to be displayed, and about as often as not are gloves omitted. Since the sleeveless fad is upon us we may as well go in for it wholeheartedly, and get all of the kudos we can for being right up to the moment in the matter of style.

With the resurrection of the picturesque modes of other days there come into the light again all sorts of treasures in the way of laces, fans, jewelry. Just how to arrange such treasures to the best advantage is one of those things that it takes an artist to advise, for there is perhaps nothing so ludicrous as the posing of those old time treasures on a gown that is of a period far removed in line, in aspect, and in that intangible thing which poets call atmosphere.

It was doubtless with some of those old time treasures in view that the artist designer planned the gowns that make our illustration. On the center figure there is a back drapery fashioned from a straight length of antique Spanish lace, which accords exquisitely with the dark beauty of its wearer. Creamy in tone and coloring, the precious length is so handled that cutting is unnecessary, and its soft folds are enhanced by the background of old ivory chiffon cloth that forms the gown.

The airy "piece of nothingness" on the left is a pale blue tulle, a blue that inclines somewhat to the greenish tone of an old turquoise. A trying tone to most; but the blonde of every tint and shade, from flaxen to that soft dead shade that we call a blonde cendree, or ashen blonde, will find it marvelously acceptable. Here the artist has employed some century old carnelian brooches in plain band settings to lend a touch of both color, tone, and distinction to the corsage.

Does Woman Ever Propose?

The Surprise of His Life.

It was a balmy, moonlit night in June and Alice invited John to go automobiling with her. John was enjoying the ride immensely and said to Alice in a casual way, "Wouldn't it be great to ride through life like this?" "Would you really like to, with me by your side?" she asked. John said yes, but received the surprise of his life upon reading in the paper the following morning the announcement of his engagement to Alice.

She Got the Dress.

My neighbor celebrated her birthday anniversary with a dinner party. Among us was a dear young girl upon whom our hostess' son often called. Late in the evening our hostess displayed a beautiful white lace robe dress, but old fashioned, and asked, "What shall I do with this?" Jokingly, this young lady replied, "Give it to your daughter-in-law if you ever get one." Immediately the young man, handing her the box and contents, asked her whether she would not accept it. Congratulations followed. Wedding took place in June.

He Collected Antiques.

Does woman ever propose? After a fashion, yes. Some years ago I was visiting at a girl's home and during the course of the evening I expressed my admiration for a peculiarly carved cuckoo clock. Having a hobby of collecting antiques, I remarked that I was going to try to buy it of her mother. "You needn't do that; she'll give it to you," the girl replied. I remonstrated against this, but she continued: "Yes, she'll give it to you but I go with the clock."

Luncheons for Sewing Girls.

"Please send me a few dainty salad courses and luncheons to be served between 4 and 5 p. m. to a young girls' sewing. Also please give recipes for these and send at once. MRS. M. L. C."

I am a little puzzled by this request. I suppose by "young girls' sewing" is meant a class or company of girls engaged in sewing, but it seems odd to me to serve salads or "luncheons" at that hour of the afternoon. The correct thing in the way of food to offer at such a time would be tea or coffee, iced or hot as the season demands, or chocolate, dainty sandwiches, cakes, and the like. If this correspondent wishes anything more elaborate, I trust she will let me know.

Busy Housewife Finds Leisure.

"As I sat with my book beside the water this afternoon I wished all busy housemothers might have the same privilege, and the thought came to me that my plan might help some one else if I passed it along. So here I give it for what it is worth: First of all, I will say I do all my own work—washing, ironing, and sewing for my husband, myself, my two sons of 18 and 15 years of age, and my little girl. We all have good, hearty, outdoor appetites, and yet let me tell you how we eat on Sundays and are happy and well nourished. Our luncheon is simple—a good, filling salad with plenty of mayonnaise, cheese, fruit, etc., and a hot drink. The real meal of the day and the one which makes the day different is our chafing dish supper. This is quickly and easily prepared, but quite elegant, with the best china, shaded candles, etc. So many tempting and wholesome dishes are to be cooked in this way that there is a large variety to choose from; the materials are easily at hand, and if friends drop in so much the better. By these means Sunday is to us a day of pleasure and recreation. I find time to teach a Sunday school class and to attend two services besides. "M. R."

Thank you very much for your pleasant letter and its helpful suggestion. I only wish you had gone even farther and given us the names of some of the chafing dish dainties with which you regale your family. Perhaps you will supply these some other time. I regret it is impossible to follow out the suggestion you make relative to adding the names to the letters printed. This has been frequently discussed and found impracticable. I am sorry.

Sachet of Rose Petals.

"Can you give me a recipe for a sachet of which the foundation is rose petals? I am drying my roses now; would it be best to put them into an air tight jar as soon as dried? MRS. K."

An excellent filling for sachets consists of rose pot-pourri made by the directions I gave last week. When the rose petals are to be used to fill sachet bags of delicate materials it is as well to omit the oils from the compound and to use only the spices, powders, etc., called for in the recipe supplied. By all means keep the rose petals in a closed jar if you wish to preserve their fragrance to the utmost.

Offers Carpet Rags.

"Are there any of the Cornerites who would like a bundle of woolen carpet rags? If so I would be pleased to send them to any one who will pay the express. Do the Helping Hand readers know that a geranium leaf is a fine medium for cleaning pots, pans, etc., with or without soap? Dampen a little and rub hard; it takes out the grease and black and after using makes an excellent fertilizer. E. L. B."

Evidently the writer of this comes from a locality where geraniums grow plentifully, and their leaves can be had at will! Still, I pass on the pleasant and fragrant suggestion. The offer of carpet rags will surely be accepted promptly. I am sorry that rules of the paper do not permit me to print the request she sends in the first part of the letter, and I hope she may secure the home she seeks by some other means.

Lost All in a Fire.

"I know how good the Corner has been to others, and so I venture to write and ask for a little help. We have lost all we had in a fire and my husband and I are both getting old. He is 65 years of age and an invalid with bronchitis and nervousness. If it would not be too much trouble I would be grateful if some one would give us a trio of chickens of any breed. With a rooster and two hens I am sure we could have eggs and raise a brood of chicks which would help nourish my husband. We used all the poultry we had for our daughter and are not able to buy any more. MRS. R. C."

I am sure some one will be able to grant the request of Mrs. R. C. It will be noticed that she says it is immaterial to her what breed of fowls is sent, so long as she can get some to help feed her husband. I hope her plea will receive an early and generous response.

Offers Shorthand Textbook.

"I have a shorthand textbook that I will give to Mary R., who asks for one, if she will communicate with me. A year ago I offered this book and through your Corner found an interesting young girl who is now ready for a position as a stenographer. She has finished with the book and now will pass it on. I am always happy to help young girls to get a start. MRS. A. H. R."

This is a good record in the line of helpfulness, and although Mary R. has already been supplied with the book she sought I have no doubt there is some one else ready to avail herself of this kind and friendly offer.

Converting Buttermilk Into Money.

"I wish to take issue with you on your article, 'The Voice with the Smile Wins,' and ask you to honor our town some day with a visit and see if you don't find here a real town with 'the corners of its mouth turned up.' And the corners mostly are those of women! I would love to entertain you, and I am sure that before you had been here long you would change your views and discover that you have described the chronic condition of a small portion of womankind. I would like to reply to B. C. B. that I make butter at home that brings a fancy price, and besides your instructions to keep all milk vessels scrupulously clean and to avoid all contagious odors, let me add that unless all milk is thoroughly pressed and washed from the butter while it is yet fresh from the churn the butter will not keep sweet more than twenty-four hours. I have an abundance of buttermilk which I wish to convert into pin money, and I would appreciate it if the dear Helping Hand would soon publish a recipe for cream cheese or schmere kase. I do not know if these are one and the same. If not, I would be glad to have both recipes. C."

I wish it were possible to accept this attractive invitation and meet this correspondent and see the cheerful circle of whom she speaks. My observation of the depressed looks of many women has not been pursued in different quarters. However, I am delighted to learn that there is one place where cheeriness reigns, and I trust there may be many others. Thanks for the information about the butter. I wish I could help you to a lucrative method of utilizing your buttermilk, but I know of none. The process of buttermaking eliminates from the milk the properties which are used to make cheese, and while the buttermilk may serve as a beverage or be employed in compounding cakes, corn bread, ginger bread, etc., I know of no other service to which it can be put. Have any of the Helping Hand suggestions to make in this line?

Report Was Contradicted.

"To settle a dispute, I would like to inquire from you if the Duke of the Abruzzi was engaged to Katherine Elkins or to Kathleen Vanderbilt. J. R. W."

Some time ago the papers reported the engagement of the Duke of the Abruzzi to Miss Katherine Elkins. The report was contradicted and then repeated. I am not in a position to state authoritatively whether it was true or not.

Before and After Marriage.

"The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on marriage disillusions. Address Doris Blake, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." Write on only one side of the paper.

Seeing Him Off.

He was a prince of good fellows—still is to all but his own family. Here is an example of his thoughtfulness: A friend invited him for a trip to a town twenty-five miles distant. Hubby insisted that I was included and I dressed up to accompany him. When the car arrived there was room for only one more and he climbed in and away they went. A. G.

He Used to Look Better.

When my wife was my fiancée, she used to compliment me often on my appearance, and the sincerity of the compliments seemed so apparent that I was made very happy. We have been married three months, and now the only remarks concerning my personal appearance are similar to these: "What makes your ears stick out so?" "How did you get that cynical look about your nose?" "Why, you are almost bald!" "It seems to me you look awfully seedy. You never keep your trousers pressed like other men." C. R. A.

Rushed to Flag the Engines.

We were in a runaway and my husband-to-be played the hero act by placing his "strong right arm" around me to keep me from being thrown out. Two weeks after marriage we were in a street car and from all appearances were in danger of being mowed down by two freight engines going in opposite directions. Well, the hero rushed to the door and left me sitting in my seat all alone—never even suggested my following him. J. L.

* *

No Charge to Stick Around.

He always used to get me anything I liked. One day after we were married we were downtown and passed a peanut stand.

"My, don't those peanuts smell good?" I said.

He did not respond and I repeated my remark.

"Yes," he said; "let's stay here and smell them for a while." F. M.

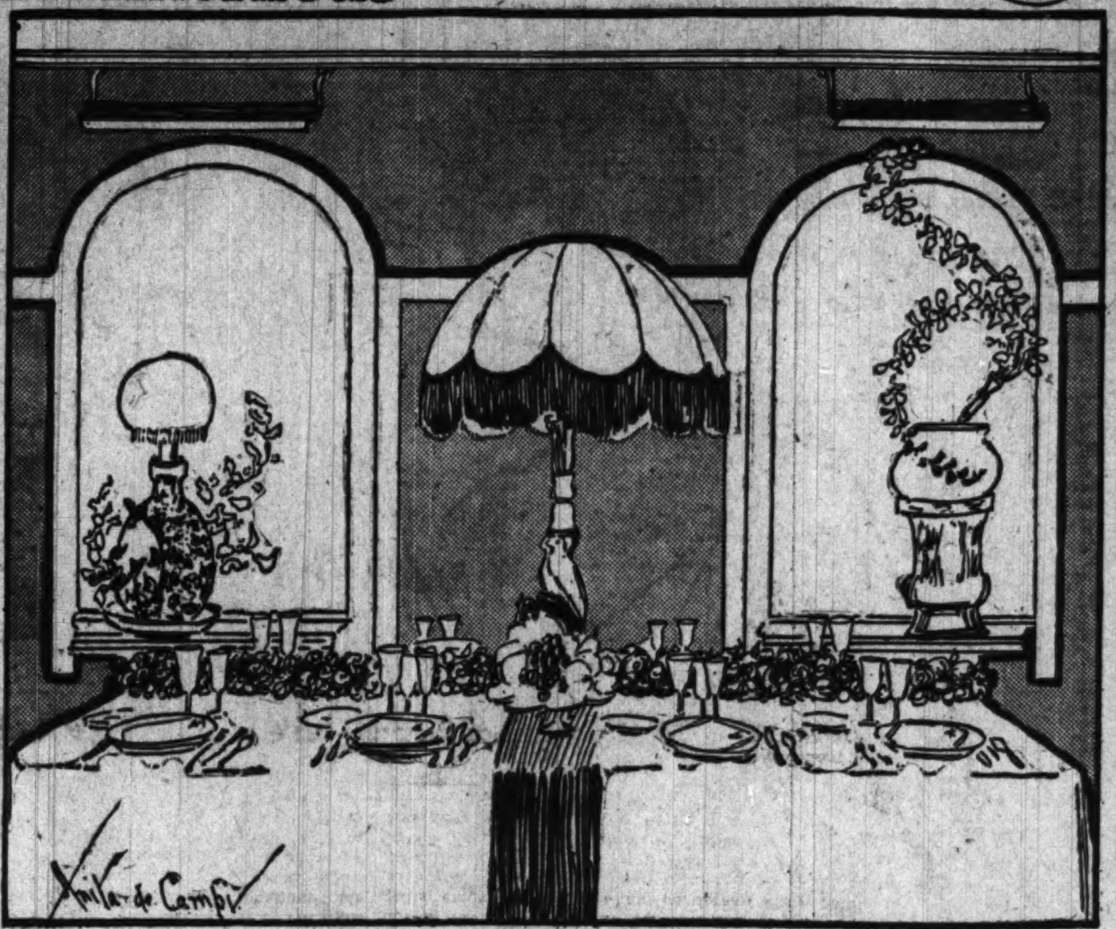
She Sends Proof.

Just to prove marriage does not always meet with disillusionment I am sending the following: About a month ago my husband bought a new suit of clothes, the first he had been able to afford for nearly two years. Two weeks later his lodge was to have an entertainment. I thought I would press his new suit real nice for the occasion, and while thus engaged the baby fell in the yard and began to scream. I left the suit and ran to the baby. Upon returning to the house I found to my horror I had left the iron standing on the leg of his new trousers and it had burned a hole clear through. When my husband came home I told him what had happened. He just took me in his arms and said: "Well, never mind, girlie. I wouldn't feel so badly about it if I were you. You know the clothes are easier mended than the baby would have been. Besides you ought not to have tried to press them; you have enough to do." MRS. H. J. H.

The Home Harmonious

Object Picture Making

Anita de Campi



PICTURE PANELS MADE OF ACTUAL OBJECTS

THE study of still life, not entailing painting a picture of the objects grouped, but simply arranging them into picture effects, is a new fad, well worth the time that may be spent on it. Now that everyone is looking for something novel in decorative matter, these arrangements are even being used in place of pictures, being set against the walls. They are called "compositions."

The use of electricity has made the adjustment of light and shade so facile that playing with it has become one of the decorator's most fascinating diversions. As a decorative medium, light used in any unfamiliar manner invariably calls forth the exclamation of delight that is such precious applause to the ear of the artist. Concealed lights, sending out rays as they do from an unseen source, offer all sorts of untold opportunities for startling or mysterious effects.

One day the flat wall frame, with a breadth of grayish green brocade stretched between its edges, may throw into relief a slender vase of turquoise blue enamel, holding a graceful branch of cherry blossoms—all lighted from below. The next day it may hedge in a strip of the owner's beautiful needlework. Again, it may be a background for a collection of specimen butterflies, placed with geometrical precision on a black velvet backing, and with the light thrown directly on them from above; or, perhaps, some rare and brilliantly colored fruit, in a pannier with high arching handle, against a gilded ground.

Two dining room panels I have lately seen arranged were long and narrow in shape. The ground used was dull blue denim. On one was a cluster of yellow corn, tied together with coarse cord and hanging from a nail. On the other, similarly placed, was a string of Chianti bottles. The artist who made them showed me a sketch of the subject he intended to substitute the following week. One was a little simple vase of oxblood enamel, set on a shelf and holding a hawthorn branch, and the other was a brown sack shaped basket, to be hung in the center of the panel, with some queerly artificial looking orange colored pods known as Japanese lanterns hanging from it. Both were to be backed with a strip of oyster green sunfast.

Most of these picture arrangements are illumined by means of a picture light reflector, like those shown in the sketch. A more valuable adjunct, however, is a cord and bulb coming from a nearby baseboard socket, as this can be placed so as to vary the direction of light.

The following composition is exquisite: A small wall bracket with a glass shelf, not more than 6x12 inches, has the light hung on a little hook directly beneath it. The shelf is then draped with a wonderful piece of chiffon embroidered in a burst of delicate colors, and on the shelf is placed a Tiffany vase, holding several long feathery sprays of yellow orchids. The light shining up through the diaphanous folds of cloth gives the whole picture an unreal sense of being suspended in midair—a floating light—as surprisingly lively as fine fireworks.

Miss de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to interior decorations. Address your letter to Miss Anita de Campi, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. Inclose a stamped, addressed envelope if you wish a personal reply.

The illustration shows two successful groupings against panels with arched tops. It is impossible adequately to express the effectiveness of the panel to the left. In so simple a pen and ink drawing the facts of the picture can merely be indicated. But the description is easily followed, and the result is novel to a degree. The vase is a large, wide one of Canton china. An electric bulb (attached by wire to a base plug) is dropped into this vase and then a big bowl of goldfish is set upon it. The light glows up through the bowl of water, causing the fish to flash like the most brilliant metal. It is the liveliest bit of decoration that could possibly be conceived.

Back of the bowl is a little cylindrical flower holder, attaching itself to the sage blue ground panel by means of two tiny rubber vacuum tips. (These vases are on the market and are called "vacu-vases.") Into the vase is thrust a double branch of honeysuckle, a part of which curves forward over the bowl. When the other lights in the room are low the lights in these side wall panels cannot fail to excite the highest admiration. The reflector above mentioned is not used with this particular composition.

The other panel shows a rather odd Japanese vase with open sides. A hardy fern, known as "holly," has been planted and trained in this vase, according to Japanese principle. Each branch is a symbol. The highest one expresses man, etc. The top of the vase terminates in a candle holder, fitted with electric light and candle shade.

The lamp on the table in the same sketch shows the latest improved fashion of table lighting. It is a lamp with a base instead of the usual center drop light. In this case the shade is old gold; the heavy foliage is black. The wide ribbon traversing the breadth of the table is of violet blue, while traversing the length of the table is the newest thing in floral arrangement—a thick hedgelike rope of variegated flowers, twisted together with strings of smilax. At the base of the lamps and forming a part of the decoration are bowl shaped hollows that are fitted with multicolored fruits. The light shining straight down on them gives them an added brilliancy. Doesn't it make you think of the "fruit made of jewels" in the "Arabian Nights"? Aren't you tempted to try picture making without paint as pigment?

Answers to Inquiries.

W. C. C.: Grills between the rooms are not in favor. Could you not have the grills removed, and if you have portieres, raise your curtain poles clear to the top of the door frame? It is pleasant to hear of your long loyalty to our paper. You have sent me beautiful samples of rug, tapestry material, and side walls. All of these are most harmonious in their color relations. What I would suggest by way of a brightening touch with these gray blues, tan, cream, and mulberry tones, would be a silk lamp shade of American Beauty color, or a vase of intense coral color would be good. Use either the American Beauty or coral color, not both. What the room needs really is a luminous touch of a primary color. While it is soft and harmonious, it is all a little too much neutralized.

* *

MRS. B. H. W.: The little house that you are building must be charming. Gray and white and green for the outside sound most attractive. Take the crudeness out of the gray and white by tinging both with yellow. Don't let the yellow be decided. It must be just a suspicion. Have double faced green and white window shades. The kitchen would look well in two shades of light gray, with a line of white on the edges of the wood. If you will need to really use the portieres between the rooms, have them. But do not have them otherwise. Adjust them on rings with little cords and pulleys. Monk's cloth makes an inexpensive and washable couch cover. Use lilac and white stripe in your back bedroom, with white enamel furniture and blue rug. Either light blue or cream in your bathroom.

D. P. W.: Your living room is not large, nor is the dining room. As these two rooms open into each other, it would be well to make them seem as much as possible like one room. This can be done by means of colors and furnishings. Let me describe two such rooms to you that have lately been created by an accomplished decorator. The living room is papered in old gold, and the dining room in a lighter grayer tone of the same color. A large, modern walnut combination sideboard and china cabinet fills almost one whole side wall in the dining room. It is a made piece, not built in. All of the furniture in this room is made of walnut frames, but the seats and backs of the chairs are upholstered in emerald green silk and wool fabric. In an alcove is a great sofa, upholstered in blackish blue repp, with an oblong motif embroidered across the back, a design of interlacing green leaves and tiny red berries. The sofa is flanked by two low walnut stands. A lamp with an old gold shade is on one and a few books on the other. The table cover is, of course, white linen with emerald green conventional flowers in the corners. The old gold living room is furnished with blackish blue upholstered pieces, made on walnut frames and modern in form. One or two pieces of pottery in the room are of brilliant green, and the merest touch of scarlet is supplied in red candles. The floor in both rooms is almost covered with tufted fawn colored rugs. The kitchen is white throughout, cream side walls, and white paint.

J. N.: Mission furniture has given place to various sorts of furniture, less stiff, massive, and rough hewn, with the straight lines of the mission somewhat modified. We have in its place now some excellent pieces of arts and crafts which are as well made as the mission and not so cumbersome. With this simple type leather cushions are permissible. Another style of furniture, more ornate decidedly than the mission, but which answers the same desire for simplicity, is the style known as cottage furniture. Many folding beds, both single and double, in the shapes of chairs and sofas, are to be had for use in living rooms, to be pressed into service for the occasional guest.

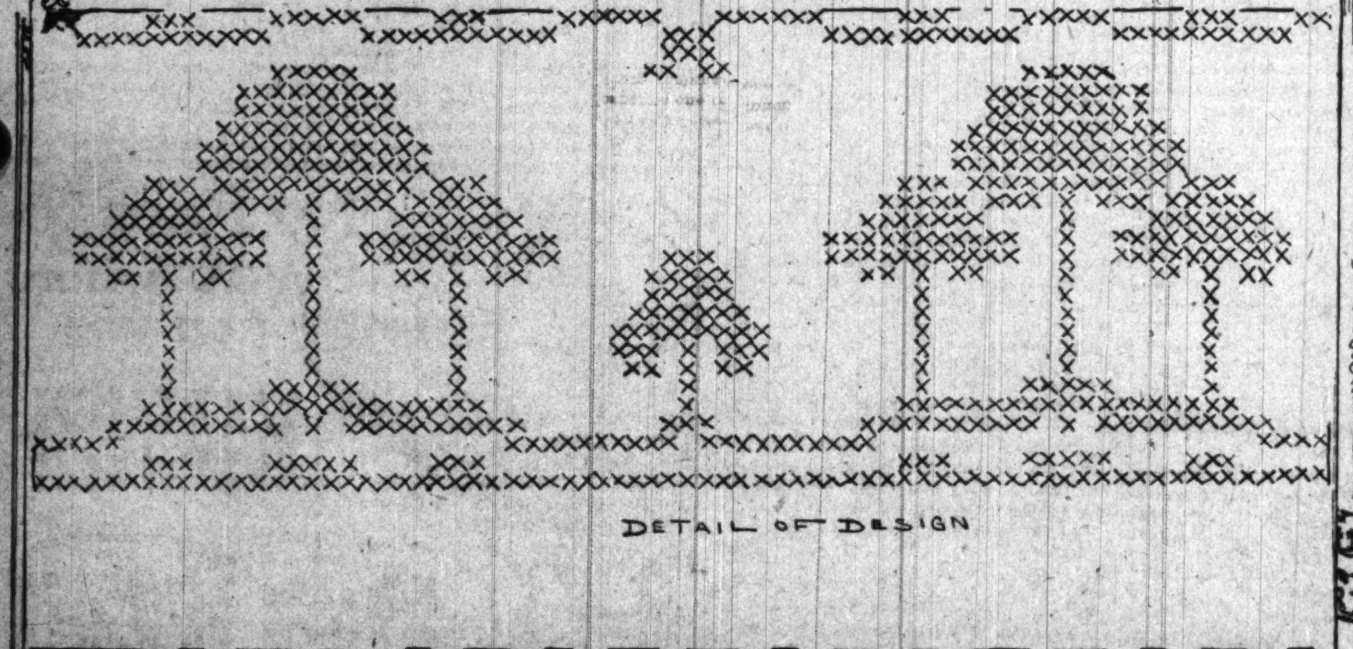
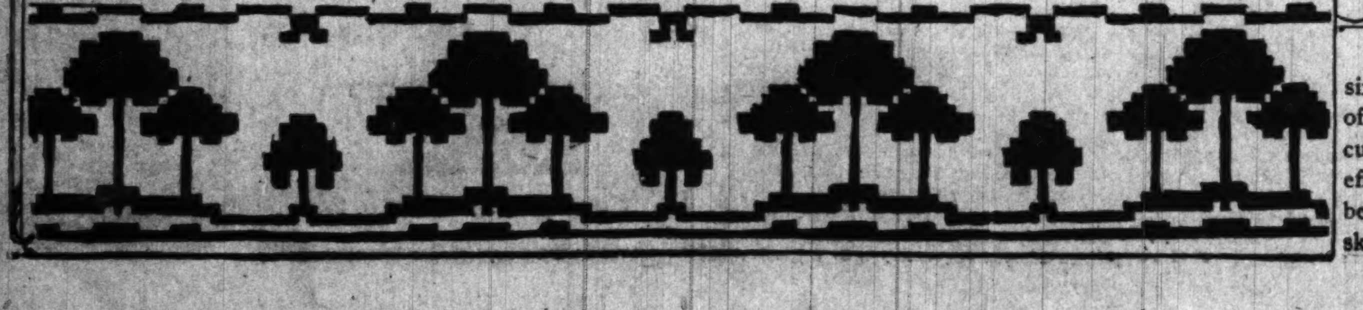
X.: In making a lamp shade, for which you already have some good black silk fringe, I would suggest your buying plain white silk for the cover. Finish this at the top edge with black fancy braid, and decorate the silk in silhouette effect either with black embroidery, stencil, or figures cut out of black velvet and appliqued to the silk. If you are to use your living room as a music room, and you really care about music, have as little drapery, rugs, and fabrics that will deaden the sound as possible. The less furniture that is put into a music room, the better the accoustics will be. Your idea of gray blue paper faintly figured will be good for both rooms. I do not quite approve the use of green plush for your period chair. In an informal living room a variety of woods are often used without spoiling the effect. Much depends on the shape and size, and congruity of the furniture. Side lights are most in favor in the dining rooms. Several of the newest designs from abroad show attractive silk shaded standing lamps in the center of the table, as well as the side lights. These are used to replace the erstwhile favorite hanging domes. If you follow the ads in our paper you would see that the prices I have quoted as those at which furniture dealers have advertised their wares. I am sorry not to be able to give you the names.

A Band in Filet Crochet for Portiere





This tree design for a portiere is between six and seven inches deep. The large group of trees may be repeated four times in each curtain. The drawing in silhouette gives the effect, while the one done in x's gives the number of squares crocheted solid. Follow the sketch closely for the cross stitch.

The Tribune Cook Book

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

A SOCIAL, practical, inexpensive, versatile, and highly nourishing food is the peanut. For nearly fifty years now it has had festive associations, being sold for the entertainment and refreshment of the crowds at hustings, picnics, circuses, and latterly at the amusement parks. Its social and festival value first endeared it to us, and now its economic value has resulted in piling up some remarkable national statistics about the rapidly increasing crops (in Oklahoma the acreage was multiplied by eight in the three years from 1911 to 1913), the various commercial products to be made from it, and its varied use and value as food for man and beast.

The peanut is a pea, but not a nut, and it almost seems a pity that the strictly American name, originating in the south, of "goober" has not clung to it. It is a member of the pea and bean family, but has much greater food value than any of the peas or beans, because it contains so much fat or oil. This oil, which is now expressed and refined, has become the greatest rival of olive oil as a food as well as in manufacturing, and sells for less than half the money.

The peanut is also rich in both protein and carbohydrate, so is seemingly one of the complete foods, but it is too highly concentrated to be that. Fat alone is the most concentrated of all foods and anything heavy with starch (carbohydrate) comes next and we have these both in large per cents in the peanut. This is why some people find the roasted peanut so hard to digest that they call it indigestible.

In order to thin or extend them people who use peanuts and peanut products to take the place of milk, butter, cream, eggs, sugar, salt, and spices, as the unfired food people do, grind them up and spread over all sorts of salad herbs and combine them with some of the fruits, bananas and dates in particular.

Manufacturers are also combining them in various ways. Prof. Bailey says: "'Vegetable meats' are prepared from peanuts by expressing some of the oil and adding to the residue various vegetable substances. Peanut meal is largely used in confectionery, especially for making imitation almond macaroons and small cakes. The oil of peanuts is easily expressed, of excellent flavor, high nutritive value, and possesses much better keeping qualities than some of the other oils used for salad purposes."

Expert chemists are finding new values for peanut meals and flours. The meal recently manufactured has been used for breakfast cakes as well as extensively for macaroons, and is mixed half and half with cornmeal for muffins. And people not so scientific are mixing it with popcorn and coconut and sugar in a popular confection for amusement parks. I think it was the "popcorn king of Coney island" who last year put out one of these made in the proportions of one bushel of popcorn to four quarts of roasted peanuts and two handfuls of grated coconut.

The peanut is considered an ideal food for those suffering with diabetes, and though for various reasons it may not be, yet it is fairly good. But of one thing we may be sure—it has contributed more inexpensive happiness and good nourishment at the same time than all the other refreshments devised. The boy and girl at the amusement park eating peanuts from the shell are not likely to suffer from any after results of a serious nature.

Peanut Fudge.

The professional confectioners use millions of bushels of peanuts to make about the easiest and simplest of their products, and the boy and girl amateur, with a little practice, can make as good or better things at home, as one Tom has found out and got into print by so doing. Peanut fudge must not be overcooked, that is, must not form a hard ball in water, but a soft one; otherwise it is easy.

Chop or pound to a meal a half cup or perhaps a little less of peanut meats, add to them two cups of sugar, half a cup of milk, and from a fourth to half a cup of corn sirup or glucose. Stir over the fire until the sugar is dissolved and cook until it forms a soft ball in water. Take off the fire, stir until it grains, and then drop in little "gobs" on a buttered plate, or spread and then cut into squares. A little butter may be added in cooking it. If cooked a minute too long it will granulate too soon and be too stiff.

Peanut Butter.

Fresh peanut butter for sandwiches may be made at home by chopping or pounding peanuts fine and then mixing them either with cream or melted butter, or even with a fine peanut oil, to the right consistency.

Peanut Brittle.

It is a knack to melt sugar without water, but when a cup of sugar can be melted in this way the quickest of peanut brittles may be made. Put the cup of sugar in a thick bottomed frying pan over a medium fire, one not hot enough to burn, but only brown or caramelized, stirring it all the time until melted. When melted, pour over half a cup of peanuts spread out in a single layer, or if you can manage it stir the peanuts into the sugar and then spread the whole out thin on a buttered plate. The peanuts may be chopped for a change and the mass spread out thick and cut into bars.

Peanut Soup.

Peanut soup is often made with roasted peanuts, but a far daintier and more palable soup, with a flavor not like roasted peanuts, can be made from the raw nut, as from any pea or bean. Raw peanuts may be soaked and given the same attention as kidney beans are given, or they may be prepared without soaking. The outside skin may be removed and should be by sieving the cooked vegetable. If they are not soaked the brown color of the skin should be largely removed by scalding them. Pour boiling water over a cup of raw peanuts and allow this to stand for a few minutes, then drain and put to cook in cold water, four cups of water to one of peanuts. Bring to boil slowly and then simmer over the simmering burner turned down so that the fire just touches the tightly covered cooking vessel for three hours, or for four hours if they are not sufficiently tender. Put the whole through a sieve and treat as any other puree, seasoning to taste, thinning with milk for a soup, or the whole peanuts may be served cold with a French dressing for salad, though this is not recommended. This soup is more digestible than one of roasted peanuts.

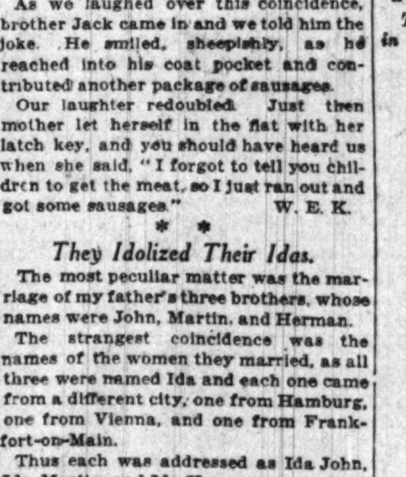
It Was Sausage Day.

Helen and Jack were respectively my sister and brother. We all worked in the loop in Chicago, and were in the habit of purchasing the meat for supper there.

One morning mother forgot to specify which one should perform this function.



I, thinking the others would forget, bought sausages. Arriving home, I found Helen had done the same thing, and her purchase of sausages lay on the table before me.

As we laughed over this coincidence, brother Jack came in and we told him the joke. He smiled, sheepishly, as he reached into his coat pocket and contributed another package of sausages.

Our laughter redoubled. Just then mother let herself in the flat with her latch key, and you should have heard us when she said, "I forgot to tell you children to get the meat, so I just ran out and got some sausages." W. E. K.

They Idolized Their Idas.

The most peculiar matter was the marriage of my father's three brothers, whose names were John, Martin, and Herman.

The strangest coincidence was the names of the women they married, as all three were named Ida and each one came from a different city, one from Hamburg, one from Vienna, and one from Frankfort-on-Main.

Thus each was addressed as Ida John, Ida Martin, and Ida Herman, respectively, when spoke nof. H. F.

Over the Telephone.

Alice had a very jealous disposition, but I thought she would outgrow it after we were married, and never quarreled with her. An out of town client had asked me to escort his daughter to the occulist she was consulting, and I gladly showed her all the courtesies a man naturally would under the circumstances.

Shortly afterward, when returning from the country, I stepped into a public telephone booth at the station, to call up my offices. My switchboard operator told me a party was that instant calling for me, so I instructed her to make the connection. Said Alice's voice, in a frigid tone:

"Hello. My train leaves in five minutes, and I'm calling you to tell you not to write to me, or find out where I am. I saw the girl you have been spending your evenings with——"

"Hold on, Alice," I interrupted, "let me explain——"

"And I'd give you your ring this minute if you were here——"

"Where are you now?" I asked.

"Never mind, I'm miles from your office. I'm in the station, three miles from your office, in booth No. 6. You——"

The unusual situation dawned upon me instantly, and in less time than it takes to tell, I was standing beside her in the tiny telephone booth, close quarters, I'll admit, but I managed it. She had been speaking from the booth next to mine.

My phantom-like appearance when she thought I was speaking from my office and calling her bluff to return the ring at once, if she wanted to, gave her a change of disposition. She not only wears the ring she threatened to return, but, what's more, a plain gold band is it's constant companion. N. E.

WHO MADE LOVE TO RAE TANZER?

"Oliver" Osborne, After Assuming the Guilt Charged Against J. W. Osborne, Has Disappeared; Miss Tanzer Is Under Indictment for Using the Mails to Defraud; Perjury Charges Are Numerous; the Identity of the Osborne in the Case Has Not Been Thoroughly Established.

JAMES W. OSBORNE as Miss Tanzer's sisters described him.

DECADES ago the query swept the entire United States and even today is occasionally heard—"Who struck Billy Patterson?" But long after the identity of this person has been discussed, perhaps, millions of persons will be asking themselves, even as they ask themselves now: "Who was Oliver Osborne?"

For "Oliver Osborne" is the shadow man, the chimera, the mirage, and all things else mysterious in a case that has excited the interest and attention in every state in the union by its strange aspects, its mysterious ramifications, its startling situations—the now famous and widely heralded suit of Miss Rae Tanzer, a pretty olive skinned, oval faced milliner, against James W. Osborne, New York lawyer and former district attorney, for $50,000 alleged breach of promise.

Who Oliver Osborne is, where he came from, where he went after his sudden and unexpected appearance in New York, when, it is asserted, he informed the federal authorities that it was he and not James W. Osborne, as charged in Miss Tanzer's bill, who had been friendly with her in New York City and at Plainfield, N. J., is not known.

How long he may remain unknown will not be determined until the conclusion of the trail of Maxwell and Davis Slade, attorneys for Miss Tanzer in the filing of her suit, who are now under indictment charged with conspiracy to obstruct justice. It may not be known even then, but certain it is that "Oliver Osborne" is the human crux of the Osborne case and that he is acutely needed to throw light upon the train of events that have resulted in the following:

The accusation that James W. Osborne, one of the most notable lawyers in New York state, state-wide graft investigator under Gov. Glynn in 1914, former assistant district attorney in New York City, and a married man, met and wooed in the fall of 1914 Miss Rae Tanzer, forewoman at Farrington & Evans, a millinery establishment in New York City.

The $50,000 suit of Miss Tanzer's against Osborne, charging breach of promise and basing the charges on three letters alleged to have been written to her by James W. Osborne.

The indictment against Miss Tanzer charging her with using the United States mails with intent to defraud James W. Osborne.

The charges against David and Maxwell Slade charging them with an attempt to obstruct justice in connection with the Osborne case.

The assertion of Osborne that the breach of promise suit is but the work of big interests which are seeking to discredit him, and the contention that David Slade, Miss Tanzer's attorney, is a former enemy of his.

The production of the seven mystery letters purported to have been written by Rae Tanzer to James W. Osborne, in which the writer addresses the recipient as "Oliver."

It has even been hinted that "Oliver Osborne" is a myth, that no such person existed. And just at present in New York counsel for the Slades is demanding that "Oliver Osborne" be produced in court of law, a place wherein he has never been identified. At the same time he promises a complete reopening of the already tangled case, a deeper probing into some of its strange details with the idea of disclosing who was the man that Rae Tanzer charged broke her heart and "ruined her life."

Here is a brief résumé of the events and actions that have preceded the case now before the bar in New York City:

History of the Case.

On March 15, 1915, Rae Tanzer, through the law firm of Slade & Slade, filed suit against James W. Osborne, asking for $50,000 damages for alleged breach of promise to marry her. In her complaint she set forth allegations to the effect that James W. Osborne had visited her often and proposed marriage several times. The case was given wide newspaper publicity.

On March 19 in the evening two startling developments took place. First, a man representing himself to be Oliver Osborne, a steamfitter residing in Boston, appeared in New York, went to James W. Osborne's office, according to the latter's statement, and there made a full confession of his alleged relations with Miss Tanzer, thus virtually applying to himself the charges that had been made against James W. Osborne.

A few hours after this reported confession Rae Tanzer was arrested by federal agents on the charge of using the United States mails to defraud. The warrant was issued on the strength of an affidavit made by James W. Osborne after "Oliver Osborne's" appearance, and a letter which accompanied it. This letter bore the same handwriting as those alleged to have been sent James W. Osborne by Rae Tanzer. It also bore the signature of Rae Tanzer.

According to statements made at the time by J. W. Osborne and his partners, the man from Boston gave a complete, vivid, sequential story of his alleged relations with Miss Tanzer. He said that he had met her by a flirtation on the streets, called on her several times, and more than once met her in Plainfield, N. J.

Plainfield, N. J., was the city in which Miss Tanzer charged James W. Osborne made advances toward her while stopping at the Kensington hotel on Oct. 18, 1914.

Further, the man from Boston asserted that never had he allowed Miss Tanzer to believe he was a lawyer or California ranchman or anything but a plain steamfitter. His motive in giving himself up, he declared, was the motive that would prompt any honest man—the desire to see that no innocent man should suffer for acts not committed by himself but by another.

Other "Oliver" Disappears.

Thus James W. Osborne, who but two hours before had asked Miss Tanzer's attorneys for a bill of particulars so he might fight her charges in detail, found himself exonerated apparently by a genial stranger, who, impelled by honesty and a sense of fair play, took the blame—the honest Oliver Osborne.

Furthermore, it was claimed by James W. Osborne, "Oliver" presented him with the letter signed Rae Tanzer as proof of his story. Immediately J. W. Osborne sought the authorities and a warrant was issued for the arrest of Miss Tanzer. In the meantime preparations were made to have "Olivere Osborne" appear the following day and repeat the story under oath. But the next day Oliver Osborne did not appear. He has never appeared—never since the day he told his story and returned supposedly to Boston to "wind up a few business affairs."

Hunt for "Oliver" Osborne.

Upon his failure to present himself before the authorities United States special agents and city detectives began combing New York for traces of him, the police of other cities were told to watch for him, and all the machinery of the law was set in motion at once. And, though the elusive Oliver was not taken into custody, the detectives discovered in a building in East Sixteenth street, Manhattan, a room wherein he had lived at various times. An entrance was forced, and there the officers found a wardrobe that would do credit to a millionaire instead of a poor steamfitter.

Toilet powders, face creams, tooth pastes, umbrellas, canes, jackets, lounging coats, and shoes by scores were piled up in the tiny room. Never, the detectives averred, had they seen such an assortment of clothing and toilet articles.

Listed by the officers are the following articles:

Fourteen suits of clothes, 50 pairs of silk socks (pale blues and pinks), 30 pairs of shoes, 20 silk shirts (baby blues and pale pinks), 72 linen collars, size 16½; 36 neckties, 25 pairs of gloves (yellow predominating), 3 canes, 2 umbrellas, 6 razors, 12 boxes of talcum powder, 6 bottles of perfume, 3 boxes of cigars, 3 decks of cards, 2 sweaters, and two flannel shirts.

The disclosure of this extensive wardrobe in the room supposed to be "Oliver Osborne's" tended, in the minds of many, to corroborate the story that James W. Osborne had been mistaken for "Oliver Osborne," while others took the view that these garments were some of the same wardrobe a part of which was worn by the man who was with Rae Tanzer at the Kensington hotel on Oct. 18, and who had been positively identified by three witnesses as being James W. Osborne.

At any rate it served to complicate matters more.

Besides the wardrobe there were many other articles in the room—articles that tended to show that "Oliver Osborne," whoever he was, was a man with sporting tastes. Around the perfume scented room were hung many pictures of prize fighters, all in their prime before the days of Jim Corbett, and many other photographs showing sporting life. The contents of the room occupy an important place in the present trial of the Slade brothers and in the other pending cases as exhibits.

In the meantime, what of Rae Tanzer, the woman who brought the original suit? Suddenly and vociferously, even somewhat reproachfully, she admitted that her charges against James W. Osborne had been a "ghastly mistake," though an honest one, and withdrew her suit for breach of promise.

Simultaneously she declared that Oliver Osborne was the man with whom she had been associated.

After that, while the nation gasped at the sudden turn developments had taken and wondered who the mysterious and elusive Oliver might be, the case grew quiescent for a few days—but only for a few—and then on March 25, before United States Commissioner Houghton in New York, burst out with scandalous vigor. This was during the proceedings against Rae Tanzer on the charge of using the mails to defraud.

Frank D. Safford, clerk at the Kensington hotel at Plainfield, N. J., was called as a witness and positively identified James W. Osborne and Rae Tanzer as the couple who had registered under the names "Mr. and Mrs. O. Osborne" at the Kensington on the night of Oct. 18, 1914. James W. Osborne at the same hearing took the stand and testified that never until he entered the courtroom that morning had he seen Rae Tanzer.

To complicate matters a bit more was the testimony of Rae's sisters, Rose and Dora Tanzer. They positively identified James W. Osborne as the man who had courted their sister at 952 Aldus street, and who was known to them as "Oliver Osborne," but their description of the man who called differed widely from that of James W. Osborne, who sat in court.

hey pictured him without glasses, a natty dresser, given to canes, and many diamonds. James J. Osborne weears glasses and is usually plainly dressed. This was corobotated.

Tells of Courtship.

Dora Tanzer went into the details of James W. Osborne's alleged visits to the Aldus street address. She testified that for ten weeks six nights a week he called upon Rae and posed as an unmarried California ranchman. She also testified to a conversation between herself and Rae in which she wrung from Rae an admission that the caller had proposed marriage to her and had rented four rooms in Seventy-second street, near Riverside drive, in anticipation of the coming marriage.

Miss Tanzer, questioned on the appearance of the caller with regard to his glasses, said that although she never saw him wear glasses there were nevertheless marks left by glasses on his nose.

She told of the man's smart dressing and said that he had given Rae a diamond horseshoe pin and two diamond rings, all of which jewelry he had given and taken back several times, finally disappearing with all of it. She also told of his eating a meal in the house and of his promising to give her a turkey for Thanksgiving, which promise he did not keep. She said she wouldn't have used the turkey anyhow, because it would not have been "kosher enough."

Once, the witness said, "Oliver" made a "break" in her house when he met her girl cousin, who was a stenographer. "He asked my cousin," the witness testified, "if she was a good stenographer, and said if she was he'd give her a job in his office. I was surprised, because he had said he was a California ranchman, and when I asked him what he meant by his office he didn't answer me."

On cross examination Miss Tanzer said that she and her sisters had learned that "Oliver Osborne's" real name was "J. W. Osborne," but she admitted that she had said nothing about this to Rae's visitor and that Rae had continued to call her friend "Oliver."

Says Osbornes Not the Same.

Immediately after this testimony came that of W. J. Kitchen, proprietor of the Hotel Kensington. Like a thunderbolt was his assertion that the James W. Osborne sitting in the courtroom was not the man who had appeared with Rae Tanzer at the hotel on Oct. 18.

"I'll stake everything I've got that there is no resemblance between the two men," Kitchen testified with fervor. He then gave a description of the man who, he said, registered as "O. Osborne" on the night in question. He failed to identify Rae Tanzer as the woman whom he had seen with "O. Osborne," declaring that he did not see her fully.

Following Kitchen James W. Osborne was called to the stand and asked to remove his glasses. This he did. He was then asked to read from one of the law books near at hand. The result was that although he could distinguish the words in large type he could not read the sentences in small type. His testimony closed with the declaration that never until that day had he seen any of the Tanzer sisters.

During the proceedings Mrs. Osborne sat near her husband and appeared amused at the trend of the testimony. Prior to the foregoing, however, the examination was directed against Osborne to determine the facts concerning the mystery letters that he received at his office, one of which was the basis of the charge against Miss Tanzer.

Produce Girl's Letters.

Osborne identified a letter received by him through the mail at his office, 115 Broadway, on Feb. 16, to which the name of Rae was signed. This was the letter upon which the charge against Miss Tanzer was based. It was in an envelope addressed to "Mr. J. W. Osborne." It was written by hand in ink on plain note paper, and read, punctuation and all:

New York, Feb. 16, 1915.—Dear Oliver: Do you think I am a fool to call me about 9:15 Thursday evening last and say you have just received my mail [there must be something wrong with your deliveries and then think of it to have two dummies to speak for you. I know better I am disgusted and don't care what happens now and will go to the end. Have plenty of friends to help me if necessary. Inclose please find your picture which I have a long time. Do you think now that I am coming down to your office to meet some one that is going to pose as you I have plenty of time but not for that. Was to the Sherman Square of a Sunday when you were leaving for Providence. These are the words you spoke to the young lady at the switchboard: Good-bye, Miss, won't see you for a few days am going to Providence on Thursday morning. Surrogates court in Brooklyn and several other places.

What do you intend to do? My plans are made; more than you think I can do and won't wait very long either. RAE.

I was a fool to believe, but know better now.

After the reading of the letter Osborne said:

"On Feb. 15, prior to the receipt of that letter, I had a telephone conversation with a person who called herself Rae Tanzer. I said to this person, in substance: 'Am I talking to Miss Tanzer? Why do you mail letters to me? I don't know you and never saw you in my life.' She replied, in substance: 'I know who you are and I know what I am doing. I know that you are the right man and so do you know it.' Then she began to talk so rapidly that I could not understand her, and I hung up the receiver."

Osborne said that he had called at the New York Athletic club on Feb. 16 for the first time, as well as he could remember, since Oct. 21, and had found seven letters there for him, all apparently written by Rae Tanzer. From one of these letters, he said, he obtained the telephone number by which he reached Miss Tanzer on the occasion of the telephone conversation to which he testified. After the conversation, he said, the letter read in court and another reached him at his office.

Only one of the letters mailed to Osborne at the athletic club was put in evidence. It was written on the business stationery of Farrington & Evans, manufacturers of women's hats at 134 West Fourteenth street, and was dated Oct. 21, 1914. It read:

Dear Oliver: It was a mistake. I got the number twisted; it should be Greeley 1130, not 3011, as I said. You see, I didn't just think for the moment, as I haven't been with this firm very long.

Found my mistake the next morning and felt terrible over same. Tried to get Greeley 301, but was told their phone was discontinued. Waited for you Tuesday evening until 9:30, thinking you would understand it was all an error, but you didn't come. I nearly went mad.

You ought to know, after Monday, that I cared for you, and I gave up the doctor for you. Please let me hear from you soon. Will wait at home for you every evening. Yours RAE.

On the margin of the letter was written: "952 Aldus street. Telephone Melrose 4960, Tanzer apartment. Will explain how I traced you when I see you. You see I do care."

The telephone number mentioned in the letter, at which, it is alleged, Miss Tanzer expected Mr. Osborne to call her up, is that of Farrington & Evans.

Miss Tanzer's signatures on her affidavits in the civil suit against Osborne were introduced to show that she had written the letters.

In reply to questions relative to a telephone conversation with Miss Tanzer Osborne said he had talked to the woman from the Roma restaurant at Fiftieth street and Sixth avenue. He admitted that the telephone call to Miss Tanzer's home had been put in by Miss Emma S. Ferris, one of the employés in his office, and that he had taken the receiver after Miss Tanzer had gone to the phone.

Osborne swore that the seven letters addressed to him at the Athletic club and the two sent to his office were all he had received from Miss Tanzer.

Mr. Slade in high pitched voice said:

"Mr. Osborne, can you look at this girl and swear——"

"I don't want to look at her," Mr. Osborne interrupted.

Mr. Slade appealed to the commissioner, who replied that he could not make the witness look at any one.

"Do you know a girl named Kaiser?" shouted Mr. Slade, but the question was barred, in spite of the lawyer's plea that he was trying to impeach the integrity of the witness. While Mr. Slade and the commissioner were disputing the point Mr. Osborne interposed:

"I'd like to say I do know Miss Kaiser. What's the harm in it?"

Mr. Slade held up the picture of Mr. Osborne inclosed in the letter of Feb. 16 and asked the witness if he admitted the likeness.

"Yes, it's a picture of me," Mr. Osborne said. "It looks like one made by a man named Pach in 1905, when I was running for district attorney."

The audience laughed at this rejoinder, and Commissioner Houghton had to rap for order.

"Were you ever charged with an offense at Red Bank, N. J.?" was Mr. Slade's next question.

"Yes," retorted Osborne. "For baseball on Sunday."

Mr. Slade tried to make the witness tell whether he ever had been charged with a more serious offense or had been a defendant before the Bar association, but the commissioner would not permit the question.

Osborne was questioned by Mr. Wood on redirect examination, and to verify that the witness actually had talked over the telephone to Rae Tanzer the prosecutor introduced an affidavit made yesterday by Miss Tanzer in her civil suit in which she stated that the conversation took place and that Mr. Osborne had "put a dummy on the phone" and then had said that Miss Tanzer had not recognized his voice.

Tells of Phone Conversation.

The present proceedings against the Slades goes over, in many instances, the same ground covered in the above mentioned and preceding trials. On June 26, in the United States District court in New York City, during the Slade proceedings interesting testimony was brought out through the efforts of Martin W. Littleton, who is defending the Slades, and by Assistant United States District Attorney Wood, who is conducting the prosecution.

Wood drew out the admission that David Slade in a telephone conversation told Osborne that he had better marry Rae Tanzer, whom he met on the street. This gave Osborne a chance to say, dramatically, that he had replied:

"Marry a girl I met in the street? What nonsense!"

Osborne admitted this conversation took place on March 8 and was the result of a mistake in confusing the name of Jack Slaght and David Slade. He testified that one of his office employés had told him the former wished to speak to him. After seeking Slaght, whose name is pronounced Slate, Osborne testified he called up the offices of Slade & Slade.

Regarding the conversation that took place between himself and David Slade—the conversation that had to do with Slade's alleged belief that Osborne was the man who had been friendly with Rae Tanzer and had written her letters—Osborne testified in part as follows:

"I told Mr. Slade it was a mistake—that I was in Providence at the time mentioned by the girl. I was trying a case in Providence," Osborne continued. "I begged Mr. Slade to let me go down to his office when he said he had some letters said to have been written to the girl by me. I remember distinctly I said:

"'That's good. I will write you six barrels of letters and it will prove to you those letters you have were not written by me!'

"But Mr. Slade told me the letters were supposed to have been written by a friend of mine and delivered to the girl by me. I said I considered it the most absurd thing in the world to suppose a man would have a friend write love letters to a girl and then take the letters to her himself."

"Oliver" Some Little Spender.

Also at this hearing "Oliver Osborne" became less of a myth and more of a real, live, breathing, money flinging good fellow whose charms were infallible and whose love affairs were as frequent almost as the city blocks. At least, this was the impression given by the testimony of some of the members of the "Oliver Osborne" sextet.

The members of this supposed sextet, it is contended by the government, fell victims to the wondrous charms of an "Oliver Osborne," who was if anything a Don Juan, a Lothario, a prince d'amour.

Miss Rose Helen Kaiser, the second of the "sextet" put on the stand by the prosecution, testified that the Oliver she knew was tall and athletic, had a "nice mouth," and had beautiful violet eyes. She swore that he bore no resemblance to James W. Osborne, who sat before her in court.

Miss Kaiser said on direct examination that she had received three letters from Oliver, but on cross-examination was persuaded to admit that none of them had come through the mail. All, she said, had been delivered by the missing Oliver in person when he called at her Bronx home in the evening.

"And you promised, after taking the first of these letters to Slade & Slade to prove you knew the Oliver Osborne that Miss Tanzer was said to have been running around with, to bring the other two next day, didn't you?" inquired Littleton.

"Yes," replied the witness.

"And you didn't do it, did you?"

"No. I went to see my lawyer and he advised me to go first to the office of James W. Osborne."

"And what happened there?"

"I was introduced to Mr. Osborne and he said: 'I never saw you before in my life.' I said: 'I've never seen you either, Mr. Osborne.' He wanted to know what I knew about Oliver Osborne and asked me if he looked anything like him. I told Mr. Osborne he was old enough to be Oliver's father."

Then, said the witness, Osborne told Edmund Wilcox, a law associate, to take her to the United States district attorney's office. There, she said, she saw and talked with Assistant United States Attorney Hershenstein and made an affidavit setting forth what she knew of Oliver Osborne.

With others of the Oliver Osborne sextet to testify, with promises of the production of "Oliver" himself, with the present hearing only begun, what will the coming week bring forth?

And until something definite is brought forth the real identity of Rae Tanzer's alleged companion at Plainfield, N. J., on Oct. 18, 1914, will remain as much of a mystery as ever.

PAVLOWA AT THE MIDWAY GARDENS.

MISS BEATRICE RAYMOND

Notes and Gossip of the Music World.

By Ronald Webster.

Harrison Wild, the director of the Apollo club, who was operated upon for appendicitis twice this spring, is reported convalescent. He expects to spend the summer at Plum Lake, Wis.

The Apollo club plans to try the experiment of giving one of its four concerts in Medinah temple, on the north side. Mr. Grabo, the secretary of the club, explains that it may bring out large audiences of north side people. The other concerts will be given at Orchestra hall and the Auditorium. "The Messiah" will be given twice, as usual.

Charles W. Clark, the baritone, gives four recitals this month at the Bush temple assembly rooms. "The object of the series is to provide an opportunity for summer students to hear the best lieder," said Mr. Clark. "There are about 10,000 now in the city." They will be given on July 10, 17, 24, and 31.

John McCormack's first engagement in America, it is said, was in the "Irish village" at the St. Louis exposition eleven years ago. His salary was then $48 a week. Last season he gave ninety concerts to gross receipts of $375,000. With his concert work and his phonograph royalties Mr. McCormack made about $250,000 during the season.

Mabel Sharp Herdien of Chicago has been engaged for the next Worcester (Mass.) festival. She will sing the part of Alain in the "Children's Crusade" by Pierne when it is given in October.

Geraldine Farrar will not be alone in the presentation of "Carmen" for the movies. Her rival is none other than Emma Calvé, whose Carmen was long considered the only adequate incarnation of Merrimee's gypsy girl. Her husband came to this country especially to play one of the rôles in the filmed opera.

In the wake of Apollo club's cancellation of its tour to the coast there have been various unpleasant occurrences. The latest is a threatened suit against the Chicago and Northwestern railroad by the Inside inn at the exposition. The railroad made reservations for the members of the club.

Arthur Dunham's admirable orchestra at the Strand theater complained the other day that when they accepted their positions they thought the work would be easier. One of the men is reported to have remarked that they have to play "too much good music."

That he may be prepared in all ways for at least the first three weeks of his season, Mr. Campanini has written to the business staff of the Chicago Opera association to say that he must have the exclusive use of the Auditorium for the fortnight starting Nov. 1. When, soon after he left Chicago, in April, to range battle scarred Europe for singers and new operas, Mr. Campanini first explained that he would require the big opera house for the two weeks immediately preceding the opening of the season, his letter provoked a measure of consternation at this end, for the Auditorium's bookings from Labor day to the Saturday preceding Thanksgiving have always been what theatrical managers are fond of describing as "solid." Besides which, they have always been profitable for the big theater. So a letter was posted to the general director explaining these things and some others—as, for example, that the revenue from two weeks' bookings would pay for not fewer than four of Miss Farrar's appearances, or John McCormack's, or Titta Ruffo's. Then, after the letter was posted to Paris it dawned upon the resident staff that if Mr. Campanini might not use the Auditorium for his rehearsals for those two weeks, where would he go and what would he do?

Chicago will have a taste of opera earlier than Nov. 15, and in the Auditorium, too. The week of Oct. 4 has been selected by Max Rabinoff for the opening of his new Pavlowa entertainment of ballet and opera. It was his original plan to open Oct. 11 in New York, but the readjustment of the Chicago schedule as a result of Mr. Campanini's requirements for the opera company decided Mr. Rabinoff to come here first, rather than to wait until after Lent of 1916. He, too, must do some rearranging, in consequence, and some quick rehearsing as well, in order to offer a change of bill nightly in the Auditorium. We shall that week hear for the first time in many years Auber's "Masaniello" under its new title of "Fenella; or, the Dumb Girl of Portici," with Pavlowa as the mute, and we shall be the first community to see her in at least two of her new ballets.

This, That and the Other Concerning the Theaters.

"On Trial" reached the end of its New York City run last night, when it was acted there for the three hundred and seventy-fifth time. "It Pays to Advertise," produced there about the same time, is still running. So is "Twin Beds," a failure in Chicago in the spring of last year. These three plays and "Chin-Chin," which is still on view, hold the season's records in New York, where "Daddy Longlegs" also had a long run.

Fred Niblo and Josephine Cohan [Mrs. Niblo] are back after three years' activity in Australia, where they were immensely popular. Among the plays in which they acted were "The Fortune Hunter," "Get Rich Quick Wallingford," "Officer 666," "Seven Keys to Baldpate," "Broadway Jones," and "Stop Thief!" Mr. Niblo, in this country, has been known only as a monologist in the variety theaters. Mrs. Niblo was one of the Four Cohans and as a very small girl danced with her now famous brother in old-fashioned sketches and "afterpieces" prepared by the elder Cohan.

A trained dog is the most important performer in "Me and My Dog," by Frederic Ballard. The play, a farce, will be tried out on July 12 by Cohan & Harris. William Sampson and Forrest Robinson are well known players who will be with the dog in the cast.

Miss Laurette Taylor, Miss Elsie Janis, Miss Maggie Teyte, Miss Ethel Levey, and Mme. Rejane were among the contributors to the program at a recent war benefit performance in London. All the performers were women.

Thomas A. Wise would appear to be in uncommon demand. Various managers a renouncing him to take part in "Back Home," made from the Irvin Cobb stories; in "Hands Up!" the revue in which Lew Fields was to have acted this summer; in "The Song of Songs," in which Mr. Wise acted last season; and in a play concerning Phineas Turner Barnum, the showman. He is supposed facially to resemble Barnum.

What is believed to be the record for receipts of a performance given for charity is reported from Australia, where the sum of $550,000 was obtained by a street collection, the sale of tickets at a premium, and donations. The proceeds were for war sufferers.

Tully Marshall, remembered for his gymnastic performance as a drug user in "The City," is to act for the movies. He should do well.

Cyril Maude, through with his engagement to act in "Peer Gynt" for the films, thus describes his experience as a picture player: "Next to being a stoker in the hold of a retreating battleship, it's the best job in the world!"

Philip Merrivale, who acted the name part of "Pygmalion" last January with Mrs. Campbell at the Blackstone, is to be in "Pollyanna." The date of the Chicago engagement, also at the Blackstone, is now set as Aug. 30.

Miss Elsie Janis is to act in "The Missing Link," a play by Paul Dickey, author of "The Misleading Lady" and "The Ghost Breaker." In this it is announced, she will make her appeal without singing, dancing, or mimicry.

Donald Brian proposes to protect himself and his managers from being damaged by his performances in photograph plays. His contracts provide that the films whereon he is pictured shall not be exhibited in any city within a month of his appearance there. Mr. Brian, who has been golfing at Exmoor of late, is now in Hollywood, Cal., posing for Harold MacGrath's "The Voice in the Fog."

Ralph Herz has been engaged to replace Lew Fields in "Hands Up." Miss Irene Franklin also has been put into the piece.

Variety stage actors are starting to check up on the comic sketches used for the movies. Bert Leslie has gone to law to obtain an accounting of the profits on films which, he alleges, made unauthorized use of the several rough-hewn little plays in which he acted the part of Hogan. An analyst of such things finds Chaplin's film called "Work" is made up in about equal parts of two well known comic sketches—Edmund Hayes' "The Piano Movers" and Willard Sims' "Flinders' Furnished Flat," in which, as patrons of the Majestic and Palace recall, Sims is an amateur and awkward paperhanger.

"Ben Hur" will not be acted next season. It was first shown late in 1899, and for some seasons was acted by two companies.

Miss Gertrude Hoffmann, the wisest showman and the least talented performer in the varieties, is to use a one-act version of "Sumurun" in the two-a-day. Lacking anything even remotely savoring of timidity, she will undertake the part in which the gifted and pliant Leopoldine Konstantin acted in 1912 at the Garrick.

Both Mr. Ziegfeld and Mr. Dillingham are planning to stage new revues in the autumn. The former is credited with the best achievement of his career in "The Follies of 1915." Trouble growing out of its contents threatens him from three sides. The Roman Catholics object to Miss Ina Claire's song in the character of Marie-Odile; a gag of Bert Williams' has given offense to the Jews, and a minor writer for the stage is at law seeking to compel Mr. Ziegfeld to cut out the comic hit of the show—a burlesque rehearsal of movie actors. This litigant, Jean Havez, wrote "Curse You, Jack Dalton!" in which, some months ago, Jack Gardner appeared in the Majestic. It was a travesty on melodrama, with Gardner, as the villain, speaking all the dialogue, while the players on the screen moved in keeping with the speeches.

The Olympic, it is planned, will be the first of the theaters now closed to be opened for the new season. Richard Bennett is billed to act there in mid-August in "Kick In!" His will be the part which John Barrymore played last season in New York.

While Bernard Granville's notion in going into the farce of "He Comes Up Smiling" is that he therein may prove that he is an actor rather than a song-and-dance man, his manager is of the belief that the chances of the comedy in Chicago will be far better if some choristers and songs are put into it.

Douglas Fairbanks, who remains in no play for long, is expected next season to head the cast of "She's In Again!" This, a farce from the French, has been through a brief New York run.

David Braham Jr. is dead. He was the actor of the tout, "Push" Miller in "Checkers" for five years of the great vogue of Henry Blossom's first play, and was immensely effective in the character. He carried the suffixed "Jr." in token of the fact that he was the son of that "Dave" Braham who composed the music for the long series of plays associated with the name of the late Edward Harrigan. Not even the songs of George M. Cohan or Victor Herbert have had a greater popularity than those of Braham in the days when Harrigan was in activity as playwright and player.

Lew Fields, it is expected, will take the place vacated by Alexander Carr as the star of a play written in Yiddish by Samuel Shipman and rewritten in Broadwayese by him and Miss Clara Lipman. Mr. Fields first will collect a great deal of money by acting for the films. It is said that Mr. Belasco also desires to look after Mr. Fields' career for the future, and that he has a play which he regards as proper for that actor.

John Drew, it seems, has not yet formally agreed to act his old part in a revival of the late Capt. Marshall's "The Duke of Killicrankie," remembered as one of the best of his vehicles. He is said to be unwilling again to play the part of the title if he can get a new play to please him. The plan has been to cast Francis Wilson in the part played eleven seasons ago by Ferdinand Gottschalk, and Miss Marie Tempest in that then acted by Miss Fanny Brough. It is unlikely that the revival will be made without Mr. Drew.

"The Mystic Shrine," a comedy by Avery Hopwood, will be given a trial this week in Atlantic City. Miss Madge Kennedy, Miss Lucille Watson, Ferdinand Gottschalk, and John Westley are well known players in it.

Miss Jane Cowl, who for five weeks was the star of "The Songbird," and John Mason are to act next month in a New York experiment with "Common Clay," which had a run in Boston after it was selected as a "Harvard prize play." So far Miss Cowl's successor in the Hattons' drama has not been officially named. It is suspected that the scheme to put Miss Mary Garden in the part has been abandoned because of her belief that she is worth no less as an actress than she was paid as a singer.

New York movie managers are back of a bill in the legislature which would abolish all forms of official censoring of films.

Competitive imitations of Charles Chaplin are a new device to draw in the minor variety theaters. They are open to all affairs. McVicker's is to try the scheme.

Music in the Parks.

AT THE BISMARCK GARDEN—Mahl's Philharmonic band in popular programs. A program of American music will be given today and tomorrow in celebration of the Fourth of July. Three musical revues are given each evening, featuring Mlle. Luxanne, classic dancer, and Miss Doris Reber, soprano. There is outdoor dancing here, under the trees.

AT RAVINIA PARK—Chicago Symphony orchestra, with Frederick Stock conducting. The orchestra plays symphonic programs of the more popular kind. One novelty, a suite by Eric De Lamarter, called "For the Children," is on the program twice. Thursday afternoon is dedicated to the children and Friday evening to Wagner. Miss Joan Sawyer, "high priestess of the modern dance," continues to dance each evening in the first half of the program. She is assisted by George Harcourt. Social dancing in the out of door pavilion may be indulged in both before and after the concerts.

AT THE MIDWAY GARDENS—Anna Pavlowa and her corps of Russians in repertory. "The Magic Flute," a novelty in this part of the country, will be danced on Tuesday and Friday evenings. "Puppen-Fee" will be presented tonight, tomorrow afternoon, and Wednesday evening. "Flora's Awakening" is scheduled for tomorrow evening and Thursday evening. Each of the ballets will be followed by a series of divertisements. Max Bendix will conduct the National Symphony orchestra in regular programs during the week.

Recent Drownings Are Held Responsible for Decrease in Rush of Visitors to Atlantic City.

By Burns Mantle.

Atlantic City, N. J.—[Special Correspondence.]—From the Inlet to Chelsea, which is to say from the upper end of the board walk to a point where life again becomes passive and suburban in this summer metropolis, they still talk of "the drownings" and the effect "the drownings" may have on "the season."

The drownings, you may recall—eight of them in one day—occurred two weeks ago—on Sunday, June 20, to be exact—and they are now held by the natives as being generally responsible for the failure of the annual and expected rush of visitors to get under way.

"Why," demands a vigilant local press, "why should Atlantic City be censured for its failure to provide a foolproof ocean? Even God can't do that?" "Why, indeed?" echoes the 51,000 resident population, impatiently, not to say peevishly.

"But," observes the cautious correspondent who writes to the editor, "at Asbury Park whenever the ocean kicks up a fuss and is in ugly mood, or is convicted of having been on a tear elsewhere and ready to vent its cross current spite on the Jersey coast, they order the bathhouses closed and no one goes in."

"True enough," replies Atlantic City, "but in the first place at Asbury Park all the bathhouses are owned by one syndicate and this precaution is easy; in the second place, more people go surf bathing at Atlantic City any fair Sabbath day than at Asbury Park in a whole week, and, in the third place, who wants to bathe at Asbury Park in the first place?" Or more diplomatic words to that general effect.

That "the drownings" have discouraged many prospective vacationers and had some effect in deterring the timid who are present from venturing into the surf, even on mild days, is unquestionably true. "We're not bathing half the people we should," explained the affable cashier of the Casino.

Which, to digress for the purpose, recalled a query we once heard Supt. Zeddies of the Grand Opera house, Chicago, put to his leading usher. The lad had returned to the lobby from a tour of the orchestra circle with the between-the-acts water tray. "Are you sure you watered the front boxes?" demand the ever watchful Zeddies.

"The drownings" may have, as said, discouraged bathing, but they have also made life comparatively simple for the bronzed young men of the beach patrol. Most every one is content these days to stay well inside the last line of breakers. This, the experts insist, is always a safe location, no matter how angry the ocean may be. In fact, we noticed many jaunty but heavy tourists inclined to flesh, and probably to heart disease, who were quite satisfied to wade no farther out than necessary to cover their too solid foundations.

Here they have been content to remain and sport with such trifling rollers as might break over their superstructures and dash the salt spray into their happy and frequently open faces. But if father and, more particularly, if daring brother offered to continue into the deep until he was up to his armpits there was a highly vocalized protest. Father was tearfully pleaded with to please, p-lease be careful, and brother threatened with everything from the curtailment of his allowance to such a beating as he never dreamed could be humanly possible.

The beach belles are not yet seen in profusion. They are, however, expected this particular week end. In fact, the Fourth of July is being counted upon literally to lift the resort to its feet. The pronounced styles, so far as our unpracticed eye may judge, favor half hose with the belle's bathing suit and white fox furs on rose colored silk sweaters for her evening promenade. The half hose effect, we are privately instructed, is gained by the use of two-colored stockings (an ancient fad, in sooth), the lower half being black from the toes to above the shoetops and the upper half flesh colored from that point to the visual limits. Still, they were more or less a surprise to us and will be, we feel sure, to others. Particularly to those near-sighted friends who fail to take their glasses with them to the beach.

The fur trimmed sweaters look rather chic and natty on the walk, but when you see them whirling in the center of an inclosed ballroom, covering lady birds whose most persistent efforts with miniature powder puffs leave them still red faced and perspiracious, they appear as foolishly out of place as all the rest of fashion's smart fol-de-rols.

The summer amusement season has been running along in lackadaisical spring fashion for several weeks, but until recently there has been too much rain and fog and not enough hot weather to make the piers popular. Now they are all running full blast. Ballrooms are still a well liked feature. We were interested in the division of the crowd at one of these resorts, where a 15 cent admission fee covers several entertainments. Upstairs, listening to a very sad minstrel show, was an audience of 500.

Farther on, in a glass inclosed concert room, probably sixty, not more than a hundred, people were paying some sort of serious attention to a semi-classical musical program offered by an Italian band of advertised fame. Beyond this 100 couples were dancing in the ballroom, where two orchestras made encores unnecessary and as many more looked on.

Outside, where the moon, full and glorious, was shining brilliantly and a gentle ocean breeze was prepared to inject a health breeding ozone into tired systems, presumably gathered at Atlantic City for the recreative purpose of receiving same, a half dozen couples spooned unconcernedly. Vaudeville and the dance, minstrel shows and cabarets, grillrooms and beer gardens—it is to these very largely that vacations are still devoted.

Theatrically there is the usual advance season stir. Two weeks ago Cohan and Harris tried "The House of Glass" and received a favorable verdict. It will, if local report is correct, prove one of the worth-while dramas of the new list. Irvin Cobb and Bayard Veiller's comedy, "Back Home," does not look so good, but is back again at the tinker's and may yet prove a surprise. This week "That Girl," owned by David Belasco and the Frohman estate, and written by George Scarborough of "The Lure" and "At Bay" record, was given its trial performances. We gather from the accounts that it is another of the vim, vigor, and vitality series which includes a discussion of how much a man can forgive a woman and still remain a member of the popular hero club. Next week Avery Hopwood's new farce, "The Mystic Shrine," relating the experiences of two young married women who try to be free and devilish like their husbands, is to be done by the Selwyns.

Miss Doris Reber is one of the chief entertainers at the Bismarck garden. She sings and looks pretty. Miss Reber has a charming voice.

Cyril Scott, who traces his melodic outpourings to the music of astral spheres, writes the following letter to Musical America explaining the relation of color and sound:

In response to the question asked in one of your columns respecting color and music looked at from the point of view of a clairvoyant, I am in a position to give you the following facts:

Each note has its own hue, and therefore it is quite correct to state that a musical work has absolute colors pertaining to itself. The table here set forth gives each note and its corresponding color vibration, with its emotional attribute attached:

C, red, power.
E, yellow, intellect.
F, green, sympathy.
G, blue, devotion.
A, indigo, selfless love.
B, violet, psychism.

The semitones are, as may be readily imagined, a midway shade between these colors. I may add that in addition to the various tints produced by a musical composition there is also its thought form, and for an interesting treatise on this matter the student is advised to read a work of theosophical tendency called "Thought Forms," by Mrs. Annie Besant and C. W. Leadbeater, wherein are depicted some of these remarkable form and color phenomena.

Needless to say, the whole subject is too vast to be cramped into a letter, but I hope to deal with this phase of musical occultism in another article destined for the Monthly Musical Record.

Believe me, dear sir,
Faithfully yours,
CYRIL SCOTT.
London, June 8, 1915.

Hardy Williamson, one of the tenors who regaled Century opera patrons here last year, has been married to Isabelle Price, a soprano of Sunderland, England. Mr. Williamson will make America his home in the future. He has now a New York church engagement.

Another of the Century company men, Ernst Knoch, the conductor, has taken out his first citizenship papers and has publicly repudiated everything German except German music. It was, he said, the use of gas and the sinking of the Lusitania which caused his determination.

A new suite by Henry Hadley of San Francisco, composer of the "ragtime symphony" played here last winter, was presented by the Waldorf-Astoria hotel orchestra in New York recently. It is called "The Atonement of Pan"—a rearrangement of music composed for a performance of the Bohemians at San Francisco several years ago.

John Philip Sousa has been engaged as director of music by Charles Dillingham for the productions at the New York Hippodrome. The use of a band instead of an orchestra with theatrical performances is, if not unprecedented, at least startling. Mr. Sousa has promised a new march for the opening in September.

Carrie Jacobs-Bond is writing music to two short poems by A. L. Flude. One of them is called "Alone." It expresses the feelings of a man impressed with the enormity of the Universe.

Simon Buchhalter's "Love Knot" will be given a private hearing at Mr. Charles Dawes' house in Evanston on the evening of Tuesday, July 20. Augusta Lenska, the contralto; Hazel Eden Mudge, soprano; Beecher Burton, tenor; Lemuel Kilby, baritone.

Theodore Spiering, the violinist, will be heard in recital again next season. He taught in Berlin for a number of years and returned to New York when war came. Carreno, however, remained in Berlin, and had a season so successful that she will not visit America until 1916-'17.

LATEST NEWS FROM MOVIE LAND

CUMMINGS IN NEW ROLE.

Irving Cummings, starring in "The Diamond from the Sky," has been selected to impersonate Thomas Jefferson in the Four of July celebration in Santa Barbara, Cal., tomorrow. In a tableau following the signing and reading of the Declaration of Independence Winifred Greenwood will appear as the Goddess of Liberty.

Elmer Booth, a prominent comedian, was killed in an automobile accident June 16. Tod Browning and George Siegman, well known directors and actors, were injured at the same time. All three are members of the Mutual company. It is believed that Mr. Browning and Mr. Siegman's injuries will not prove serious.

Marguerite Loveridge of the Mutual company has been persuaded by her friends to take her own name, which is Marguerite Marsh. Instead of keeping the name of Marguerite, however, she will be known as "Lovey" Marsh, because ever since she entered motion pictures she has been called that. Miss Marsh is the sister of Mae Marsh.

Cleo Madison and Ray Hanford, both members of the Gold Seal-Universal, were stricken with pneumonia last week. Both have been suffering with heavy colds and while finishing a Gold Seal picture were taken ill. Miss Madison was taken home and Mr. Hanford to the hospital in Universal City.

Sir Gilbert Parker's greatest novel, "Jordan Is a Hard Road," which critics have pronounced to be as good if not better than "The Right of Way" and "Seats of the Mighty," penned by Sir Gilbert, will appear in the near future as a Mutual masterpicture. Preparations are now under way at the Majestic studios in Hollywood, Cal., for the filming of this story of the great northwest.

"The Ash Can," one of the Majestic series of childhood comedies, acted by children and presented on the screen, is to be seen this week in local theaters using the products of the company, whose general manager is D. W. Griffith. When "The Ash Can" was made on the Pacific coast an accident resulted in a scene which, while excellently photographed, could not be used. The action calls for little Carmen de Rue, as small Detective Dick's stenographer, to be placed in an ash can, which is subsequently thrown into the sea. Carmen is required to crawl out before the can is hurled into the water. But, being a child, the little girl had a sense of mischief. When the can was being rescued because of the small villain's belief that the little stenographer was still in it, Carmen came wading into the scene. She explained gravely that she thought it would be nice to be in a scene with her feet in the water, so she had vacated the can.

A couple of little feathered balls of animation are to be seen chasing after a clucking hen at the Selig Jungle zoo. The chicks are scrubby appearing affairs in their infantile state, but for all that are worth $3,000 the pair. The infants are the rarest of pheasants which the hen is mothering.

Miss Phyllis Grey of the Balboa company, who has distinguished herself in a number of "vampire" parts since reaching Long Beach, Cal., is now hobbling around the studio on crutches, receiving the congratulations and commiserations of her friends. Three weeks ago she broke her left leg just above the ankle and has had the fractured member in a plaster cast.

One of the many intensely interesting scenes in the Reliance production, "The Fortification Plans," is a leap of thirty-five feet from a bridge into the water, made by a little girl of 6 years. The little girl is Josephine Ashton, the champion child high diver in this country. The leap was made from the Los Angeles Hollenbeck park bridge under the direction of Director Jack Conway. In this scene Elmer Clifton, who plays the part of an army officer in love with the little girl's sister, also makes a leap and rescues the little sister. Little Miss Ashton in 1912 won the $300 cup offered by the National Swimming association for high diving.

Here are some changes which will probably be of interest to you:

Weber & Fields have signed a three year contract to appear exclusively with the Keystone company.

Jane Cowl has joined the Universal forces and will play the leading rôle in "The Garden of Lies," which will be released in the near future.

Ada Gleason, former star of the spoken drama and a well known stock player in Chicago and the east, has left the Selig company and hereafter will play in Murdock MacQuarrie's company at Universal City. Elsie Jane Wilson, who played the lead with the "Everywoman" legitimate company and is well known on the Australian stage, has arrived in Universal City, where she will play leading rôles in the place of Pauline Bush with Joseph De Grasse.

Richard Markwell has been engaged for the Reliance-Majestic forces. He becomes a member of the permanent stock companies and will be cast prominently. He has had many years on the speaking stage and has appeared in the support of many stars.

Paul Bourgeois, known as one of the most fearless of animal trainers, has joined the Universal company, where he will produce animal pictures under the direction of Henry McRae. Mr. Bourgeois is well known in the moving picture world and on the vaudeville stage.

Madame Adoni Foireri, a former member of Sarah Bernhardt's company, has just been engaged for prominent rôles in Reliance and Majestic photoplays. After three years as a member of the Divine Sarah's company in her Paris theater, Madame Foireri came to the United States. Here she played in the support of a number of leading actresses. She will play type parts in a number of forthcoming Reliance and Majestic features.

A new Victor studio has been opened at 645 West Forty-third street, New York, by the Palace Play Film corporation.

D. W. Griffith has just decided upon his next multiple reel feature to follow "The Birth of a Nation." Its title is to be "The Mother and the Law." He is now at the Griffith headquarters, the Reliance-Majestic studios in Hollywood, Los Angeles, Cal. He is in the midst of preparations for the filming of "The Mother and the Law."

Miss Violet MacMillan, star of the Oz fairy tales and later leading woman of the New York Motion Picture corporation at Inceville, has joined the ranks of the Universal stars, and will be seen in leading rôles under the direction of William C. Dowlan, who will also play her leads.

Wedding bells, it is said, will soon ring for two American favorites. Who do you suppose they are?

Myrtle Stedman will be seen opposite Cyril Maude when that actor appears on the screen, and he will be in Los Angeles soon and be located at the Bosworth-Morosco studios.

Mme. Pavlowa, "queen of the dance," has signed a contract with the Universal company, and, with her famous Ballet Russe, will appear in an eight reel picture made from Auber's grand opera, "The Blind Girl of Portri."

Feature Films of the Week.

"A Woman Scorned."—American drama featuring Harry von Meter, Nan Christy, and Beatrice Van. A designing "widdy woman" is foi-ol-led!

"Fifty Years After Appomattox."—One reel Thanhouser, featuring Lorraine Huling. If you are still interested in wars you'll enjoy this.

"Little Marie."—Three reel Reliance featuring Charles West and Signe Auen. A drama of intense interest.

"Mountain Mary."—Two reel American drama featuring Vivian Rich and Joseph Galbraith. A lifelong feud was wiped out by a romance. This picture shows just how 'twas done.

"Tragedies of the Crystal Glove."—Three reel Edison drama featuring Mabel Trunelle and Bigelow Cooper. An unusual story dealing with reincarnation.

"The Criminal."—Three reel Vitagraph Broadway feature with Maurice Costello and Norma Talmadge. The district attorney prosecutes his own daughter, who is caught in a net of circumstantial evidence. Her confession saves them both.

"The Inner Brute."—Three reel Essanay drama. All star cast. A queer picture that scientists will probably scrap over.

"The Marble Heart."—Four reel Imp.-Universal featuring King Baggot. Yes, girls, the same old King. If you think money is the greatest thing in the world, see this picture and change your mind.

"The Rugmaker's Daughter."—Paramount production featuring Maude Allen.

"The Smuggler's Ward."—Two reel Biograph drama featuring Alan Hale and Gretchen Hartman. Well worth seeing.

"The Seventh Commandment."—Three reel Kalem Drama. All star cast.

Stationary Photoplays.

DODGE BROTHERS
MOTOR CAR

There is no shortage in the general motor car market.

But there is a shortage of Dodge Brothers motor cars.

It is not due to a small production, because the production has been large.

Twenty thousand of these cars have been distributed since January 1st.

This means a production in six months as large as is usually attained in as many years.

And yet there is a waiting list of those who want to be owners in your city.

And there is a similar waiting list in almost every city and almost every town.

You will bear witness that we have made no extravagant claims for the car.

We have merely insisted on its goodness.

And still the car continues to be singled out as one worth waiting for.

DODGE BROTHERS, DETROIT

The price of the car complete is $785 f. o. b. Detroit

Comment by Mme. X.

By Mme. X.

THE Fourth of July and God bless our country!

The present generation has never felt such a lively satisfaction in its nationality, such a profound realization of the benefits conferred on Americans because they are Americans as this year of our Lord 1915. Our celebrations of the country's natal day may not be so clamorous as in former years—Europe is making clamor rather repulsive just now—but it will be none the less heartfelt and sincere.

For twenty-five years Winnetka has set an example to the rest of this part of the world by its manner of commemorating the day. On the village common—a generously ample stretch of green turf with some groups of fine old elm trees—the community meets annually for a real old fashioned celebration. The Declartion of Independence is read. Patriotic songs are sung. There is an orator of the day. There are races run. The Boy Scouts perform. Often a dramatic performance, illustrating some historic incident, is given by the leading men of the village. The entire population, old and young, rich and less rich, turns out to participate in the celebration.

The community's most venerable figure is Samuel S. Greeley, over 90 years old, who has been in Chicago since 1853. He surveyed and laid out Michigan avenue in 1855.

Willard J. Bolte is chairman of the arrangements committee this year—a committee of fifty—and the program includes, besides the regulation features, swimming matches and a rifle contest, both on the beach, and a flag song especially written for the chorus of children. In the evening there will be moving pictures, dancing on the green, and fireworks. The Seventh Regiment band will fill the land thereabouts with martial melody.

In Lake Forest unwonted festivities of a communal nature will mark the day, as in all the other suburbs near Chicago.

In Kenilworth part of the ceremonies will consist of a drill of the men from the Great Lakes Naval station. There will also be swimming contests and fireworks.

There is nothing in all the world so thrilling as the patriotic rejoicings of a democracy.

To climb down from patriotism's lofty heights to the main traveled roads of social doings there is to record for the coming week two principal events: First, the meeting of the Garden club at Mrs. Edward Ryerson's, which will be on Tuesday afternoon, and secondly the baseball match on the Onwentsia club diamond on Saturday afternoon, between the Saddle and Cycle club team, under "Ed" Stanley, and the Onwentsia stalwarts, led by "Charlie" Dewey.

Grand stand seats will be $2, bleacher seats 50 cents, the proceeds to be devoted to Arden Shore Fresh Aid camp.

Already the north shore trees are beginning to lift up their leafy heads and spread their branches proudly. This is their week. Prof. James W. Toumey, director of the school of forestry of Yale university, is going to talk about them to the Garden club at Mrs. Edward Ryerson's on Wednesday and to the general public, under invitation of the Garden club, Wednesday evening at Gorton school on Illinois avenue at Lake Forest.

A forestry commission has been appointed for the north shore, with Joseph Hubbard as chairman and a city forester is at work. William M. Lewis, mayor of Lake Forest, will preside at the evening meeting, while Mrs. Tiffany Blake and other officials of the Garden club will sit on the platform.

Professor and Mrs. Toumey will be the guests of the Edward Ryersons during their stay in Lake Forest. Prof. Toumey is a great friend of Gifford Pinchot, whose work in protecting our national forests is known the length and breadth of the land.

Apropos of Lake Forest and this season's many domiciliary changes and interchanges there, noted previously in this column, is the tale of the woman of Lake Forest who has as a feature of her garden—one of the loveliest ones there—erected several birdhouses. She remarked that a family of yellow jackets were in her martin house, while some sparrows were in her wrenhouse, whereupon one of the bright and shining lights of the Lake Forest players said: "They are just following this summer's Lake Forest fashion of living in other people's houses."

The many garden lovers and garden experts of Chicago should visit the exhibit of garden literature and pictures now to be seen at the Newberry library—a collection gathered by Miss Watson and Miss Durkee. It is a unique and delightful affair where ancient botanies, quaint and curious volumes devoted to garden lore, rare old prints, and pictures of gardens can be studied.

On Thursday Miss Margaret Enders, who, with her sister, Mrs. Charles Brega, forms one of Chicago's diminishing summer colony, gathered six or seven garden lovers together for luncheon and took them to see this exhibit. They spent an hour or more studying the rare old volumes and pictures.

Last Wednesday evening there was held at Lake Forest a meeting of the horse show committee, at which were discussed plans for the annual entertainment gotten up by this organization to raise funds for the Alice hospital.

Hobart C. Chatfield-Taylor is president of the horse show board, while Allen Haines is secretary of it. Among those present at this meeting were Mrs. Robert McGann, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh McBirney, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dewey, Mr. and Mrs. Orville Babcock, Delavan Smith, Prentiss Coonley, Mrs. Orson Smith, Mrs. Louis Laflin, Mrs. Charles Edward Pope, Louis Swift, Mrs. Ralph Poole, Mrs. William P. Martin, Francis Johnson, Mrs. Mark Cummings, Mrs. Finley Barrell, and Frederic C. Aldrich.

Sweet are the fruits of election! Thomas Taylor Jr. was the guest of honor at a dinner given by the men of the Indian Hill club at Winnetka on Friday evening to celebrate his election to the bench.

It was a stag affair and very cheerful in spite of the drought which prevails at this club. If ever a place, by its general tone and spirit of good fellowship, entirely justified prohibition it is the Indian Hill club, whose long colonial verandas daily give shelter and refreshment to large groups of tired and thirsty golfers and tennis players. There is no so-called hard beverage that can touch the orangeades and grape juice cocktails served on these occasions.

One of the gay house parties celebrating this year's three days' Fourth is that which is gathered at Dixon under the hospitable roof of the Reynolds-Harvey families. The Chicago members of the group include Mr. and Mrs. Fletcher Dobyns, Miss Virginia Pope, Howard Gillette, and Eames MacVeagh.

They will not be much under the roof, however, as the Harveys have a good sized gasoline yacht, with which they are navigating the inland waterways, those almost undiscovered sources of delight to most Illinoisans. Henry Hyde of the W. G. N. gave most interesting accounts of the Hennepin canal, the Illinois river, and connecting channels recently in this paper, and it is these almost deserted channels that the Harveys with their guests are exploring.

A well merited honor was that bestowed on one of Chicago's most public spirited citizens when Harvard gave Charles M. Hutchinson the degree of bachelor of arts at the June celebrations at Cambridge.

It is hard to measure what Mr. Hutchinson has done for art in Chicago, it is of so wide and varied a nature. He has for years been one of the main pillars of the Art institute. His purchases of one of Dante Gabriel Rossetti's famous pictures, "Beatrice," a quarter of a century ago, was a great event in the art world at that time, while his personal efforts in gathering the Art institute's small but excellent collection of old masters has been recognized by calling the collection after him.

Mrs. Cecil Clark Davis, whose reputation as a portrait painter is rapidly growing, left Chicago on Friday to join her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John M. Clark, at their summer home at Marion, Mass. She has given up her trip to the Panama fair, as the Willard Straights of New York, with whom she was going, are unable to leave the east at this time.

The last six weeks of her stay here Mrs. Davis worked overtime on two portraits, which are now completed and delivered. One is of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Garfield King's 16 year old daughter, Ginevra, and the other is a likeness of Albert A. Sprague II. Both are remarkably strong pieces of work, showing the artist's increasing power and understanding. She bids fair to rival America's two great portrait painters, Jane Emmett and Cecilia Beau.

Mrs. Davis' summer studio is in a little one-roomed house in a secluded, densely wooded dell back of the Clark's summer residence. Here she puts in many hours a day of good hard work, her recreation being tennis and swimming, at both of which she is an expert.

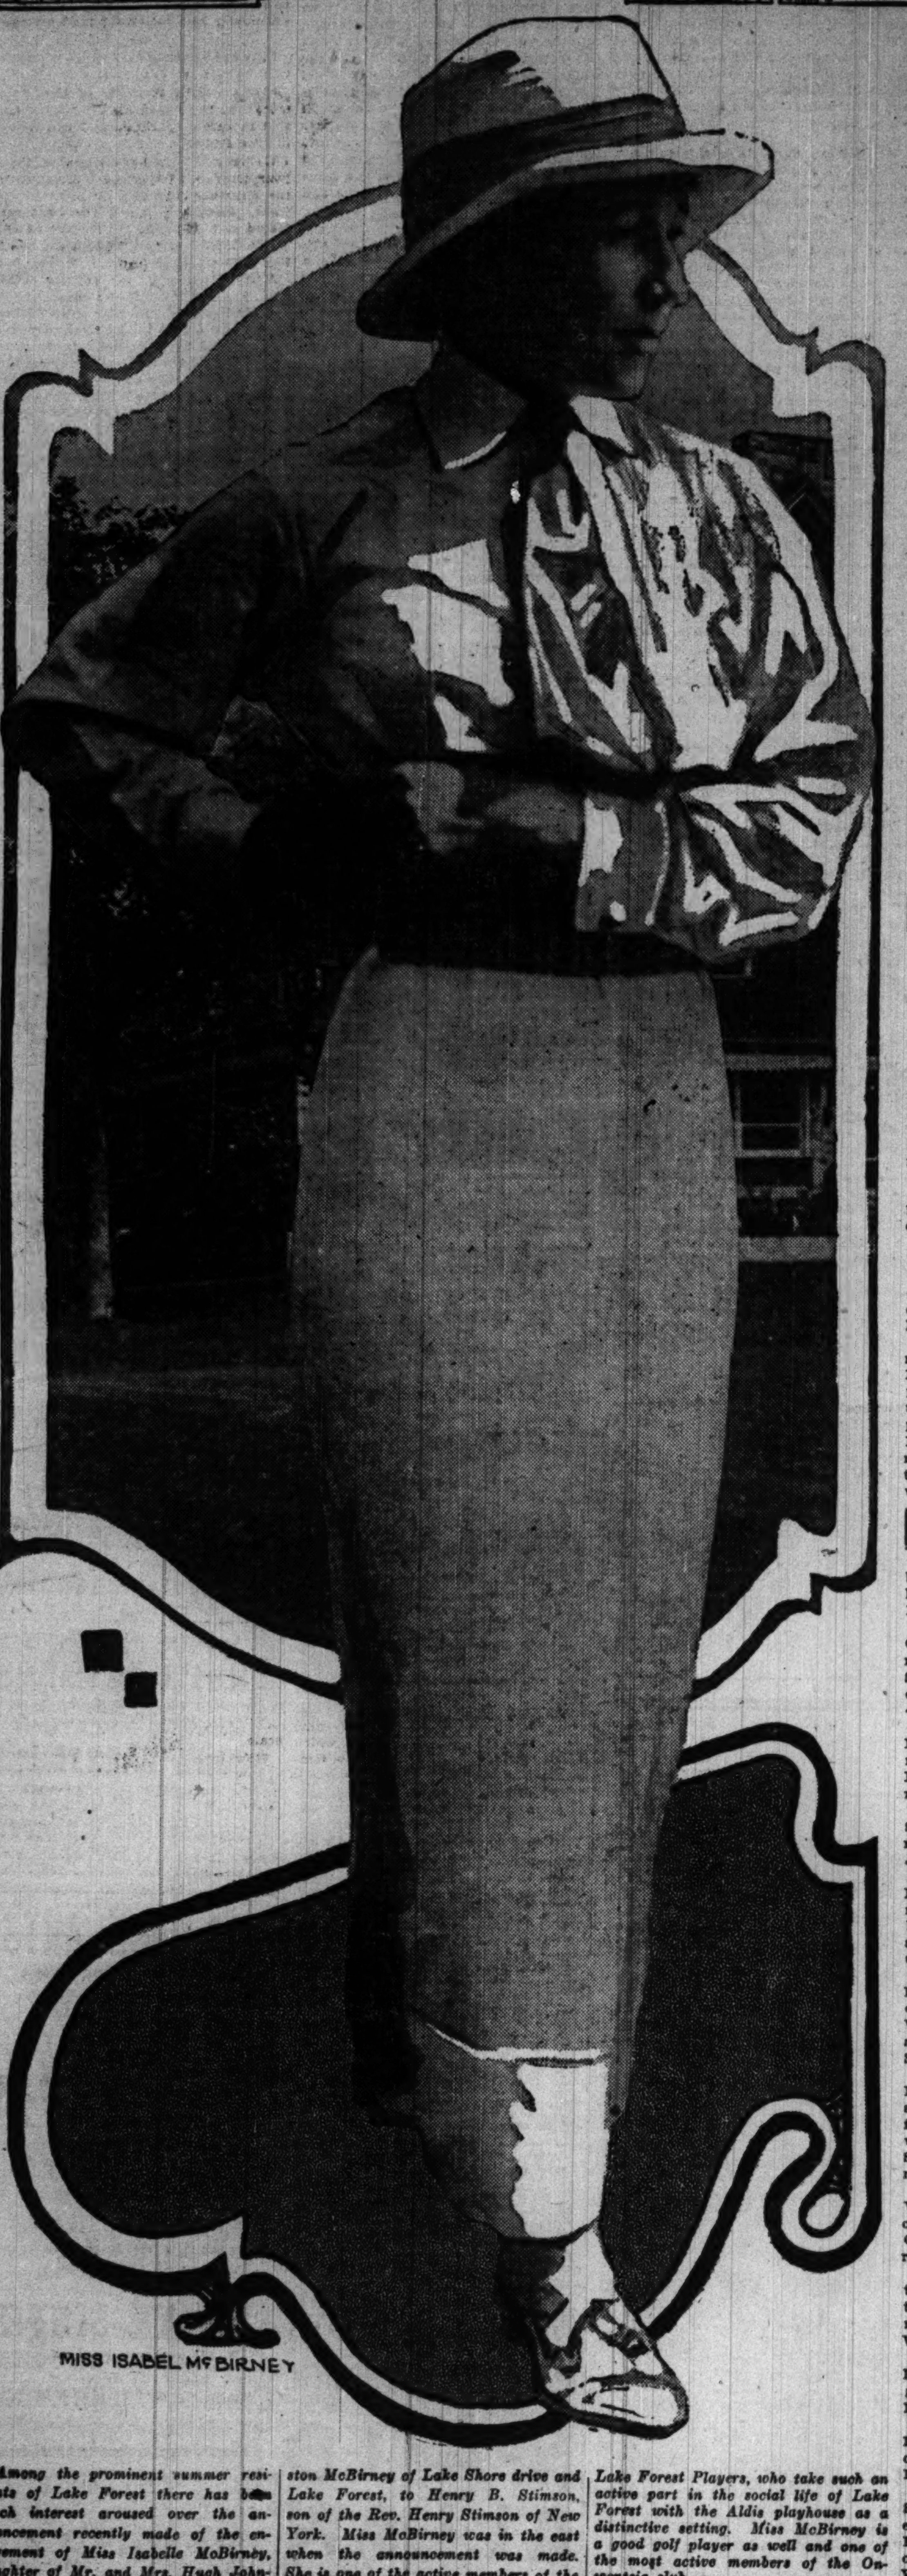
An artistic community, small but choice, nestled on the confines of Lake Forest, is that composed of the William Hendersons, Miss Katherine Dudley, and Arthur Henn in Lake Bluff. The Hendersons have long had a cottage there and to be near them in the art atmosphere which they create Miss Dudley has leased a nearby cottage, while Arthur Heun has taken one not far away, hanging on the brink of the ravine whose south brim marks the northerly confines of the Stanley Fields' place.

Miss Dudley has not yet got her cottage furnished, but Mr. Heun has completed the equipment of his, which is the "dernier cri" in that combination of the orient and occident that the wise know how to make. He has combined black and white effects with dull Persian blues and brought from his apartment in town some of his choicest Chinese bric-a-brac to adorn his sylvan retreat. Here he purposes to fulfill his life's dream of painting, which is probably the vision in the back of many an architect's mind.

The worth while architect has usually the makings in him of a painter or sculptor. In fact, it is often said that the same creative impulse is behind painters, sculptors, musicians, and poets. Paderewski paints. Dante also painted. Michael Angelo wrote a book of sonnets. Thackeray thought himself a greater artist than he was a writer, and so it goes.

A birthday party of interest to Chicagoans is that to be celebrated at the Historical society rooms, Dearborn avenue and Ohio street, next Thursday afternoon. It is the ninetieth anniversary of the birth of Mrs. Emily Beaubien Lebeau, daughter of Chicago's earliest settler, Mark Beaubien.

As this column of information is for the moment planted in the wilderness of Winnetka we have no means of renewing our knowledge of dates sufficiently to say exactly when Mark Beaubien lived in his little cabin on the north bank of the river a little west of where State street bridge now is, but we think it is correct to say that he was established here even before John Kinzie and his family lived on the land where now stands a soap factory.



Among the prominent summer residents of Lake Forest there has been much interest aroused over the announcement recently made of the engagement of Miss Isabelle McBirney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Johnston McBirney of Lake Shore drive and Lake Forest, to Henry B. Stimson, son of the Rev. Henry Stimson of New York. Miss McBirney was in the east when the announcement was made. She is one of the active members of the Lake Forest Players, who take such an active part in the social life of Lake Forest with the Aldis playhouse as a distinctive setting. Miss McBirney is a good golf player as well and one of the most active members of the Onwentsia club.

The event of the year in St. Ignatius parish will be the picnic tomorrow on the Loyola campus. There will be automobile rides, a baseball game, an athletic meet, dancing in the gymnasium, moving pictures, and a banquet at night at which the Misses Helen Younger, Marie Gibbons, Loretta Kennally, Loretta Walsh, and Dorothy Hilly will assist. There will be a fortune telling tent and some booths at which many of the young women of the parish will assist. One booth will be for soft drinks and cigars, another for candy and toys. There will be a basket lunch at noon and music all day, so that those who do not care to exert themselves may sit down and enjoy a quiet and tuneful afternoon.

By Inez Travers.

ALTHOUGH the last meeting of the Hull House Woman's club has been held for this season, enthusiastic plans for the coming year are already under way. At the last meeting an election of officers for the season of 1915-'16 was held in order that the plans to reorganize the club and enlarge it might be consummated.

The list of officers newly elected is as follows: Mrs. Laura Dainty Pelham president; Mrs. Louise De Koven Bowen, first vice president; Mrs. Lida Lehman, second vice president; Mrs. Mary Powers, third vice president; Mrs. Agnes Griffith Stewart, recording secretary; Mrs. Hazel Lehman Noyer, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Effie Slates Fucik, treasurer.

The club in the future will be departmental. It will be modernized because, as its president, Mrs. Pelham, said, "The woman's club movement is old now, and we need something in the nature of a departure to keep up our interest even in the club we love." So there will be three departments—philanthropy and civics, art and literature, and social. Mrs. Pelham said that the social department would be much in evidence.

Mrs. Pelham will teach a class in parliamentary law every Wednesday morning, beginning in October. The business meeting of the club will be held on the third Wednesday of every month, and in order to make them interesting there will be a drill in parliamentary law for fifteen minutes after every business meeting.

The programs for the year have already been planned, and are of unusual interest and novelty. On Lincoln's birthday, instead of the regular patriotic eulogies and historic summaries of the life of Lincoln which usually occupy club programs on that day, a member of the club will give personal recollections of the assassination of the great man, to which she was a witness. On Washington's birthday eight members of the club will dance the minuet in costume and there will be appropriate music.

One of the interesting programs provided by the philanthropy and civics department will be a practical demonstration of playground work given especially for the club by one of the playground teachers. Another day there will be exhibitions and lessons in modern dancing.

There are now 225 members of the club, many of whom have been in it since its organization.

Although the regular club meetings are over for this season, one event in the club year remains to be celebrated. It is the annual picnic, which will be held as usual in Glenwood park. This year it will be on July 21.

NEW YORK SOCIETY

By Mme Y.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—With weddings the predominating feature, there are all of the subsidiary motifs to this summer social season to make it characteristic. Several gem robbers have taken place, a rich woman has been sued by her butler, five fashionable dogs have been lost, everybody is moving into other people's cottages, rented for the season in lieu of his own which has green hangings when the owner has taken a sudden fancy to blue, and three war relieffetes are arranged for Newport.

Quite the most distinguished happening of the week was the altogether classy way in which the Sherwood Aldriches conducted their last jewel robbery. Conan Doyle or Mary Roberts Rinehart could have done it no better. First of all they lost a necklace consisting of seventy-one pearls and a marquise diamond ring. As soon as this was discovered to have happened Mr. Aldrich—president of the Ray Consolidated Copper company, by the way—told the Pinkertons' and they said not to tell any one else. Meantime some of the family told the neighbors, and then later the Pinkertons decided it wasn't a good plan to keep a secret after all. So Mr. Aldrich advertised—the detectives having furnished the wholly original suggestion that he offer a large reward—saying he would pay $10,000 and abstain from all questions.

This is as far as Mr. Aldrich has progressed in his robbery mystery, although the Pinkertons express every confidence that the $100,000 worth of jewelry will be returned, because it cannot be disposed of without detection, records of the distinguished jewelry having long since been placed on file with dealers.

Meantime, the young and recently wed Mrs. Angier B. Duke lost a diamond bracelet worth thirty thousand dollars on the golf links. She looked for it for an hour and got so discouraged that she turned in the alarm to the keeper of the grounds and said she would pay a large reward to the finder. The keeper said not to conduct the search that way, for the lure of the money would bring in crowds from the village. All of the guests of the club turned out to search desultorily, but without success.

Then a little caddy boy, who supports his widowed mother, asked for a day off and went to Mrs Duke to learn the details of the game she had played. Mrs. Duke received him at Sunshine, on Little Neck Bay, the estate of Maj. Dugmore of the British army, who has gone to the front. She told the child that she had played a good game everywhere except in the fifth hole, where she had hooked her drive into the rough. The little boy hurried to the fifth tee, and sighted a spot in the rough at which he estimated a womans' drive might land if hooked. He hurried to that spot and presently saw the sparkle of the gems in the long grass under an apple tree! Of course he hurried it to the clubhouse, whereupon it was immediately returned to Mrs. Duke and the little boy an hour later obeyed a summons to appear before the lady he had served. Nobody knows what he received for his reward, but he was smiling broadly when he reached the clubhouse and observed frequently. "It's more'n I could make in a year."

The only question of importance arising out of the incident I consider to be one regarding costuming for sports. It is going to become a part of the fall fashions to wear a diamond bracelet, necklace, or tiara when you golf.

Mme. Bakhmeteff has also lost a jewel. It is in the form of a brooch two and a half inches long and is valued at $5,000. She lost it on Bellevue avenue when walking to the Casino, and she offers a reward for its return.

But the marriages are more interesting after all. Miss Margery Davenport of Boltonroad, Inwood hill, New York, had one of the most picturesque weddings of the day. The bridegroom was Francis Raymond Casselman. It took place out of doors, under a big oak tree. Trees and tall flowering bushes half covered the grounds that sloped to the Hudson. The river showed through the foliage. It was like a wedding in an open grove, and the fashionable people who went out from New York to see it said it was the loveliest they had ever attended. The sun shone warmly and the breeze blew cool. The bride's attendants, all her class mates at Vassar, held white ribbons that formed an aisle to the oak tree, where a white prie-dieu tied with white flowers, rested. The procession was like the one in the daisy chain which is a part of the Vassar commencement exercises. People are still talking about the charming affair.

Miss Katherine Steele was married to Skidde von Stade, and for the second time in eighteen months the fashionable set of the east took the way from beach and cottage to the little ivy grown stone church near the Steele estate. This, like the other marriage, was a consummation of a romance of the polo field. Miss Nancy Steele and Devereux Milburn are indebted for each other to the daring game. Harold Vanderbilt was best man.

The guests, most of them, left the wedding in motors bound for the polo field, twenty miles away, where Mr. Milburn was going to play, when they suddenly found themselves the victims of something like a cloudburst. The roads went muddy and half the motors got out of commission. While the chauffeurs were pair work, the men of fashion got out lying on their backs in the mud doing re-into the road to assist as they might, and the women protected their thousands of dollars' worth of finery with newspapers as best they could. Suddenly the rain ceased as unexpectedly as it had begun, but it left its victims in a melancholy state of dampness.

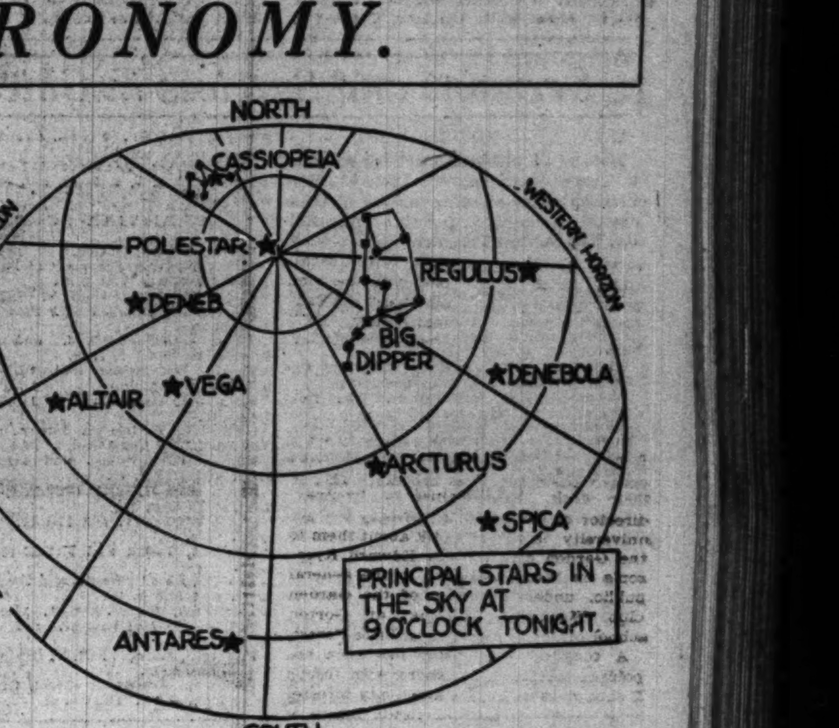
Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont is expected during the early part of July, Marble house having already been opened for her. A letter from her during the week said that she was making up her plans for the summer but she did not contemplate any large entertainments. That she might give a dance for young people during the summer there is a possibility, according to her letter, although she said that her definite plans would not be completed until after her arrival.

Mr. and Mrs. Junius Spencer Morgan, Jr., will start for Panama next Wednesday. Next winter they will live at 123 East Thirty-sixth street.

ASTRONOMY.



PRINCIPAL STARS IN THE SKY AT 9 O'CLOCK TONIGHT.

HOW TO FIND THE STARS TONIGHT.

The above sky map will make it easy to locate the principal stars now in the evening sky. It is for observation at 9 o'clock. The Big Dipper by the curve of its handle will indicate Arcturus, the first great star which the eye finds by following a projection of the curve, and Spica, the bright star about equal distance on toward the southwestern horizon. Regulus is directly west from the pole star, which, if you do not know, you can find by the Pointers in the outer edge of the Dipper's bowl. Antares is almost directly south, a red star not far from the horizon. Denebola is in the west, to the south and a little to the east of Regulus.

Beyond the pole star and to the east is the constellation Cassiopeia, the Lady in the Chair, which can be recognized by its "W." About 11 o'clock Vega will be directly overhead. At 9 it is to the east. If there should be any question of the identity of this brilliant sun, imagine a line drawn through the pointers of the Dipper to the pole star and then at right angles toward the south and east. Altair is across the Milky Way from Vega and Deneb is north of the two, forming with them a triangle.

THE LIFE OF THE SUN.

AMONG the stars whose positions tonight are described above are two which by their color will reveal the processes of inorganic evolution. One is Antares, which is red, showing that it is of low temperature. The other is Arcturus, which is white, showing that it is of higher temperature. The spectrum of the former star will reveal metallic elements; that of the other some metallic elements, but also proto-elements which are elements broken down in heat.

Arcturus is far from being a hot star, but it is conspicuous in the heavens now, and the comparison of it with Antares can easily be made.

In the spectacle of evolution being observed there arises the question of time, and this affects human history and human probabilities. Our sun is hotter than Arcturus, being conveniently called a Sirian sun, which is about half way in the scale.

How long, then, will the sun continue to give the heat which makes life possible on the earth? How does it maintain its heat? Hypothesis first denied the possibility of any chemical process prolonging the supply of heat for longer than 5,000 years. Then it was presumed that the sun maintained its heat by contraction. That was dismissed as not furnishing heat for such time as the geologists knew the earth had supported life.

If this hypothesis had been correct it was certain that life would not be possible on the earth many million years more. With the discovery of radio activity it became apparent that the sun had in its composition the elements which would continue its heating giving for untold millions of years. It is supposed that the sun's mass contains great quantities of radio active matter.

It is also known now that the earth itself is self heating. It has a radio activity which keeps its temperature constant. Radium, uranium, etc., scattered throughout the earth are sufficient for that. The earth is not cooling, but what heat it loses by conduction is made up by its own self heating processes.

ART

By Anne Ellis.

BERNARD SHAW in the brilliance of "Man and Superman," allows his heroine the bright observation that beauty blinds, or, rather, that in becoming accustomed to it we become insensible of it. "Nobody sees it after it has been in the house for half an hour." The truth of the flash was brought home to me lately when I heard two artists arguing about the whereabouts of the facsimile of the Tomb of Lorenzo de Medici in our Art institute. One of them declared we had no such thing. Artists are fairly observant as a rule—and these were not exceptions—in and out they go seeing that which they come to see only, and missing the beauty by the way which because it was motionless had become negative. If it is so with artists how much with the lay person—how much more with me!

I know the tomb of Lorenzo de Medici is on one side of the main corridor and that opposite is the sister tomb of Giuliano de Medici. I know the faces of Dawn and Twilight from those of Day and Night. The staircase that goes up between these from the center of the corridor is easy and aspiring in spite of the paradox. On its first broad landing sits Jeanne d'Arc, made intense forever by Henri Chapu, and opposite her, like some bad pope leering unavailingly into the eyes of perfect faith, is enthroned incongruously Voltaire.

Above them one may choose the trail to east or west and it is blazed with treasures which I shall not pass again unheedingly, nor will my artist friends, I suspect.

There are at present twenty-three Presbyterian schools ready for operation, and it is hoped to increase the number to thirty. Schools in the other denominations will continue to work under the direction of the Bible vacation school committee, which was in charge last year. A training school for the leaders will be held at the Aiken institute, Morgan and Monroe streets.

The TRIBUNE'S WEEKLY ALMANACK

JULY

THE VOICE OF NIGHT.

WHEN cricket and grasshopper begin the small lyrics of their lives summer has settled down. The cricket in the sweet clover gives silence a voice and by the insignificance of his sound he makes the profundity of the night.

Day is a clear and cognizable condition of men. It has limits and bounds. It is definable and intimate. It has nothing unexplored. It is open to the vision. It withholds nothing and suggests nothing that might lie beyond the reach of the perceptions.

The twilight goes, the thrush sings, the fireflies spot the thickets, and the infinite takes the place of the finite; night without bounds spreads a limitless sky over what had been inclosed and defined. Day had been of our world; night is of all worlds. Man who had been in his accustomed place with none but familiar, recognizable, and intimate objects about him, feels the presence of the unknown and the immeasurable.

The light of day had limited his vision to his own small sun. The darkness of night has widened it to a view of great suns and foundries of suns. The sky above him has receded by hundreds of light years and what has been the close ceiling of his home has fallen in and he stands exposed before infinity.

He had been large and important. He now is small and a creature of uncertain tenancy in a universe of unknown reaches. In this mood of awe the sound of the cricket comes to him, the smallest voice that the great night could have, articulate and with its own indomitable purpose.

It is plaintive in the thought of the human whose eyes have been opened by darkness to the limitless stretches spreading out from him and whose ears hear the cricket at the edge of the unknown, the sound of the ephemeral in the silence of the eternal.

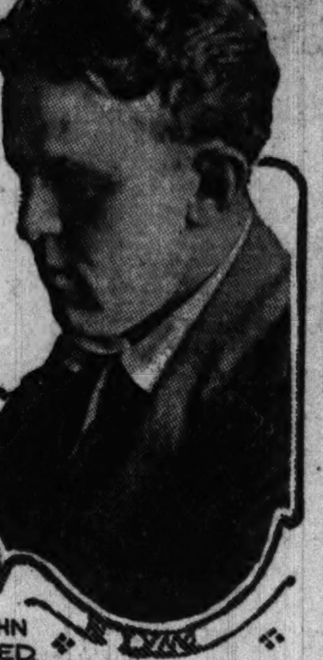
TABLOID BOOK REVIEW

by FANNY BUTCHER

REED IN RUSSIAN JAIL.

HERE is John Reed, special magazine writer and author of "Insurgent Mexico" (Appleton), the only book on Mexican affairs that makes Villa out a gentleman. He does delightful things in the magazines. How soon he will write for us again, though, there is no way of knowing, for he has been arrested in Russia for advancing without permission with the troops and has been put in jail under serious charges. If he ever gets out of jail [or, rather, when he gets out. I cannot think that he will stay there indefinitely; he's too important a person in the scheme of things] he has promised to have a book for us.



Although in these days no man can say definitely that he will depart for Europe upon a certain date, it is the intention of Dr. Hendrik Willem Van Loon to return soon to the war zone as a correspondent to make further first hand study of history in the making. He wrote that pleasantly readable history of "The Rise and Fall of the Dutch Kingdom" (Doubleday-Page), and is said now to be at work upon a history of Russia.

Despite the popularity of religion with a "punch" in it, the good old hymn book, "In Excelsis," is just as popular today as it was two decades ago. Do you remember President Wilson's condemning the hymn, "The Beautiful Isle of Somewhere," last year and the subsequent comment that condemnation caused? Many people thought that he didn't know what he was talking about. He did, though, it seems, for word has just come that during his earlier years as a teacher at Princeton he was consulting editor of this same "In Excelsis."

Philip Curtiss, author of "The Ladder" (Harpers), finds the twilight hour the best for writing. "It is the time when, if one is alone, he is most lonely, with nothing to distract his thoughts," he says. Perhaps—but isn't the twilight the logical hour for visiting our castles in the air rather than taking our typewriters in hand?

"Does Payne Erskine really know what she is talking about?" queries a correspondent who wonders if "A Girl of the Blue Ridge" (Little-Brown) is some fact or wholly fancy. Yes, she really does. She lives in the heart of the North Carolina mountains and she is earnestly interested in the education of the poor whites about whom she writes so understandingly.

Francis Perry Elliott, whose "Pals First" (Harpers) has won lots of friends for him says it takes him months before the germ of his plot, even, is ready to put on paper. When he gets everything planned in his mind he makes a rough draft of the story, sketching briefly the ground that he wants each chapter to cover. This outline is so brief that it sometimes covers only a couple of sheets of note paper. Then he starts to write, and it takes him generally about a year, as it did to finish "Pals First."

"It just depends which hand I happen to pick up my fountain pen with, which hand I start to write with," Mary Roberts Rinehart said once, when she was asked how she wrote. "I am ambidextrous. When I was a little girl I was left handed, but my teachers and parents insisted that I learn to write with my right hand also and I did. Now I am glad of it, for when the fingers of one hand become cramped and tired, I just shift my pen to the other hand and go on with my work." "Mrs. Rinehart writes all of her manuscripts in long hand, or at least she used to a few years ago," confided an ex-editorial book man to me the other day. "Always with a fountain pen and uses ruled tablet paper. Her writing is legible and her manuscripts are so neat it is hard to tell the difference between the first and the final draft of one of her stories." "K," which has been running serially for some time in one of the monthly magazines, will be published in the fall by the Houghton-Mifflin company.

The material from which Maurice Hewlett made "A Lovers' Tale" (Scribner's) consisted of two literal translations of an old saga. "One of them, the more critical and crabbed of the pair," says Mr. Hewlett, "is to be found in the second volume of York Powell's and Vigfussen's Origines Islandicae; the other, which includes a good deal omitted in the first, and is a more genial work altogether, if not so correct, is by W. G. Collingwood and Jon Stefansson."

A thick volume of serious aspect is "War: Its Conduct and Legal Results" (Dutton), an importation, apparently, from England, for the authors are T. Baty, "formerly fellow of University college, Oxford, and joint honorary secretary of the International Law association," and J. H. Morgan, "professor of constitutional law at University college, London, and late scholar of Balliol college, Oxford." Prof. Morgan is "engaged on official duties in France with the British expeditionary force," according to a note appended to the book.

Immediately after "Mary Moreland" (Little-Brown) was published, Marie Van Vorst sailed back to Paris. "Big Tremaine," her novel of last fall, is being set to movies.

On being asked why he burned Louvain Gen. von Boehn told E. Alexander Powell, "Because the townspeople fired on our troops. We actually found machine guns in some of the houses. And whenever civilians fire upon our troops we will teach them a lasting lesson. If women and children insist on getting in the way of bullets so much the worse for the women and children." There it is in black and white in "Fighting in Flanders" (Scribner's).

Hamlin Garland is again a westerner. He is spending the summer at his homestead in Wisconsin. His "home for good," though, is in New York. Since "The Forester's Daughter" (Harpers) he hasn't published a book, but one is in the making, it is said.

Ruth Kedzie Wood, the author of tourists' books on California, Russia, Spain, Portugal, and the maritime provinces, has, in recognition of her valuable contributions to the literature of travel, just been made a fellow of the Royal Geographical Society of Great Britain, an honor infrequently bestowed upon women.

Irvin S. Cobb is almost well, and up to his literary tricks again. Somebody tells this story about his articles on the great war published in "Paths of Glory" (Doran). The family of a Connecticut judge are devoted readers of his and the old colored mammy in the family must have picked up a copy of the book. When the judge happened to ask her how long she thought the war would last she promptly said: "Jedge, dat wah gonna last jes' three years." "How'd you find that out?" the judge asked. "De king o' Europe done told Ty Cobb."

Compton Mackenzie is at Capri convalescing. He entered the king's service in India shortly after the war began, but the climate didn't agree with him and he was obliged to go back home. He's a determined patriot, though, and as soon as the doctors give their permission he is going back into the service.

Prof. Kuno Francke, curator of the Germanic museum of Harvard, has compiled a little book called "A German-American's Confession of Faith" (Huebsch), in which he has gathered papers and addresses of importance from the hyphenated citizens' point of view. It is most interesting to those who wish to understand the attitude of the thousands who find admiration for Germany and loyalty to America compatible. Prof. Francke is indisputably the leading German-American citizen of our land, and his confession of faith may be taken as typical.

An unique tribute was paid to Thomas Hardy in an exhibition given at the Washington branch of the New York public library, consisting of "sketches, photographs, portraits, autographs, and books relating to Thomas Hardy and the scenes of his novels in Wessex."

For those who hope to visit the Yellowstone this summer, Gen. Hiram Chittenden's "The Yellowstone National Park" (Stewart & Kidd) will be a friend indeed. The book is a standard, and each revised and enlarged edition finds friends awaiting it. Gen. Chittenden was for many years in full charge of the road building of the park, and his book is not only authoritative but most interesting.

Roland G. Usher's "Pan-Americanism" (Century) has been adopted as required by Swarthmore college and the Iowa State Agricultural college.

Word from Henry Sydnor Harrison comes in a letter written from Dunkirk to an American friend. He went, you remember, to London in February. He stayed there for a while, perfecting his French under the tutelage of a Belgian refugee and learning to drive a motor. He has never, oddly, seen a copy of his latest novel, "Angela's Business" (Houghton-Mifflin). A part of the letter is appended:

> A little while after I arrived in Paris I secured a job as ambulance orderly with the American ambulance at Neuilly. I hung around nearly two weeks with practically nothing to do, and then got a chance to come here with one section which bases at this point. We have ten ambulances, a supply car, and a stripped car, and make a fine showing when we move in convoy. This section probably does more work than any of the four or five others we have out. I expect to have my own ambulance to run after a while, and to see and do a good deal before I come home.
> For a few days we were stationed at Wormhoudt (find it on the map if you can) and were right in the midst of what will undoubtedly prove to be a big historic movement of troops—French soldiers going south as the English (K.'s army) came in to take up the left of the line. I have heard the guns rumbling, too.
> Excuse a short and poor letter. We make our working headquarters in the railroad station and have a shed as big as a hall bedroom to sit in when not transporting malades and blesses. I am sitting there now on a hard bench with no back at a table of dirty bare boards, with people swarming all over me and much noise. I forgot to say that I wear a khaki uniform and would be mistaken (at a long distance) for a soldier.

What Australia likes in the way of fiction is indicated by the books which Harper & Bros. are preparing for their semi-annual Australian publication. For that far away market they are reprinting Zane Grey's "The Light of Western Stars," Fannie Hurst's "Just Around the Corner," James L. Ford's "The Great Mirage," Will N. Harben's "The New Clarion," Margaret Turnbull's "Looking After Sandy," "May Iverson's Career," by Elizabeth Jordan; "The Sound of Water," by Margarita Spalding Gerry; "The Copy-Cat," by Mary Wilkins Freeman, and a second special Australian edition of "The Turmoil," by Booth Tarkington.

Miss Jessie Rittenhouse, editor of "The Little Book of Modern Verse" (Houghton-Mifflin), has been asked to deliver a course of lectures next year at Columbia university on "Modern American Poetry." Miss Rittenhouse is at work on a new anthology which is promised for fall publication.

Speaking of the concrete construction of the Blenheim, Thomas A. Edison said, "It is the coming construction for all great buildings. It won't bend, it won't break, and you couldn't burn it if you tried."
Marlborough-Blenheim,
ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.
THE LEADING RESORT HOUSE OF THE WORLD
Capacity 1100 American and European Plans
The great essential of a resort hotel, as distinguished from a city hotel, is ample public space devoted to the use of its guests, in the form of bright and airy Exchanges, Lobbies, Parlors, Galleries and Solariums, affording pleasing vistas and beautiful promenades, the whole combining into a harmonious vision of grandeur and beauty, while replete with the cozy group seclusions of home, and yet affording full view of the pleasing panorama of the resort life. In this essential the Marlborough-Blenheim stands without an equal in Atlantic City or elsewhere.
Its "Ownership Management," while accounting for its unique reputation, is a guaranty of the high character of its patronage and the unexcelled quality of its service and cuisine. It employs only white service in both its American and a la carte dining rooms.
It makes a specialty of its high-class music every evening throughout the year, with special Sunday night solo features. Romani, the world's highest Tenor, of Venice, is engaged to sing at frequent intervals during July, August and September.
Atlantic City, with its only real competitor (Europe) this year impossible, is offering unusual attraction and entertainments. Two flying boats are daily sources of interest. Two golf courses, the Yacht Club, the fishing fleet and the wonderful bathing beach attract their respective devotees, while the pier amusements, the Boardwalk, the fine motor roads and the splendid hotels and restaurants, afford enjoyment to all. There is only one Atlantic City, and this summer it is particularly attractive. Write for illustrated booklet and rates.

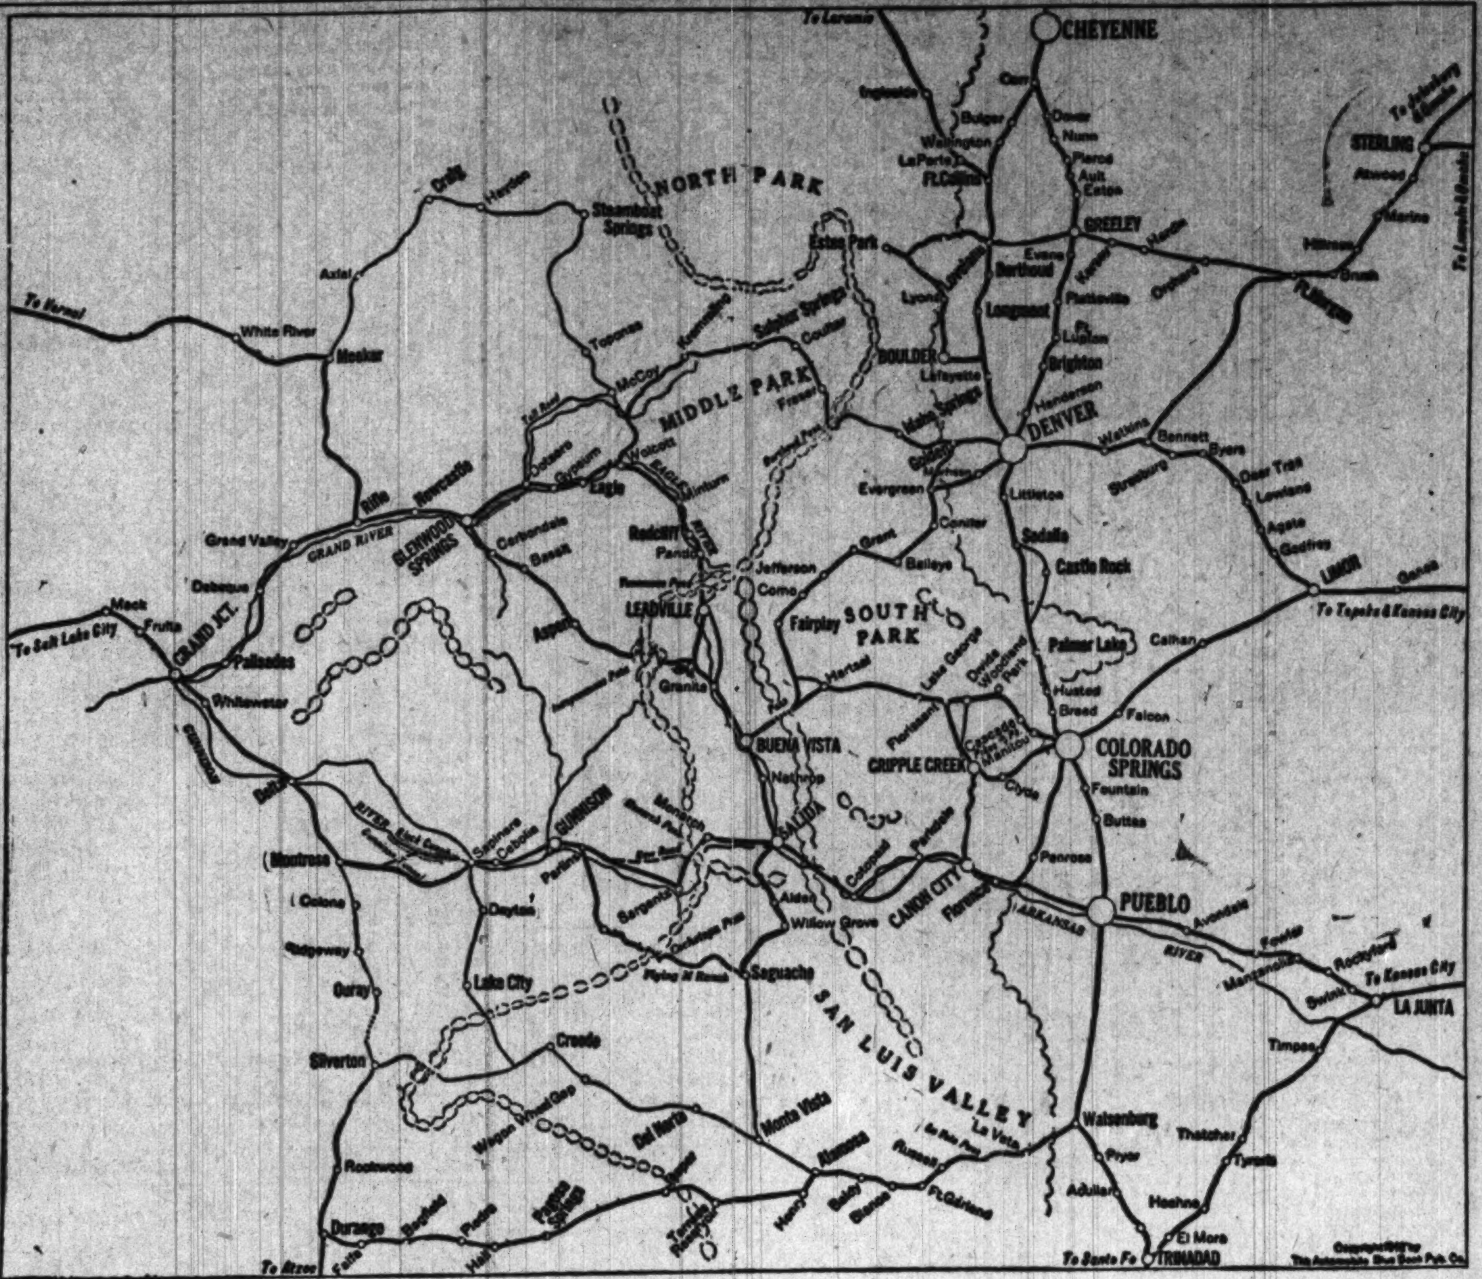
BEST AUTO ROUTES FOR TOURING COLORADO.



By L. M. Steffens.

COLORADO, which has attracted many automobile tourists in the last year, now offers new opportunities for the motorist to approach the mountains, and natural parks by the building of good roads through the mountains. Road building has been aided extensively by the state and the civic organizations of Colorado, and this year is marked for the construction of many roads in the mountains that are impassable at the present time.

It has been considered a great undertaking to invade Colorado by automobile, for the roads were poor and there were no markings giving directions to and from the various towns. These features have been eliminated and the state is mapped and logged by guide books and the roads have signs giving the directions and mileage.

A trip which will be of great interest to tourists who go to Denver is the one between Denver and Colorado Springs. This road follows closely to the base of the front range of the Rocky mountains, and some of the finest views of Pike's peak are seen.

Leaving Denver this route goes south through Petersburg to Littleton. At Littleton the largest and greatest game preserve in the world is located. Leaving Littleton go south through Sedalia Castle Rock, Tomah Station, Larkspur. Greenland, Palmer Lake, Monument. Pikeview, and Colorado Springs.

From Colorado Springs there is a private automobile road to Crystal Park. Tourists should not attempt to traverse this route without procuring tickets from the Crystal Park association, which has charge of all the privileges on this road. This is an interesting trip and an ascension of 2,700 feet is made in about nine miles. The road follows along the mountains and there are many places where the views of the road ahead at the turns are obstructed by the rock formation in the mountains, so great caution should be used while driving. The altitude of Crystal park is 8,745 feet above the sea level, and scenic wonders of the world are viewed from this point.

Another trip which has many interesting and scenic features is from Colorado Springs to the Garden of the Gods. This wonderful park is reached by road through Colorado City and then north to the park. The Garden of the Gods covers an area of several hundred acres in which there are many fantastical shaped formations of red sandstone. Two large rocks form the gateway and they rise to a height of 300 feet.

Glenwood Springs, which is the objective point for the majority of the tourists who are in Denver, can be reached by two routes. The first route goes west through Golden and Idaho Springs, and then it crosses Berthoud pass (elevation 11,306 feet). From Berthoud pass go northwest through Fraser, Coulter, Sulphur Springs, Kremmling, and Wolcott, where the road parallels along the Grand river through Eagle, Gypsum, Dotsero, and Glenwood Springs. This road is a fairly good mountain road and there are some of the steepest and longest grades in the state to be encountered.

Although this route is a shorter way to go to Glenwood Springs the average tourist will go the second route, which leaves Denver and goes south through Littleton, Sedalia, Palmer Lake, Husted, and Breed to Colorado Springs. From Colorado Springs journey west through Manitou, Divide, Florissant, Lake George, Hartsel, Buena Vista, Granite, and Leadville, and then the route crosses the Tennessee pass through Pando, Redcliff, Mintum, and Wolcott, where the first route is met leading to Glenwood Springs.

The second route, which goes from Colorado Springs to Buena Vista, is over the Pike's Peak Ocean to Ocean Highway and some of Colorado's most wonderful mountain scenery is viewed and for twenty miles Pike's peak is the most prominent feature of the landscape.

The department of the interior will permit automobiles to enter Yellowstone National park on and after Aug. 1, 1915, under appropriate rules and regulations. All the traffic in the park will be required to travel in one general direction in making a circuit of the park. The automobiles will also have to leave before the stages in the morning and evening from the different entrances and intermediate stations in the park. Schedules on which the cars will be required to run in will be constituted as part of the regulations.

Automobile tourists have been barred in the past from entering Yellowstone park, and the fact that the department of the interior will now allow the tourist to invade the park will encourage western travel. Sign posts giving directions to the many interesting points of the park will be constructed on all the roads, which will eliminate confusion while traveling.

W. Matson of Denver, Colo., drove his automobile from Denver to Chicago over the Lincoln highway and he gives an outline of the condition of the roads at the present time. He says:

"Leaving Denver, we went north through Henderson, Brighton, Fort Lupton, Platteville, and Evans, where we took the cutoff to Kersey and then continued east through Hardin, Orchard, Fort Morgan, Brush, Hillrose, Merino, Atwood, and Sterling. The roads were in fairly good condition all the way from Denver to Sterling, considering the rainy weather of the last few weeks. Two miles south of Sterling the road, which is dirt, was in poor condition and we had to journey cautiously slow, for the mud was practically bottomless.

"From Sterling we drove northeast through Crook, Sedgwick, Ovid, Julesburg, Big Springs, and Ogalla, where we followed the Platte river to North Platte. This dirt road was in fairly good condition, for the sun had dried the roads. Leaving North Platte, we had a hazardous trip to Kearney, Neb., for the roads were under water and the bridges were out, therefore it was necessary to make many detours. At Lexington the streets and roads looked like lakes and all of the low land was under water. The roads remained in this condition for several days on account of the ditches being clogged with brush, which dammed the water and caused it to flow in the roads and fields. The bridge at Grand Island was out and the conditions were the same to Columbus. From Columbus we had clear sailing to Omaha.

"We left Omaha and followed the Lincoln highway through Denison, Jefferson, Boone, Marshalltown, Cedar Rapids, and De Witt, and had no trouble in following the route and the road conditions were fairly good. Leaving De Witt our intentions were to follow the Lincoln highway to Clinton, but the markings of the roads were indistinct and we had quite a difficult time in finding our way.

"Leaving Clinton, we followed the Lincoln highway throuugh Sterling, Dixon, Rochelle, De Kalb, and Geneva. The roads were in excellent condition and we made fast progress all the way. From Geneva we followed the St. Charles road to Chicago."

Automobile Exports Increase Over Last Year Despite War.

WHILE sales of automobiles at home have been phenomenal this season, exceeding expectations of the manufacturers and breaking all previous records, the foreign sales, although relatively small in comparison, have increased in greater proportion, being more than 68 per cent greater for the ten months ending April, 1915, than in the corresponding period a year ago.

The exports for nine months ending with March last almost equaled in value the exports for the entire year 1914. This means that the first three months of 1915 sales almost equaled those of the first half of 1914, as shown by comparison of the government reports made by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce.

So far this year the exports have increased at the rate of more than $1,000,000 a month. In April last 2,230 commercial cars, valued at $5,240,481, and 3,078 passenger cars, valued at $2,804,741, were exported, making a total of $8,045,222 for the month. This compares with the total of $2,833,154 in April, 1914.

During the ten months ended with April there were exported 8,580 commercial vehicles, worth $23,977,968, and 14,641 passenger cars, worth $12,356,472, making a total of $36,334,440, as against $21,598,810 for the corresponding ten months a year ago.

For the first time since the war broke out the exports of passenger cars have overtaken and passed those of last year, the foreign shipments in April being $44,263 in excess of the same month last year.

Motor vehicles now predominate on the country roads of the Milwaukee district, according to the census taken in 1914 on the main roads leading out of Milwaukee, compared with the census taken in 1911, as given in the last report of the county highway commissioner, H. J. Kuelling of Milwaukee county, Wis.

On Aug. 30 last, between 7 a. m. and 10 p. m., 1,378 motor vehicles passed the counting station at the same point where only thirty-nine passed on two successive days in October, 1911, between 5 a. m. and 12 p. m. Twenty-nine motor trucks were counted at this station on Sept. 3, as against only three on two days in 1911.

Last year's census shows the immense change that has occurred in road traffic. On the Blue Mound road, Sunday, Aug. 30, 1914, 2,961 motor vehicles and fourteen horse drawn vehicles passed the counting station.

On Thursday, Sept. 3, 1914, 3,500 motor vehicles and 514 horse drawn vehicles passed on the Janesville plank road in twenty-four hours. The following day on the Green Bay road 620 motor vehicles and 383 horse drawn vehicles passed in twenty-four hours.

Such figures furnish ample justification for the policy of the Milwaukee county commissioner in adopting concrete as a paving material.

By announcing for 1916 a seven passenger forty horse power four at $885, and a seven passenger fifty horse power six at $1,050, Studebaker has once more startled the motoring public.

That these are high grade cars in every essential will be evident from the most superficial examination, and the specifications as given indicate that the quality is even higher than with last year's cars. They show that finer steels have been used; that the upholstery is of the highest grade of leather; that the finishing operations have been increased to twenty-five in number, while numerous other details of manufacture are still further indicative of quality.

Studebaker has adhered to its customary lines, simply improving them in some slight details that add to effect. The line of the hood melts into the cowl, and the cowl itself has been made longer. The crown fenders are of a deeper design than ever and cling more closely to the curves of the wheels, and the lines of the entire car flow in unbroken curves from the radiator back to the tail lamp. Grace is the dominant note of the whole design, and, while the new cars are larger than ever and more massive in looks, they are among the handsomest cars that have ever been produced.

One of the notable features of the cars is the new unique arrangement of the seats. The driver's seat, for example, i[s] shaped so that both the driver and the passenger riding with him have separate seats. This is a change that owners who drive their own cars will greatly appreciate. The tonneau is roomier than ever and the auxiliary seats are of entirely new design, developed by Studebaker within the last year. Instead of folding back against the sides of the car or up against the back of the front seat, they sink down into recesses in the floor, completely disappearing when not in use. And thus extra room and ease of entrance and exit from the tonneau is provided.

Every amateur and experienced motorist in the country will testify to the difficulty and inconvenience which is occasioned on tours of finding routes through to destinations. At every crossroad there arises the problem of deciding which is the proper direction. This is always a source of annoyance and loss of time, especially if the wrong route is selected. A good solution of this difficulty was advanced recently by Thomas J. Hay, one of the oldest and best known automobile men in Chicago. Mr. Hay outlined his plan as follows:

I appeal to every autoist in Illinois and every one of the hundreds of thousands of others throughout the United States to join in a movement o place markers on country roads just as they are placed on city streets.

Did it ever occur to you while speeding along a country road lined with prosperous farms and comfortable homes that the people occupying them are being cheated out of something to which they are rightfully entitled? Why is the farmer who may be living like a prince denied the privilege of a definite geographical location? Why is the autoist or any one else who is a stranger to the locality compelled to grope his way as if he were in the dark? It is bad enough during the day, but it is a thousand times worse at night.

Most farmers retire early. If the autoist gets lost he must awaken the farmer—something I do not like to do, for I have some consideration for the other fellow. It is not right, nor is it fair, either to the autoist or to the farmer. Suppose, instead of the foregoing, we had a condition like this:

The autoist is overtaken by night. He reads a name on a sign post and finds that he is on the De Soto road. Driving ahead a short distance to the first farmhouse, he reads the number on the gate post, 16400. He consults his map and like a flash knows he is on the De Soto road at a point close by the Cornwallis road.

Every one of our roads should have a definite marker at every cross road. Every road leading in and out of Chicago should have the same markers.

Coöperation such as I have described would make touring 100 per cent more pleasant than it is now. The autoist needs it, the farmer needs it, Uncle Sam needs it, and the business man needs it, consequently the sooner we get together on a working basis the better for all concerned.

The Maxwell company will establish and maintain an engineering laboratory at the Chicago Speedway. Its staff will go to work to systematically develop materials and details of design it has never before been able to test by the Chicago standard. This laboratory will have at its command a chance to abuse motors to the limit. Its results are sure to be both spectacular and practical.

Vice President and Advertising Manager Artemas Ward Jr. has been elected president of the King Motor Car company of Detroit. Secretary and Treasurer F. A. Volbrecht has been elected vice president and general manager and will also continue as treasurer. This announcement was made in Detroit at a dinner when J. G. Bayerline officially stated that he had resigned the presidency of the King Motor Car company to give his undivided attention to other duties which have been formulating for some time. It was with regret that the resignation was accepted.

Harry A. Lozier is ready with some preliminary information concerning his new car, which will soon be on the market. Mr. Lozier's new undertaking is a twelve cylinder car for $1,750. The name selected temporarily is the H. A. L., and this may or may not be adopted permanently. The H. A. L. in design, type of motor, lines, and weight represents Mr. Lozier's own ideas of the latest construction and the best practices in the light of present development and he states that his new car will make its claim for recognition on quality and strength as well as design and type.

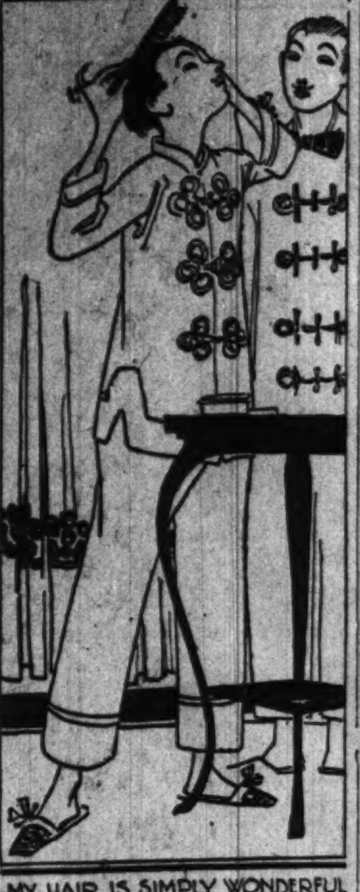
Girls, Here's How He Grows That Lov-al-ly Pompadour.

By Gordon Seagrove.



MY HAIR IS SIMPLY WONDERFUL

IT was midnight—the hour when Wilson avenue bon vivants seek sleep in order that the ardors of the day to some may not make inroads on their beauty and leave it tarnished for the night.

Inside their room Clarence and Hubert were making ready to retire. It had been a wonderful evening. Three new ones had "fallen for them." And now they were making ready for other conquests on the morrow.

They were both young and as clean limbed as the best fiction hero ever written. Before one long cheval glass Clarence stood, his delicate hands clutching a comb. On the opposite side of the room before another glass stood Hubert. They looked very winsome there, in their robes de nuit.

Gently, but expeditiously, they took down their pompadours. Then with graceful movements each began running the combs through his hair.

◆

"One hundred strokes—no less," murmured Clarence.

"It's an awful lot of work," returned Hubert with a moue of annoyance, "but really it's worth it. My hair is simply wonderful."

"Yes," answered the other, as he dipped the comb in the water and laid the glistening hair back with its moist edges, "I heard Gertrude speaking of it tonight. Dolly spoke of mine, too."

The conversation stopped. They were thinking of lunch money. Persistently, however, they continued the exact brushing of their locks. Finally they stopped; not a hair was out of place, not a horrid angle was visible—only graceful sloping areas of hair forming perfect pompadours.

-SLIPPED IT ON---

"The caps, Hubert," Clarence spoke hurriedly.

From beneath the bed Hubert drew two small skull caps. One was yellow, the other white. With great care each slipped one on over his beloved pompadour, pulled it down, and fastened the rubber under his chin.

◆

They nodded a good-night to each other and tumbled into bed. They lay there like two innocent children, a smile on their faces—tomorrow—tomorrow—they would awake with perfect pompadours.

And that is how the pompadour cap is put on.

Girls who have invoked the aid of hairdressers sometimes in vain have often wondered, not without awe as they beheld the pompadour on many an admirer, how he did it. It was really quite wonderful, they thought, that beauty could be made from such tricky obstinate stuff as hair. And some of them, less discerning, fondly imagined in their simple girlish way that pompadours "just grew."

But they don't, girls. They do not, indeed! They are cultivated with a pompadour cap which is applied while the hair is wet and freshly parted and which is allowed to stay on all night. Then in the morning the cap is removed, and lo—the pompadour—sleek, glistening, beautiful—adorable!

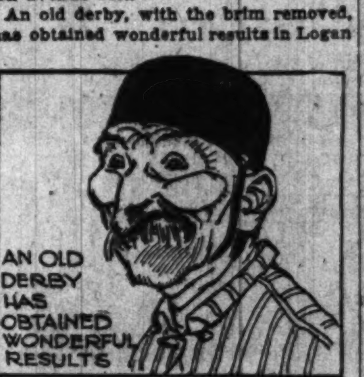
No young man need languish in homely discontent simply because he has no pompadour cap. While not on sale—the rage for them is just developing—they may be made from bits of old household junk at small cost.

The large end of a silk stocking cut off and sewed in circular form finds great popularity on the north side, in the Wilson avenue belt.

An old derby, with the brim removed, has obtained wonderful results in Logan square, and some of the poor working men, who earn only $4 a week, find that in the absence of anything more expensive, a handkerchief or a good serviceable bath towel will do the work as well as anything.



AN OLD DERBY HAS OBTAINED WONDERFUL RESULTS

On the Midway, the regulation wool stocking cap, cut to small size, is reported a wonderful success. Don't be discouraged, boys—mother's old stocking will save you.

You can be beautiful. Never mind keeping the corners of your lips up.

Save your stockings!

Vaudeville Wit.

McVICKER'S.

Bowen and Bowen:

"What do you do for a living?"

"My wife takes in washing."

"I wonder if I know your wife."

"She was one of the Berry sisters."

"Which one?"

"Huckle."

"I'm not feeling well today."

"Here's some medicine, mum. Take a dose at 8 o'clock."

"Yes."

"And if you're not dead at 9 take another dose."

"I've a great mind to give you a job. I'll give you work if you can show me a reference from your last employer."

"Sure I can. Here it is."

"This letter says that you're a low down, lying, drunken thief, and that——"

"Hold on. I gave you the wrong letter. That must be the one my wife wrote to her mother and gave me to mail. Here's my reference."

"Why, this reference is dated 1872."

"That's the last time I had a job."

MAJESTIC.

[The Langdons.]

The girl (to waiter): I think I'll have some chicken.

The chauffeur (to waiter): How much is chicken?

Waiter: Why, it all depends. It ranges in price according to the size. The larger the chicken the more expensive.

Chauffeur: I think I'll have an egg.

Girl (to chauffeur): I also believe I'll order some game. Do you like game?

Chauffeur: Yes, marbles. When I get real reckless $1.50 don't last me six months. I'm merely a chauffeur as a side line. I'm really a detective. I'm working on a case right now. In fact, I've only got three bottles left.

Chauffeur (to waiter): What's that?

Waiter: Champagne.

Chauffeur: Who ordered champagne?

The girl: I did.

Chauffeur: Who's going to pay for it?

The girl: Us.

Chauffeur: Us? The S is off.

Think what an automobile top must withstand:

Sun, wind, rain, snow, folding, misuse

The top material probably gets harder service and less attention than any other part of the car.

A Genuine

Pantasote

top is built to withstand these things—to retain its newness and preserve the beauty of the car—and to provide perfect, leakproof shelter.

Genuine Pantasote needs no explanation to the man who has had experience with it and other top materials.

SALESMEN—ADVERTISING AND ART Salesmen, attention. Listen. Conservatively speaking, here is one of the greatest advances ever made in either of these broad fields. Here's what we do: Reproduce any painting, even a masterpiece, perfectly. Every color, shade, effect, even checks on the canvas, duplicated so the difference in appearance, even to the touch, as well as sight, is imperceptible, even to an expert, upon the closest examination. Remember that this isn't a cheap imitation, but an exact, absolute reproduction. Samples now ready for your inspection include 300 old masterpieces. Can you realize what this proposition means in the advertising field when, in quantities, we will duplicate any painting in competition with lithography—art work practically sells at the price of chromos. All work furnished on canvas. Samples have been held up by customs officials, who do not hesitate a moment on the finest and most expensive reproductions heretofore offered. If you are out of town, sample prepaid for $3. [State nature of subject desired.] Your money back if you want it, or if you can duplicate it for ten times our price. Big and quick money can be made with our selling plans in both advertising and art fields. Open Monday. ART MASTERS' SOCIETY, 75 E. Van Buren-st., Chicago.

DO YOU KNOW LA GRANGE?

La Grange is Chicago's most beautiful and exclusive suburb of about eight thousand souls, who pride themselves on living in a community of beautiful homes with large lots, with a superabundance of flowers, shrubs, and mature shade trees. All improvements known to mortal man are in this ideal place for homes. La Grange schools, clubs, churches, libraries, and golf links go to make up a place that exactly pleases the tastes of the most critical home buyers. La Grange's growth has been slow, constant, and substantial, just the kind of a suburb which pleases those of refined and cultured tastes.

WE HAVE BOUGHT

the only remaining tract of land in La Grange of 44 acres, which is 84 feet above Lake Michigan, subdivided it, and are now putting in improvements so much better than anything there that it will be superior in every detail to any subdivision ever put on this or any other market. It will be known as the DE LUXE ADDITION TO LA GRANGE, containing 100 exclusive lots for 100 exclusive families. Improvements of the very highest class, such as the best boulevard pavement, cement curb and gutter, wide cement sidewalks, shade trees, hedge, and shrubbery on every lot and parkway; small parks and pergolas at street ends; 40 foot building line, making this the ne plus ultra of home surroundings. Lots are from 80 to 110 feet frontage and all lots are 150 feet deep—no alleys. Water, sewer, gas, electricity, all improvements in and paid for by us. No special assessments against this property. Only one residence on one lot will be allowed and restricted to cost not less than $5,000. No flats, no stores allowed. The price of these lots only $30 to $50 a foot. A very handsome booklet is now being made up and will be mailed on application. Transportation, C., B. & Q. R. R., 62 trains daily, 25 and 30 minutes to city; also electric car service. Get off at Stone Avenue Station, La Grange, go three blocks south and two blocks west to our office, which is in the center of the subdivision. The manager of this department, Wm. Beamer, will be glad to answer all inquiries by phone, letter, or call, and it will be his pleasure to accompany any one interested in this property.

FOR SALE—
OHIO RIVER FARM.
635 acres bordering on Ohio river, 14 miles from Paducah. The word Ohio river land should be enough to say, as these lands are known all over the country for their high productive qualities. About 500 acres of this farm subject to overflow, the remainder hill land, partly in an open walnut and poplar grove, with blue grass. The overflow land is not flat; it lies slightly rolling to almost level with 4, 6, 8, and 12 inch tile in the low places, which allows these parts to dry out as rapidly as the higher, and puts the drainage beneath the surface. The production per acre is: Corn, 75 to 100 bushels; wheat, 20 to 40 bushels; oats, 50 bushels; alfalfa, one ton per cutting, 5 cuttings per season. All other crops wil grow as well. County road runs through the farm and will be rocked this year. Two story frame residence, large stock barn, stock scales, 170 ton concrete silo, good tenant house with outbuildings. This is as good land as that sells for $100 and $200 per acre. Price for a quick sale, $45 per acre, one-third cash, balance to suit purchaser.

BIG LAND OPENING

At $9 Per Acre
On July 6th Only.

SWIGART'S NEW DICKSON TOWNSHIP TRACT—5,000 ACRES in Manistee Co., Mich.—at half their market value for this excursion only. Nothing for sale until excursion people arrive on ground. Every one has equal chance of selection. No sale less than 40 or more than 160 acres.

$50 down, $7.50 monthly on each 40 acres, or annual payments, or 5 per cent off on sales for all cash. None of the land will be offered again at this low price after excursion leaving our Chicago offices Tuesday, July 6th, at 11:30 a. m. Entire expense from Chicago and return, including railroad fare, board, Pullman berth, etc., $15.50.

We have arranged for a special train for this big event, which will be conducted like a government land opening, without partiality or favor, but with equal opportunity to each and every excursionist.

Write today or call tomorrow for map-circular giving all conditions of this opening.

Also literature describing these choice general farming and fruit lands, well adapted for stock raising, dairying, poultry, truck, etc.; near railroads and good towns and handy by boat or rail to markets of Chicago, Grand Rapids, and Detroit. The lands adjoin a developed farm district.

We stake our reputation on the statement that this is a rare and genuine bargain. Don't misjudge value from this special one-time-price offer. The lands are some of the best quality in Manistee county and are well drained, no swamps, and can all be cleared and put under cultivation of farm machinery.

This great and popular sale will demonstrate why the Swigart organization has stood for so many years and will continue to stand as the great medium through which men of moderate or limited means can acquire self-sustaining, money-earning farm homes.

With the return arrival of the excursion train in Chicago this sale will be closed and the price of any remaining lands raised in accordance with values. We expect practically every 40, 80, 120, and 160 acre piece to pass, in the two days' trip, into the hands of men, the great majority of whom will proceed promptly to transform their land into fully improved farms. This is an opportunity of a lifetime for the wage earner, farm renter, or farm hand to get a Farm Home. It is a one-event opportunity which will not knock at your door a second time. Think of it! Only $360 for 40 acres! The time is short, so you must act promptly. Office remains open Monday, July 5.

George Swigart
OWNER,
1249-50 First National Bank Bldg., Chicago.

SPECIAL VALUES NOW.

A rebuilt Cadillac is superior to any new car at the same price. They are the truest values on the street. By rebuilt we mean that the cars have been taken entirely apart, each part examined, and, if necessary, replaced by a new part made at the Cadillac factory; the entire car repainted and refinished like new; all equipment put in first class condition—the whole car, in fact, carefully reconstructed until it is good as new in every detail.

We offer Cadillacs exclusively, as we do not accept other makes in trade. Consequently we are as interested in the performances of these rebuilt cars as we are in new Cadillacs. In actual service values these cars are worth a great deal more than we ask for them, and we usually have a variety of body styles to select from. See them before you buy.

RARE VALUES in Detroit Electrics
PRICES $500 TO $2,100

A GOOD ELECTRIC CAR SLIGHTLY USED is a better purchase than a new one of inferior quality. The Detroit Electric leads all others—in sales as well as in quality. Every third electric sold is a Detroit Electric. These cars are driven by men and women who demand and are used to having the best. Buy an electric car as you would a bond. Study the security back of it.

A CHANCE TO SAVE MONEY.

WE have a number of rebuilt electric cars. All are in perfect running condition and offered at unusually low prices. These cars are rebuilt in our own factory; they have been repainted, equipped with new batteries and tires.

BUSINESS CHANCES.

OPPORTUNITY

Millions of dollars were made by a company through a plan which quickly developed a business whose influence extends throughout the country.

A national organization has been formed to be under the direction of men formerly identified with the old company. The business of this company is of even greater popularity than the one which made millions.

Strong banking arrangements have been made and a national advertising campaign will be inaugurated at an early date.

The nature of the business is such that branches may be established in all cities having a population of 20,000 or more.

We want energetic, capable business men to take charge of these branches. Territory will be allotted only to men who can make an investment.

Amounts required will range from two thousand ($2,000) to fifty thousand ($50,000), according to population. Sixty-six and two-thirds per cent (66 2-3%) of the investment will be guaranteed in negotiable securities, immediately redeemable.

Conditions will be the same as if you embarked in business for yourself, but in addition you will have the support of a national organization the general success of which assures you profits besides the profits from the territory allotted to you.

This opportunity is without parallel. The chance to earn big money and establish a permanent income would quickly result in the disposition of all territory. If you can qualify write at once.

'CLEAN CHICAGO' CLUB'S SLOGAN

Boy Forms Organization to Wipe Out Deadly Insects.

BADGES TO MEMBERS.

THE TRIBUNE's anti-fly campaign has resulted in the voluntary formation by Michael Sacks, 1009 West Fifty-ninth street, a Chicago boy, of a "Clean Chicago club." Boys and girls between the ages of 13 and 19 may join the organization.

Michael is a working boy with less leisure than boys who can go to school, but the clean city campaign aroused in him the belief that young people should form beneficial organizations as well as their elders for the sanitation of the city.

Enlists Aid of Girl.

He enlisted the aid of Dorothy Lundenberg of 33— North Southport avenue and others in the movement. The idea is to divide the organization into branches, according to districts of the city. Each branch is to have twenty-five members.

The work covers streets and garbage. When a member sees an unclean place it is his duty to notify the owner to clean up. If the owner fails to comply the club member notifies the president of the branch club, who in turn notifies the health department. All members wear a button bearing the words: "Clean Chicago club."

Members Have Badges.

A boy or girl desiring to join the organization must fill out and sign an application, giving name and address and age, parents' approval, and pledges to abide by rules and regulations.

YOUNG WOMAN SEES BABY FOR FIRST TIME; ASTOUNDED

Berkeley, Cal., July 3.—There is a young woman in Berkeley who saw a baby for the first time only a few days ago.

She is Miss Tomsyna Carlyle, 21 years old. After darkness due to blindness at birth Miss Carlyle is able to see today. Her sight is the gift of a woman of means whose name is withheld. This woman was born blind at birth, too, but, her sight having been restored by an operation she has gone of recent years among blind institutions seeking young women afflicted as she was, furnishing money for the operation.

The baby was one of the never-ending series of wonders Miss Carlyle saw after the surgeon's knife brought her from the world of darkness into the world of light. Telling for the first time of her impressions when she saw objects previously known only by the sense of touch or sound, Miss Carlyle said:

"I was on a street car when a woman got on with a baby in her arms. I had never seen one before and did not know what it was. I thought it was a package from which the wrapping had been torn. When the baby moved I was dumfounded. But then I saw its face clearly and recognized the features of a human being. And I knew I was looking for the first time upon one of the most precious things in the world."

U. S. TO LEAD IN EXPORTATION OF DAIRY CATTLE

Chicago Will Be Center of Vast Market of War Stricken Nations Overseas.

American dairy cattle breeders will reverse the tables and export English Guernsey cows to England, Dutch Friesans to Holland, and Jersey cattle to the Isle of Jersey after the great war has ended. That Chicago will become a great center for the exporting of high bred dairy cattle to Europe, heretofore the home of pure bred animals, was predicted yesterday by officers of the National Dairy council.

The organization, which comprises twenty-five branches of the great American dairy industry, is prepared to establish permanent headquarters in Chicago. The move will mark the launching of a nation-wide campaign for the future prevention of cattle plagues such as the hoof and mouth disease and for coöperation with state legislatures in attaining perfect dairy sanitation everywhere.

Permanent headquarters of the National Dairy council will be located in the State building, Fifth avenue and Randolph street. Col. W. E. Skinner, secretary of the body and manager of the annual National Dairy show, will be in complete charge.

United States Will Lead.

"There is no doubt but that the United States will lead in the exportation of high bred dairy cattle after the war," said Col. Skinner. "Up to the outbreak of hostilities we were the greatest importers, but the most valuable herds in Europe have been seized for the exigencies of food supply. The future of the world's dairy industry rests in our hands.

"With even greater zeal than in the past the National Dairy council will coöperate with government bureaus and state legislatures to better precautions for sanitation and health in dairy production. Wonderful strides in sanitary science have been taken to prevent a repetition of the foot and mouth plague and to perfect the restoration of prosperity in districts recently affected.

"The outlook for the dairy industry in the United States is one of unsurpassing prosperity, particularly in view of the fact that European breeders will have to look to us for the replenishing of their herds and foreign markets will eagerly bid for our finished dairy products on a great scale."

All Interests Co-operate.

Dr. H. B. Favill of Chicago is president of the National Dairy council. H. O Alexander is vice president, and R. A. Woodhull treasurer. The executive committee consists of the officers, including Col. Skinner, and the following: George Haskell, H. B. Osgood, W. J. Kittle, and J. W. Knobbe. The board of directors consists of fifty leaders in the dairy industry, two from each of the organizations which make up the national body. All interests are represented, the breeders, milk producers, makers of dairy poducts in all branches, dairy inspectors, and agricultural college instructors.

CANTALOUPE TRUST CASE TO BE TRIED IN FALL.

District Attorney's Office Announces Early Prosecution of Indictment Charging Fixing of Prices.

It was announced by the district attorney's office yesterday that the first prosecution after the summer vacation will be the anti-trust action against the western cantaloupe exchange, the alleged "cantaloupe trust." At the conclusion of the present term of court District Attorney Clyne is planning a trip to Rocky Ford, Colo., and several points in California, where the alleged "trust" is said to have its strongholds.

The indictment under which the exchange is charged with operating in restraint of trade and arbitrarily fixing prices names thirty-five defendants, corporations, copartnerships, and individuals. The arbitrary fixing of prices is said to have been carried to the extent of allowing cantaloupes to rot in the fields to force up the price. The offices of the exchange are in Chicago and Brawley, Cal.

The following Chicagoans are named in the indictment: Frank E. Wagner and William L. Wagner of G. M. H. Wagner & Sons, Charles H. and Charles A. Weaver, L. Bernard Kilbourne, William F. Morpf, and Ira Dodge Hale of C. H. Weaver & Co., and Joseph Friedman of J. Friedman & Co.

BUSHMAN PAROLED, TOLD TO LEAVE SISTER-IN-LAW.

Man Whose Arrest Was Brought About by Wife Pleads Love of Children.

John Bushman, whose wife caused his arraignment in the Morals court Friday because, she alleged, he was living with his sister-in-law, Mrs. Frances Bushman, at 2458 West Van Buren street, was put on probation by Judge Heap when the case was called yesterday.

Bushman testified he had gone to board with his sister-in-law because he could not get along with his wife and because he loved the two children of his brother who died six months ago. He does not love his sister-in-law, he said, but he is fond of the children, especially because he had none of his own.

"I love children, judge," he said. "I can never again live with my wife. She made me lose my last job and she abuses me whenever I am at home."

Hattie and Frances Bushman, the two daughters of Mrs. Frances Bushman, testified that Bushman "conducted himself properly" while at their home.

Judge Heap put Bushman on probation and continued the case until July 30. He ordered Bushman to leave the home of his sister-in-law and have nothing more to do with her.

Minnesotans Elect Officers.

The annual luncheon and election of officers of the Minnesota society of Chicago was held yesterday at the Great Northern hotel. Judge George H. White was reëlected president; Peter J. Dunne, first vice president; J. H. Hanson, second vice president; Edwyfed H. Williams, reëlected secretary, and George A. Hughes, treasurer. Plans were made for the annual picnic.

PRESIDENT MAGNUS FLAWS - CLARA TEIS

THE American flag will be given due prominence tomorrow in the Sane Fourth celebration of the Union Scotch societies who will hold their twenty-fourth annual event at the Riverview park picnic grounds where the committee in charge expects the largest crowd in the history of the organization.

In all of the dancing and piping contests President Magnus Flaws and the committee in charge has asked that the contestants wear a small American flag in honor of the day and their adopted country. President Flaws believes that every Scotch citizen of the United States is a loyal supporter of the stars and stirps. He is shown in the picture showing little Clara Teis, a lassie who will participate in the Scotch dancing contests, how to wear her flag.

A big program has been arranged for the day, including speeches, public dancing, singing of Scotch and American songs as well as a big athletic meet in which many of the famous track men are entered. The Chicago Scotch Piper's band will furnish the music from 11 in the morning until late in the evening. Over 300 have been nominated to compete in the dancing contests.

ROBERTS HELD WITHOUT BOND

Amos Roberts, 9151 South Union avenue, who killed Stanley Hague, his neighbor, last Wednesday night because of the latter's improper relations with his wife, Mrs. Edna Roberts, 19 years old, was held to the grand jury on a charge of murder without bail by a coroner's jury yesterday. He was taken to jail.

Mrs. Roberts screamed hysterically and swooned when the verdict was announced. She was given her freedom as the jurors recommended.

The verdict of the jury was reached under unusual circumstances. The jurors retired to deliberate at 12:30 o'clock. At 1:10 o'clock one of them called Deputy Coroner Michael Walsh into the room and announced that a verdict had been reached.

"What is the verdict?" asked the deputy.

Justified, Says One.

"Justifiable homicide," said the jurors.

"What was the justification?" the deputy said he asked.

"Why, there is no justification so far as I can see," shouted another one of the jurors, the deputy asserted.

"Well, you gentlemen apparently have not reached a verdict then," said Mr. Walsh, and he left.

At 1:35 the six jurors all announced that they had reached a verdict holding Roberts to the grand jury without bail for murder.

Roberts Tells His Story.

Roberts testified that he was 24 years old and that he came to Chicago eight years ago from Marion, Ill. He said he first met his wife in a church on the south side and that they were married after a courtship of eight months. He said the marriage took place in Chicago in December, 1912.

Mrs. Roberts sat a few feet from her husband, weeping, while he gave his testimony. Near her sat Mrs. Hague—the widow—sobbing softly.

"I had known Hague eight months—I believed him to be my neighbor and friend," said Roberts.

"I trusted him—I never suspected anything wrong. Then it all came from the lips of my own wife. She confessed to me that she had had improper relations with Hague on six different occasions. She wept and begged me to forgive her. She swore that it was not her fault—that the man I supposed to be my friend had led her astray. She added that Hague was a desperate man—that he warned her that he would take my life and hers, too if she ever told me what he had done.

Calls Her on Telephone.

"She told me that Hague began by calling her up on the telephone and asking her to meet him at a street corner, saying he had something he wanted to tell her. She went and he led her astray.

"My wife was away from home for a whole week at one time. Last Monday she admitted that Hague had her in a hotel during that time.

"The night of the killing Hague came over to my back yard of his own free will. I asked him to tell me all. He said, 'Hasn't your wife told you?' I said, 'Yes, but I want to hear your story. She told me you forced her to go astray.' He turned to my wife then, and said, 'You lie.' I said, 'None of that. I won't stand for it.' My wife and I then backed toward the porch, and he followed. Once he made a move as if to draw a weapon from his hip pocket. When we reached the porch he shook his fist at my wife and called her a vile name. I thought he had a revolver. Then I shot him."

Woman Tells of Threats.

Mrs. W. A. Denman, 9130 Lowe avenue, was the next witness. She testified that Hague had told her he would kill Roberts.

"One night in May," she said, "Mrs. Roberts remained over night at the Hague home. I told Hague the next day that he had better not do so again; that there might be trouble. He replied: 'There'll be no trouble. I'll kill Roberts.'"

Charles Olson, 9053 South Union avenue, testified that he was sitting on the back porch of his home when the killing happened and saw Hague shake his fist.

U. S. DENIED DISSOLUTION OF ANTHRACITE COAL TRUST.

Judge McPherson of Philadelphia Decides Case in Favor of All Defendants.

Philadelphia, Pa., July 3.—The United States District court in an opinion handed down today by Judge McPherson denied the application of the government to dissolve the alleged anthracite coal trust and decided the case in favor of all the defendants.

The court held that the Reading holding company, the principal defendant, did not violate the commodities clause of the interstate commerce act and that phase of the government's suit was dismissed.

The court divided the defendants into two groups, namely, the Reading company and the Lehigh Coal and Navigation company group. The only connection between these two groups and affiliated concerns, the court found, is an agreement entered into between them in 1871.

The court held that this agreement does not violate the law and therefore the Lehigh Valley group of defendants need not be further considered. The government, however, is allowed to proceed against the group in another suit.

FAKE JOB AGENT DRAWS HEAVIEST FINE LAW ALLOWS.

Judge Tells Man Who Fleeced Italians and Failed to Make Good He Regrets Light Penalty.

Michael Massaro, operator of an employment agency at 660 Milwaukee avenue, was fined $25 and costs yesterday on each of two charges of taking money from job hunters without supplying the jobs. More than 200 Italians who are said to have given Massaro money for jobs which they have not received crowded the West Chicago avenue courtroom, where the case was tried before Judge Martin.

Two weeks ago Massaro pleaded guilty to the two charges and promised Judge Martin that he would pay back $180 to the job seekers. Massaro paid $80 immediately and promised to pay the remaining $100 yesterday, but was unable to do so.

"I can only fine you $50," Judge Martin said," as the police only booked you on two charges. I cannot fine you even as much as you owe your clients. I am sorry that the ordinance does not provide a higher fine."

YULETIDE BOOKS DEAL WITH WAR

Young America's Christmas books and elder America's Christmas books as well are uppermost in the minds of the 150 book publishers who are gathering at the Palmer house and the Congress hotel for their annual book fair. In contrast with the Fourth of July decorations, the bookmen have posted signs reading, "Make This a Book Christmas" in every room occupied by publishers.

War is the theme this year of the newest books for the American youth. Yankee heroes of 17 or thereabouts are depicted fighting with Joffre at the front, aeroplaning through shot and shell, capturing platoons of uhlans single handed, and winning the hands of beauteous French maidens coincident with the gracious acceptance of military awards of valor.

Titles Show Martial Spirit.

The artists are no whit behind the writers in putting the thrill into war stories. It will be an unusual mother who can instill the "I didn't raise my boy to be a soldier" spirit into her boy after he reads one of these books of the military school of juvenile fiction, styled "The Great War Series."

Among the new titles are "The Air Scout," "The Search for the Spy," "Dodging the North Sea Mines," and "With Joffre on the Battle Line."

Ten Thousand Books Shown.

John H. Hopkins of Barse & Hopkins and L. B. Vaughan of Frederick J. Drake & Co. estimated that more than 10,000 books will be on exhibit during the fair, which is an informal function to which book buyers come from all over the country, including New York and other eastern cities, to select their autumn stocks.

Mr. Vaughan stated thot the reading public is evidencing a more serious trend of mind, books of an informative character selling heavily. Publishers generally look for a heavy business in books this year.

Twenty-five of his fellow members of the Indian Hill club, including the officers and directors, entertained Judge Thomas Taylor Jr. at a dinner in the clubhouse on Friday evening in celebration of his reëlection to the Circuit bench. In the afternoon there was a handicap golf tournament for the judicial cup, which Judge Taylor won with accustomed ease. Among those at the dinner were President Douglas Smith, Vice President Robert Stevenson Jr., Secretary Frederick H. Scott, Willoughby Walling, Edward S. Rogers, N. Landon Hoyt, Edwin H. Clark, Cornelius Lynde, and Dr. Ralph Hamill.

GIVE UP YOUR COCKTAIL, SAVE LIFE OF A BABY

Price of One Drink Will Buy Ice Enough to Keep One Infant Healthy.

Think This Over!

Fifteen cents is the price of a cool, refreshing cocktail for a man who is cool and needs no refreshment. It is also the price of enough ice to keep a baby's milk fresh for a week. There are thousands of babies in bitter need of the ice. Are there as many men willing to give up that one cocktail?

There are between 5,000 and 10,000 babies in the several thickly settled tenement districts of Chicago who are today without one of the greatest necessities of their young lives—ice.

The temperature, while not at the scorching point, is above the place where milk can remain fresh for twenty-four hours. It is almost as bad for the baby as if the heat were above the 90 degree mark. Its milk will not remain fresh, and fresh milk means health and even life to those infants.

Contributions have not been forthcoming in a manner inclined to keep the corners of the tenement baby's mouth turned up. The United Charities has reported a heavy amount of illness among babies of "summer complaint," of aching "tummies," of crying infants, and tired mothers.

Many Babies Saved.

There have been hundreds of cases where a small contribution has saved the life of a baby. The infant mortality statistics have been materially affected by the ice which has been bought for babies by readers of THE TRIBUNE.

If you are one of those who think the weather has been cool enough to keep the tenement baby's milk cool and fresh, try an experiment on yourself. Leave your own milk out of the ice box during a period of twenty-frour hours. See if you would like to drink it then or feed it to your own more fortunate baby.

Why not contribute an amount equal to your own ice bill for a week to help some baby, some foreign looking baby perhaps, whose mother is trying hard to make a living to keep her infant from perishing? That baby probably won't know why the world is so much better, but the mother, who has been worried sick, kept up nights with a crying baby and worn out with placing wet rags over the milk bottle in lieu of ice, will know and will thank some man or woman of the boulevards and the "better" residence streets.

No "Overhead" Charge.

There should be no fear that every cent will not be used for baby's ice. There is no "overhead" charge in the distribution of ice. The visitors of the United Charities, making almost daily rounds of the houses where there is need, the Visiting Nurses, the workers of the Infant Welfare association, all give their services in the distribution of the ice.

Remember that the temperature of the tenement is not the temperature of the lake shore. Usually there is no ventilation. Many babies are born and grow to childhood in basements. Many others look out from hot, close, cooking-living-sleeping rooms over a dull gray court, whose monotony is relieved only by clotheslines, windows, and walls. Remember that the baby there needs your contribution, no matter how small it is.

Stars Will Umpire.

One benefit for the babies is a baseball game between theatrical men to be given at the Cubs' baseball park on July 9. The "Maid in America" company will play the "All Over Town" company, and the proceeds will go to the ice fund. Following is the lineup:

"All Over Town" team—Joseph Santley, center field; Johnny Boyle, first base; Richard Taber, left field; Saranoff, third base; Herbert Williams, second base; Walter Jones, shortstop; Roy Atwell, right field; Will Barger, catcher; Will Stewart, pitcher.

The umpires will be Miss Florence Moore and Miss Minerva Coverdale of the "Maid in America" company, and Miss Beatrice Allen and Miss Ruth Randall of the "All Over Town" aggregation. On the afternoon of the game an automobile parade will be held through the loop and to the Cubs ball park, with a band in a tallyho leading. An automobile will stand in front of THE TRIBUNE building Tuesday noon, from which actresses will sell tickets.

MAYOR ISSUES ORPHAN OUTING PROCLAMATION.

Calls on All Owners of Automobiles Who Can Give Use of Machines on July 14 to Speak Up.

Mayor Thompson issued a proclamation yesterday on the eleventh annual outing for orphan children, which is to be held July 14, as follows:

"Whereas, a number of citizens in Chicago have banded together for the purpose of giving to the orphans and crippled children and old ladies who are inmates of institutions in Chicago, an outing,

"Therefore, I, William Hale Thompson, at the request of the Orphans' Automobile Day association of Chicago, proclaim Wednesday, July 14, as the day of the eleventh annual outing, and ask the citizens who have automobiles that will not be in use that day to communicate with the officials of the association [6 East Twenty-fourth street, Calumet 5870] and place their cars at the disposal of the association for this day."

Mayor Thompson issued a proclamation yesterday asking clergymen of all denominations to observe Saturday, July 17, and Sunday, July 18, as Baby Welfare days. Health Commissioner Robertson said he was preparing to furnish to ministers infant mortality data and information as to the care of the baby.

BIG BILL'S BIG MOMENT.

When Mayor Thompson closed his eighteen hour shirtsleeve conference, which brought an end to the street car strike and restored transportation service to three millions of people, he had come upon the greatest moment in his career—up to that time.

What will his future be? Will the mayor go on to other and greater big moments, or will this stand as the high mark of his attainment? The great city of Chicago offers many problems, each an opportunity to the man in the mayor's chair.

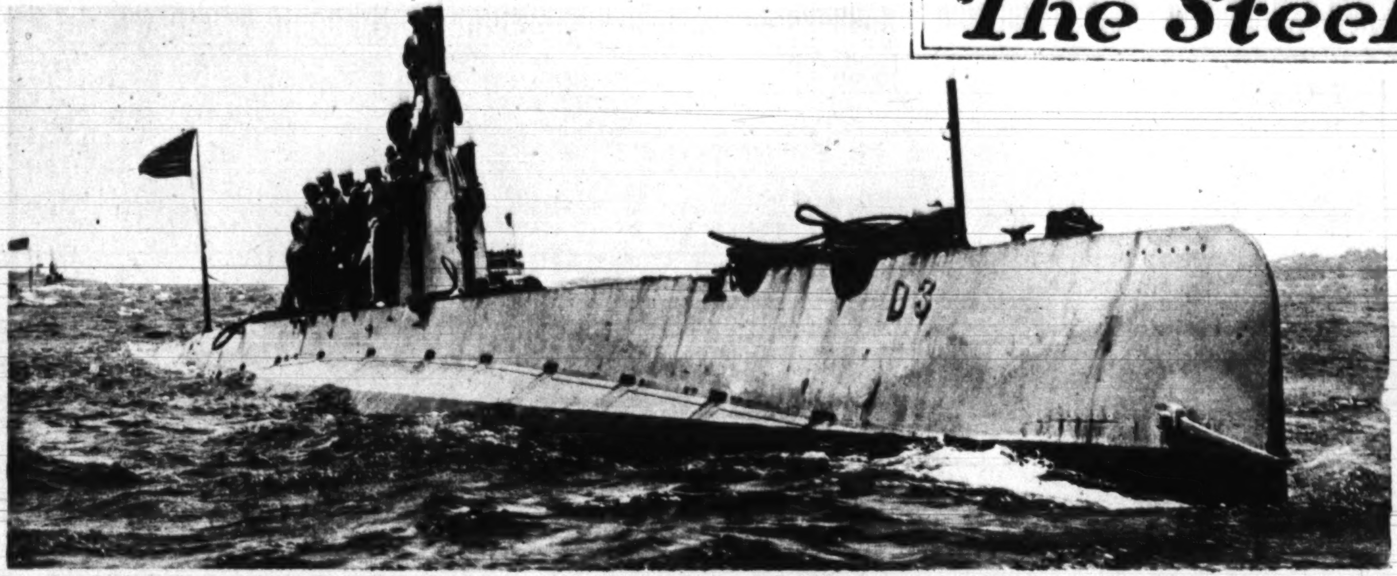
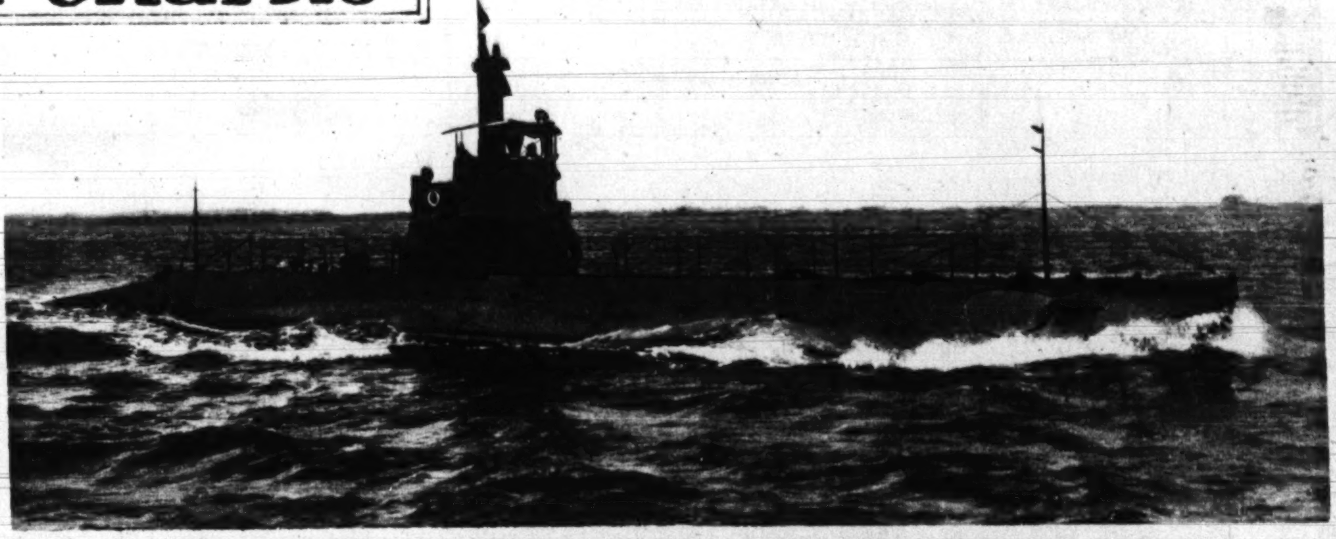
The Steel Sharks





Two United States submarines, the D-3 and the K-6, as they appear when under way on the surface. These vessels are about 150 feet in length and vastly inferior to the best of the German submarines. Both are of the Holland type. The D-3 displaces 345 tons, has 600 horsepower, does 13 knots on the surface, 9 knots submerged. The K-6 displaces 520 tons, has 950 horsepower and does 10.5 knots submerged. However, the naval department is building a class of submarines of 265 feet over all, 1,100 tons displacement, and cruising radius of 7,000 miles. This new type will carry internal combustion engines developing 4,000 horse power.

The U-14 of the German navy. This picture shows how the German designers have given their submarines a more shiplike appearance than those of the United States and the allies. These lines are held to add to the sailing ability of the vessel when cruising on the surface. The U-14 has a displacement of 300 tons, engines of 600 horse power, electric motors of 200 horse power, and a cruising radius of 1,500 miles. And the kaiser has some yet to come that will be about three times as powerful.

The brave Capt. Otto Weddigen and his bride, now a widow. Capt. Weddigen's valor as a submarine commander has gained the special recognition of the kaiser, who has directed that the torpedoes shall be known as "Weddigens" hereafter. Capt. Weddigen went to his death on the famous U-29 after a most sensational career of daring. As commander of the U-9, his first vessel, he sank the British cruisers Cressy, Aboukir and Hogue. He was decorated for valor and was given a cash gift by the Naval League of German Women.

Aeroplanes I

The aeroplane and the submarine have proven the big new weapons of modern warfare. The aeroplane is, however, less a weapon than an additional "eye" for the armies. The whole of military tactics has been reconstructed because of the spying eye of the aeroplane. No longer can great masses of troops be concealed by a screen of cavalry; no longer is artillery to be concealed by a mere range of hills or ordinary earthworks. The aeroplane has done a good deal toward driving the war under the ground and under the sea.

Only the efficiency of the aeroplane and the aeroplane scout has robbed the Zeppelin and other great dirigibles of their forecasted powers of destruction in war.

The aeroplane drivers are among the most spectacular heroes of the war. It was once considered an act of daring merely to fly; now the flyers dare fight battles in the air against their flying foes and to navigate an aerial ocean torn with flying shells.

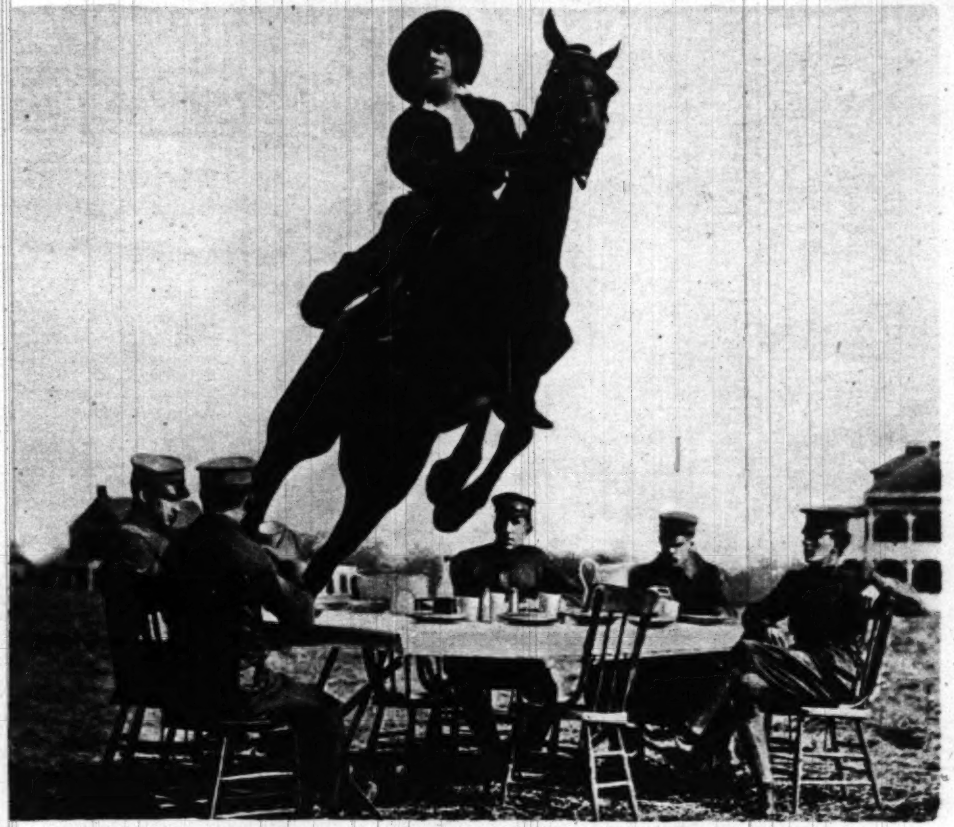
The Winners In the Roto-Photo Contest



She "drops in for dinner." A thriller but also a fake. The fact is the lady was photographed on a loop chimney, the horse at a county fair and the table scene at Fort Sheridan. Which shows that while a camera can't lie, three of them can—when cleverly manipulated.

A "ROTO-PHOTO" CONTEST WITH FIVE DOLLAR PRIZES.

The Rotogravure Department of The Chicago Tribune is conducting a photographic contest open to all photographers, amateur or professional, everywhere.

The contest is for unique and "different" pictures, freak or otherwise. The range of subjects is unlimited, but the pictures must be interesting and unusual. All pictures submitted should be accompanied by enough explanatory matter to complete the story told by the picture. For each picture published The Tribune will pay $5. Also the photographer's name will appear, unless specific request for anonymity is made.

Pictures may be submitted in prints on any photographic medium and in any size. However, contrasty gloss finished paper is to be preferred, and the standard size is 8 by 10 inches. No prints or negatives will be returned. Pictures submitted must be originals, not copies. Every picture published becomes the exclusive property of The Chicago Tribune. Any photographer may submit any number of pictures.
